Buckley has a special interest in establishing a commission. She has cerebral palsy, although a casual observer would be unlikely to notice any disabling condition.

The task force plans to share the information it gathers with the police and fire departments so they can provide appropriate services in emergency situations.

According to Buckley, the new commission already has its work cut out for it-- the task force set a series of goals in addition to the needs survey.

The first goal will be to work toward accessibility of public buildings and facilities.

Cohasset's week

They"ll keep station

After putting an article on the town warrant seeking permission to sell or lease the West Corner fire station, selectmen voted 3 to 2 to pull the article from consideration. Chairman Burtram Pratt and Rocco Laugelle were opposed.

The action came after the sewer commissioners told selectmen they wanted to retain the property for possible use as a backup site for a pumping station.

James Lagrotteria told the selectmen that the assessors also opposed the sale. The assessors believe the town should hold on to the property for access to Strait's Pond.

Laugelle continued to argue for the sale of the property.

"You can't put a pumping station on this piece of property," he said. "It's sitting on ledge and there's a building eight feet away from it."

Laugelle continued, "I'll never live to see the time we're going to have a sewer system going to Hull."

He preferred to have the property sold and the derelict station torn down to preserve the property value of abutters.

Laugelle and Pratt were outvoted by the other selectmen who felt prudence dictated holding onto the property at least for the time being.

Housing board disabled

Following the recommendation of the fair housing committee, selectmen voted to disband the committee with thanks for a job well done.

The selectmen capped that action by reconstituting the committee as a fair housing board that would meet on an "as needed" basis.

The fair housing committee will work with landlords, real estate agents, developers and other groups to promote non-discriminatory selling and rental of housing in Cohasset. The group is also expected to support the development of small, scattered site affordable housing in the town.

Membership on the new committee will be comprised of a member of the clergy, a real estate agent, a member of the town housing partnership, a member of the housing authority and a lawyer.

Selectmen did not make any appointments at the April 2 meeting. They plan to ask members of the erstwhile fair housing committee if they wish to be appointed to the new group first.

No date was set for making the appointments.

New copy deadline

Within the next few weeks, the Cohasset Mariner will be going to fully computerized pagination. New technology is great, but it means a change in the rules.

From here on out, anything submitted for publication must be in by mail, rail or drop-box by 12 p.m. (HIGH NOON) on Mondays. We can not guarantee publication of anything submitted after that time.

All submittals must be typed and include a name and phone number for verification.

Renovation is $396,000

The proposed renovations to the police and fire station is still on target for the budgeted amount of $396,000, according to David Chase of the renovation committee.

Chase told selectmen that he had checked with architect David Hoyt who assured him that the project could still be brought in at that sum.

The renovation is set at the bare minimum acceptable for the needs of the two departments. Among other things, it provides only a minimum of furnishings and does not include new communication equipment.

"Let's get the building done and then look to other town departments that might have unused furnishings," Chase said.

Chase also said that all the wire and conduits would be in place when the department heads know what kind of communication system they want to install.

The budget includes a $25,000 contingency line item that could be used for communication equipment, Chase told selectman Martha Gjesteby in answer to her question.

According to selectmen Gjesteby and Diana Kornet, the police and fire station renovations will be discussed at the first town meeting so voters will have all the information they need when they go to the ballot boxes.

Selectmen, advisors push for override

Selectmen and the advisory committee are working on a list of cuts to be made if the override for the operating budget fails.

Selectmen have balanced the town's operating budget with a combination of free cash and an override of $120,000.

Some selectmen would like to see a line item budget specifying where override monies would go.

According to Selectman Diana Kornet, any list must be purely theoretical because the town has no idea whether state aid payments will be forthcoming.

In an effort to inform voters what will be lost if the override fails, the advisory committee suggested that the following cuts would be likely:

- $ 60,000 from the school budget;
- $40,000 from the road paving budget;
- $10,000 from the sidewalk paving budget;
- $5,000 from the board of health's engineering budget; and
- $ 12,000 budgeted for employee cost-of-living raises. That represents a reduction from a three percent cost-of-living raise to two percent.

The override for the operating budget will add $39 to the property tax bill of a home assessed at $300,000.

Dear Friends,

Three years ago you elected me to serve on the Board of Selectmen, a challenge that I readily accepted.

John Silber lectures on education

Additionally, Silber said the research done in Massachusetts' universities and hospitals results in 177 patents each year. Those patents spawn new industries.

To keep both education and the economy strong, Silber said the United States must encourage the development and leadership of first class intellects over the long haul.

Currently, he is not optimistic about the future of education.

Unless something is done with the primary and secondary grades, Silber said, there will be a continuing decline in the proficiency of incoming college freshmen.

"Freshmen do not write as well because they have not written as much as they used to," he said. "They are deficient in their ability to write, read and conduct an intelligent discourse."

Silber puts the blame on a lowering of the standards expected of students and teachers.

"Public education suffered this worst kind of decay over the last 50 or 60 years," he said.

Silber found proof of the kind of decline he was talking about in the the curriculum of the Chelsea school system at the turn of the century.

At that time, even non-college bound students were expected to take and master four years of English instruction, Latin and two other foreign language, he said.

Silber identified several developments or cultural changes he claimed are propelling the decline.

First on his list is luxury. Americans, he said, have enjoyed unprecedented luxury in the past 50 or 60 years.

"Luxury has never done people any good over the long haul," Silber said.

Cheek by jowl with luxury for condemnation was television.

"The average American watches seven hours of television every day. That's almost a full work schedule," Silber said. He complained young children are watching television so late into the night that they come to school to sleep so they can be awake to watch more television at night.

Silber contended that you can measure the decline in education in the U.S. by measuring the amount of time spent in front of the television.

The quality of moral education in society is also to blame, Silber said.

"By the time a person is 16, he has watched 18,000 murders and 350,000 commercials," Silber said. "The message from the commercials is 'grab all the gusto you can' or 'whatever gives you the most immediate gratification is what is right."

Silber also singled out the decline of the family as a source of educational decline. Television, he said, played a role in the fragmentation of the family.

"Families quit having meals together," he said,"with each person wrapped in his own mental cocoon."

And finally, he blamed the women's liberation movement.

After saying that as a father of six daughters he was pleased that his daughters had a wide range of options and alternatives for developing their intellects and interests, he lamented society "lost our monopoly on the very best and brightest of these women to staff our public schools."

At the same time that women were seeking careers in the wider world, teaching was lowering its standards and not raising salaries in order to draw talented men into the field of teaching.

"The teaching profession is desperately in need of gifted, highly talented, dedicated people," Silber said.

As proof of the lowered standards for entering teaching colleges, Silber said that the combined SAT scores of people entering teaching colleges is 846-- or 60 points below the national average.

How can teachers command the respect of their students if the top 10 percent of students know more than their teachers, Silber asked.

"Respect is based on competence and dedication, not salary," he said.

Competence was a theme that Silber mined several times in the course of his speech.

"Athletics is the only area of endeavor not in decline," he said. "It's the only area where the United States has not turned its back on elitism."

According to Silber, the amount spent on education per pupil is no guarantee of quality.

"Boston public schools spend $8,500 per pupil," he said. "Chelsea only spends $3,800 per pupil. If you exclude Boston's exam schools, the SAT scores of both systems are almost identical."

The quality of the teachers in a school system is the key, he said. They must be held up to public examination.

Among Silber's recommendations for strengthening education is transformation of the family.

"A 13-year-old who becomes a mother is incompetent to mother that child," he said. "We must care for that 13-year-old, and at the same time we must do something for the infant."

Silber supports the notion of an extended school day on a year-round basis beginning at age three to meet the educational and socialization needs of tomorrow's adults.

Silber also proposes changes in the way welfare is delivered in order to reduce the number of children "being created to be neglected."

The alternative, said Silber, is "destroying our future in the crib."

Silber also supports the importance of male mentors, the introduction of foreign language instruction at the pre-school level and moral not part of the existing notice of intent, and if Roy would want to have the corridor dredged, he could add that to the notice or file another notice later.

Waal said the conservation commission would need more information before rendering a decision and agreed to continue the hearing until May 15.

Fritz Pfaffmann of the harbor committee warned that Roy's dock would be very close to a spider dock belonging to the yacht club within federal waters.

He asked if Roy and his delegation would be willing to meet with that committee before the 15th, and they agreed to meet on May 3.

Task force seeks to create commission for the handicapped

Buckley said Cohasset has a head start on that goal since town hall and the local schools all are accessible. The committee would work with businesses, organizations and individuals in a friendly, non-threatening way to help identify impediments to accessibility, methods of overcoming the barriers and possible sources of funding to achieve accessibility, Buckley said.

Encouraging mobility and participation in community life is another goal. The more accessible the community is, the easier it will be to encourage individuals with a disability to participate.

A third goal for the commission will be to increase the supply of affordable housing.

Both state and federal laws mandate that children between the ages of three and 21 must be granted a free and appropriate education. The commission would work with families and the schools to ensure that the promise becomes reality for all disabled children.

Serving as an agent for change by lobbying and advocating for the interests, needs and rights of disabled citizens also would be high on the commission's list of goals.

The committee is also expected to work closely with social service agencies, arts agencies and non-profit groups to make sure that facilities and programs are available to all.

Buckley envisions the commission writing and calling legislators to promote issues of concern for individuals with a disability.

Serving as resource and providing information and referral on disability issues is seen as a vital part of the commission's work.

Buckley expects the commission will establish other goals and objectives as the members get more familiar with the needs and concerns of disabled residents.

To ensure that disabled people are speaking for themselves, the warrant article establishes that "a majority of the members of the commission shall consist of handicapped persons and one of such members be a member of the immediate family of a handicapped person."

Buckley expressed a desire that the commission be responsive to the particular concerns and issues of youths with disabilities. She recommends that the commission have junior members to keep their needs front and center.

Buckley and the commission also want to reach into the wider community by promoting an advisory or friends committee to broaden support and bring other perspectives and expertise to bear on the work of the commission.

She is optimistic that the town will vote in favor of a commission.

It may be instructive to note that some advocates for individuals with disabilities refer to non-disabled people as "T.A.B.s"-- temporarily able bodied.

The theory is that sooner or later everyone suffers some sort of impairment due from age, illness or accident.

Silber lectures on education . . .

Silber gives short shrift to questions about whose morality will be taught.

"I mean the necessity of making decisions and taking responsibility for the consequences of your actions," he explained.

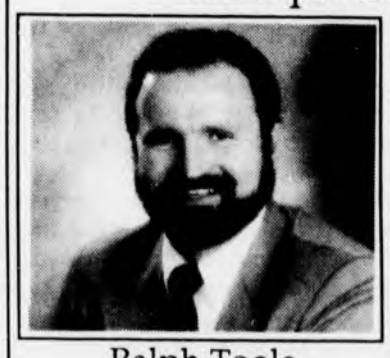
"We must also talk about mortality and the importance of finding transcendent goals and purposes."

In response to questions from the crowd of approximately 200, Silber said he could not speak to Cohasset's educational system because he did not know the particulars. In general, though he rejected as a shibboleth the notion that a low student-faculty ratio resulted in a better education.

Except with very young children, Silber contended that it is better to have a first-rate teacher with 35 to 40 students rather than an inferior teacher teaching 20 students.

Silber also attacked the tendency toward a bloated administrative staff.

On the revenue side, Silber promoted the notion of a business-education partnership. He singled out IBM as an example of a corporation with excellence in in-house education.



He also believes that some adjustment in Proposition 2-1/2 is necessary, particularly for communities that got locked in at a tax rate lower than the maximum permitted when Proposition 2-1/2 took effect.

He also had sharp words for older citizens and childless couples who believe that they are under no obligation to support public education.

"They are badly in need of moral education. We must vote taxes to adequately fund schools," Silber said.

"It is always the obligation of the older generation to take care of the younger. Just as in time the younger generation will be obliged to take care of its elders."

Community Garden Club growing, diversfying

By Rosie Dole
Special to the Mariner

Time was when being a garden club member meant donning a hat and white cloves and sipping tea while discussing what to tell the gardener.

Now, the members of the Community Garden Club balance love for beauty and interest in flower design and horticulture with a strong commitment to their community and the environment.

With 281 members, one of the largest and most active volunteer organizations in town, the Community Garden Club of Cohasset annually spends more than $ 5000, plus countless volunteer hours on town beautification projects, funds raised through the semi-annual house tour and the sale of Cohasset Entertains, Encore, a newly published cookbook. Helen Brady (749-1262) is marketing chairman.

Under the chairmanship of Therese D'Urso, the Club landscapes and maintains the grounds of the community center.

Carolyn May is in charge of landscaping and maintenance of the Lothrop House grounds and Ginny Riley oversees the planting of Constitution Park.

Margaret Cotter and Debbie Cook are chairmen of the nature trail created by the club between the two grade schools, while Regina Schultz manages the creation of "A Garden for Honoring" in the high school Courtyard.

Workshops and programs such as "Christmas at the White House" with former chief White House floral decorator Dorothy Temple and "Bulbs for all Seasons" are offered to the membership for training, education and enjoyment on a monthly basis.

The latter program was presented March 27 by noted horticulturist David Smith of Whiteflower Farms, Litchfield, Conn.

Smith received his practical training in England on the estate of the Earl of Bradford where his father was head gardener.

He has appeared on the Victory Garden with Bob Thompson and lectures extensively throughout the United States. He has served as a judge at many flower shows and has been an award winning exhibitor in major flower shows both at home and abroad.

Blessed with very talented members as well, the Community Garden Club has five master judges, one flower show school instructor, three landscape design critics council members, four life judges, two junior judges and one flower show judge and is presently sending three members to landscape design school and one member to flower show school.

March 27 marked a historical milestone for the club with the installation of its first male member, Gerhard Birmann, an avid gardener and a fancier of African Violets.

We look forward to welcoming many more men to club membership. Sandra Ford is membership chairman.

Editorial

No big deal?

It is interesting that just about everyone you run into in town these days seems to be in favor of the proposed $120,000 Proposition 2-1/2 override.

In the past, there have been a few tussles, although Cohasset was one of the first towns in which voters decided to hike their own taxes beyond the 2-1/2 percent limit in order to maintain town facilities.

Now, everybody's doing it. The folks down south in Scituate just passed a mega-override of $1.3 million, and it appears an $875,000 override proposal in Hingham, as well as three debt exclusion items, have a decent chance of passing.

Is overriding Proposition 2-1/2 getting to be no big deal on the South Shore?

Whatever happened to the taxpayers' revolution? Did it go the way of Michael Dukakis' presidential hopes in 1988?

Granted $120,000 spread across the entire town will be a burden the size of a pea—but there have got to be some princesses in Cohasset!

Presumably, there must be one or two residents of Cohasset who would find this little extra pinch too much a burden to bear...? Maybe it is no big deal. Maybe $120,000 is a small price to pay after all for maintaining the status quo in the schools and in the municipal departments.

And who knows, maybe next year another $240,000 bite wouldn't be so hard to take. By then, of course, the increase in state taxes will have gone through, too. And, likely, there will be a gas tax—no big deal.

But I'm curious. What price is too high to pay to support the supposedly high standard of living we enjoy here as opposed to citizens in other parts of the country?

Selectmen can be proud that the common pond holds water, the Meeting House clock works and there's a new flag. Time to start thinking about a new coat of paint on that shabby flag pole.

Bill would nix deficit

Representative Mary Jeanette Murray has joined 16 other legislators to co-sponsor a bi-partisan bill proposing a plan to prevent future deficits in the state's budget.

The proposal would force Massachusetts to reduce deficits in future years on a quarter-by-quarter basis, rather than allow them to pile-up at the end of the fiscal year.

The plan would not help reduce this year's deficit, but would prevent a similar problem from occurring again next year.

The concept is to provide timely action to address deficit problems. It establishes a procedure to mandate across-the-board budget reductions if the governor and legislature fail to act promptly to reduce any deficit projected in any quarterly report of the advisory commission on revenue estimates.

The proposal, while it mandates "across-the-board" reductions, exempts accounts needed to repay any borrowing in order not to endanger the commonwealth's credit or ability to borrow short or long term. It also prohibits any reduction in local aid to address the deficit.

The bill also provides that if revenues increase above the estimate needed for a balanced budget (either because of improvement in the economy or because of a tax increase), those excess funds would be transferred to the commonwealth stabilization fund.

Money in the fund would be used to offset future deficits. However, any revenue in excess of 5 percent of the total state tax revenues received in that fiscal year, would be returned to taxpayers as an increased level of personal income tax exemption.

Davenport laments empty airwaves

To the Editor (and voters):

I would like to start by saying that I never challenged the three candidates to discuss the issues on television.

I did invite them to a - hopefully - relaxed, definitely friendly, hopefully informative (to voters) and definitely respective to all a time on television to be asked questions by me, by Molly Hochkeppel, and by John Magadieu.

My reason for this is that the night of the chamber of commerce forum, the selectman candidates were left until last and a lot of questions were not asked.

At that time, Wig Pierson was on vacation so I waited until he returned. I called him to see if he was going to have the two local reporters on and, if so, would he consider allowing me also.

He told me he was going to be on alone. I thought that an open discussion forum with back-and-forth debate, but not out of hand, and no 30 seconds to go and stop, would be very informative to the voters, and with questions from the persons who write about them every day, and call-in time also for you, the electorate, would be valuable.

I even thought that the candidates would appreciate the time to air their views!

After leaving cable television on Saturday, March 24, at 11:30 a.m., I passed Burt on his way to town hall. I asked him up front and his first reaction was one of defense, but after some talk and not only given the time of right after the Pierson to Person Show to participate, he said he would think about it and give me an answer later.

I left Burt and went right to the new RTF Station where Jane was campaigning to ask her. In the process of my telling her about talking to Wig first about my possibly being on the panel with Molly and John, I thought she made a very good observation by saying, "Well, you don't have any standing like the reporters" - and I had to agree. But she did agree to do it if the other candidates were willing.

It was harder to find Martha. She was out knocking on doors and I had to wait until dark to call her. When I did reach her, she said that she would not like to do it after the Pierson show because that would be tiring but, again, if the others agreed, she would. This was all on Saturday, March 24.

On Monday, March 26, at the end of the selectmen's meeting, that Chairman Burtram Pratt closed at 10:30 p.m. without asking the press or others if they had questions—all three candidates were present—I asked them if we could agree on a time.

They told me they had agreed not to go on television, that what had been done, what was to be done, and what they had planned to do on their own was more than the voter needed.

Let me just say in closing that it is too bad that all three could not be elected because if they can agree in just 48 hours, that is just the start of what we need.

If they should agree to reconsider and they should agree to do the show, all I ask is 24 hours notice and I would prefer it to be in the evening, and only for call questions; it could be day time. Sample question: If you limit your time to the voters before you are elected, what do you plan after? Thank you.

Local resident,
Robert Davenport

P. S. Jane, I have been thinking of my standing and let me ask: does it help if I am a Cohasset resident, concerned citizen, taxpayer, a person who goes to town meeting and is informed before getting there, and most of all a voter who votes?

Burt, I really don't think it matters now, but I would like to ask you a question - what I do in the evenings and what I ran for in the past has not a thing to do with it - for instance, when I did run against you for selectman, I never asked you why some people call you 0-for-4 and possibly shortly 1-for-6.

Award winner says thanks

To the Editor:

(This is an open letter to the C.H.S. faculty — Ed.)

I would like to express my gratitude to the Daughters of the American Revolution for choosing me as a recipient of the Good Citizen Award.

I will always cherish the honor of being with such an outstanding and worthwhile organization.

I would like to thank the Class of 1990 and the faculty of Cohasset High School for nominating me for this award.

I will always remember the good times with the students and the academic support given to me by the teachers.

Historical society sponsors house tour

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold a spring house and grounds tour of one of the town's great estates, the Dr. John Bryant estate, today named the Bellarmine House, on Sunday, May 6, from 2 to 4 p.m.

By special arrangement with Boston College, owners of the estate, the doors and grounds of this eminent house, of which Henry Hobson Richardson was the architect, will be opened for a tour visit on that afternoon.

Built in 1880-81 for Dr. Bryant, the estate later was lived in by financier Thomas Lawson during the time his "Dreamwold" was being constructed in Scituate.

In 1932, the famous Cohasset seashore estate passed to ownership of Boston College. Since that time it has served as a center for recreation and study by students and faculty of that institution of higher learning.

The site of the estate is Whitehead Point, at Howard Gleason Road, Cohasset Harbor.

Among 19th century American architects, Henry Hobs on Richardson remains one of the best known and most highly respected. Among Richardson's foremost works in this area are the Thomas Crane Public Library in Quincy; Trinity Church in Boston and Seaver and Austin Halls of Harvard University.

Tickets for the historical society's estate tour will be $5 for Society members, $6 for non-members, and may be obtained by sending reservations to the society at 14 Summer Street, Cohasset 02025.

The society's phone is (617) 383-6930. On the afternoon of the tour, parking will be available on Howard Gleason Road and nearby areas adjacent to Cohasset Harbor.

Little League adult dance

Cohasset Little League will hold an Adults Dance at the Cohasset Community Center Saturday, April 28 from 8 p.m. to midnight.

A disc jockey, raffle, door prizes, and a cash bar all will contribute to the fun.

Tickets are $10 per person and may be purchased from the coaches or by calling 383-1592 or 383-1290.

Introducing the 2-Step Adjustable Rate Mortgage at Quincy Savings Bank.

If you're a first-time home buyer or a professional who relocates frequently, chances are you'll sell your home within the next seven years. And if you do plan on being in your home for less than seven years, Quincy Savings has a new mortgage in step with your plans. Called the 2-Step Adjustable Rate Mortgage, it could save you thousands of dollars on your next mortgage.

How it works

For the first seven years, your 2-Step Adjustable Rate Mortgage has a below market fixed rate. After seven years, your interest rate will be adjusted to a fixed market rate that will be in effect for the remaining 23 years of the loan.

The 2-Step Adjustable Rate Mortgage at Quincy Savings gives you the lowest possible monthly mortgage payment. Plus it increases the amount of house you can afford. For example, if you're looking at homes in the $150,000 range, you could save more than $3000 over the next 7 years. (Or you could buy a home that costs $5000 more right now.)*

For more information, stop by your nearest Quincy Savings Bank. Or call (617) 471-3500 and ask about our new 2-Step Adjustable Rate Mortgage. It's the mortgage in step with the times.

*Based on 80% financing.

Burtram Pratt

Financial matters still top the list of problems with which Selectmen and other town officials have to cope, Burt Pratt told campaign workers and supporters gathered for a Sunday brunch meeting at his home.

"The limitations of proposition 2-1/2, coupled with the decline in state and local revenues, and the rise in operating costs, have made it difficult to balance budgets and maintain services.

The problem is state wide and needs to be addressed at the state level.

Cohasset selectmen have supported legislation, filed by the Mass. Municipal Association and other groups,which would relieve the pressures on local finances and force the state to return to its traditional position of providing aid to cities and towns.

"Regionalization of certain services may be a way to cut expenses and this subject is being pursued with adjacent towns."

Pratt also told his guests that he is holding fast to his "no sign" policy which he adopted during his successful campaign three years ago.

"My position, widely praised by environmentalists was that lawn signs, even if they remain only a short time, are inappropriate for our town and violate the beauty of the spring landscape. We will have signs near the polling place on election day to establish a presence," Pratt said.

Pratt also mentioned that a story appearing in the Patriot Ledger, Saturday,may have given the impression that he does not want a dialogue with the public.

"Nothing could be further from the truth", he said . "As a selectman I have maintained an open door policy and will do no less as a candidate.

"Citizens with questions on issues may call me at my home. They may encounter an answering machine, but I will return all calls. The number is: 383-9272."

Pratt was referring to a story which said that all three candidates had refused to stay on a local cable television for an extra hour to be questioned by reporters and take phone-in questions, following a campaign appearance on the Wigmore Pierson show.

John McNabb

John K. McNabb, Jr., candidate for Cohasset Board of Health is calling for the board to repeal the $52 landfill fee in its present form.

"The $52 landfill fee was a mistake," McNabb said. "The amount of the fee was picked out of thin air and is not based on any financial analysis which supports the $52 figure.

"The fee should not have been established halfway through the fiscal year," he added. "Residents of Cohasset had every right to expect that the town facility sticker which they paid for in June, 1989, would have allowed them to use the landfill through June 30 of this year.

"I suggest that the Board of Health do the following," McNabb said.

— "announce that the $52 fee which residents have already paid will be effective until June 30, 1991;

— hold one or more public hearings on the fee, to hear and be responsive to public reaction;

— perform a financial analysis of the costs of running the transfer station, and the amount of property tax revenue which already pays for the facility; and — tell residents exactly what they get for paying of the $52 fee above and beyond what they get from paying their taxes.

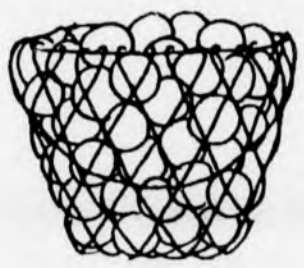
"If a fee is really necessary to pay for the operation of the transfer station," McNabb said, "then the board should be able to justify it on the above grounds and to defend its decision at public hearings.

"The board of health needs to be responsive to and accountable to the people who elect them. Fair, consistent treatment of residents and applicants is essential for the board of health to do its job and to effectively represent the town of Cohasset."

Jane Goedecke

Jane Goedecke, candidate for the Cohasset Board of Selectmen, wants to build a town-wide concensus in which various groups work together creatively and vigorously to find ways to address the pressing needs of Cohasset.



"Only when we agree on priorities and agree on goals will we be able to make the best use of our diminishing resources," she said.

Citing pressing needs such as the town's infrastructure, public safety and education, Goedecke said, "We need to fund the most essential services without expanding our debt burden."

Anyone interested in obtaining information on candidate Goedecke may contact Sam Pease, committee chairman, at 383-1406.

Cohasset recycling news . . .

By Alix White
Special to the Mariner

We are able to buy so many THINGS.

In the disposable decades, we have bought on time without paying the product's full cost. From disposable products, air conditioners, cleaning products, to lawn and garden fertilizers, not only are we accountable for the cost of our personal disposal of these items, but also for the polluted water, the hole in the ozone, cancer, birth defects and so on.

We have leveraged the future to pay for the present. It will be our children and their children's children who will pay. Did we ask their permission? Did we ask for the loan?

"Children, will it be all right with you if I use this blue stuff in my toilet so I won't have to scrub? It says on the package that it's safe for plumbing but it kind of glosses over the fact that it pollutes the water and ruins the bacteria in our septic system. But you won't mind replacing the septic system when you are older...will you?"

"I have some extra pesticides left over. Actually, they're not exactly left over. When the EPA told me I couldn't sell Heptachlor and DDT in the U.S.A., why I sold them to countries who could really use them. Of course it's fair. I sell it to them, and they sell the vegetables back to us. You don't mind do you, dear?

"I'm developing land. It will pay for your college and buy me a car. What do you mean it's right near our well? Don't worry; it's only a dump, and I'll keep it covered. It hardly will smell. You won't mind finding safe water for your children and their children somewhere else? You say that safe drinking water is getting harder to find?"

"Oh there's the lawn fertilizer truck in the driveway now. What are they using, you ask? I don't know but it's OK. Close the windows, and we'll leave while they spray."

These disposable decades have been no "cash and carry" time, but the ultimate "home equity loan." When the bill comes due, and it's happening now, who's going to bail us out? We didn't take this out at a faulty savings and loan, we took this loan out with the Earth.

We are accepting bi-metal cans at the RTF now. The bin is next to the aluminum only bin. Take a river trip

Take a trip down the North River with a slide show and presentation by Dr. Uve Hublitz Wednesday, April 11, at the Unitarian First Parish House.

The North and South River Watershed Association as well as the Gulf River Association will speak about protecting water bodies. This is a good opportunity for those living on or near any body of water to learn about protecting the water. The event will take place at 7:30 p.m. and is free to the public and presented by the Cohasset Earth Day Committee.

Chiropractic for Health

by Dr. Debra M. Tranberg & Dr. Susan Emmer
Chiropractors

TIRED EXCUSES

Many people experience fatigure as a result of strenuous physical exercise or mental challenge. However, there are those who suffer from chronic tiredness for no readily apparent reason. While the chiropractor may be able to list a number of imbalances of deficiencies that may lead to chronic lethargy, one culprit is structural in nature. It can be traced to a subluxation in the thoracic vertebrae that inhibits the action of the diaphragm. That is to say, if the nerve emerging from the spine is interfered with on its way to the diaphragm, this component of breathing may not be able to work properly. As a result, the muscles of the body may be deprived of sufficient amounts of oxygen to provide them with vigor. In this case, the chiropractor would work to restore unimpeded nerve impulses to the diaphragm.

Interference along the spinal column produces unwanted results in the body's natural communication system. Chiropractic serves to reduce and eliminate such points of interference, allowing the resumption of a natural pathway for the body's healing instructions. In this fashion a state of well-being is achieved. To learn more about how chiropractic can benefit you, call DR. DEBRA M. TRANBERG, SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, 80 Front St., Scituate, 545-7388, and DR. SUSAN EMMER, CHIROPRACTIC & FAMILY WELLNESS CARE, 87 Sohier St., Cohasset, 383-1330. By appointment, Workers Comp cases and most insurance plans accepted.

P.S. Nutritional deficiencies and hormonal imbalances may also cause that run-down feeling, and may be treated by the chiropractor.

D.A.R. presents award to Edith Sainteloi

The Colonel Thomas Lothrop Chapter of Cohasset recently presented the Daughters of the American Revolution Good Citizens' Award to Edith Sainteloi of Hyde Park.

The award is presented each year to the senior at Cohasset High School who best exemplifies the qualities of dependability, leadership, service, and patriotism.

Sainteloi was chosen to receive this award by both her classmates and the faculty of Cohasset High School.

She entered Cohasset High School in the ninth grade as a Metco student.

Mrs. Howard Bates, the chapter's Good Citizens' Award chairman, presented the award at a luncheon given in Sainteloi's honor at the Cohasset Historical Society's Caleb Lothrop House.

C.V.S. sponsors contest

In the Earth Month spirit, the Cohasset Volunteer Service and the Peace and Social Justice Club, both of Cohasset Junior-Senior High School, are sponsoring a contest to find a design for a seal to be used to identify environmentally preferred products.

The winning entry will become part of a labelling program which is currently in the planning stages at the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and many northeastern states.

Currently, paper products made from recycled materials are identified by the recycling symbol, chasing arrows. Additionally, the outline of the chasing arrows is sometimes used on paper products which are recyclable.

Submitted designs should show the importance of source reduction and/or recycling and should be circular. The contest is open to all ages.

Prizes will be awarded for the winning seals, and the first place design will be submitted to the U.S. Congress for adoption as the national symbol for environmentally safe products.

Please send your submissions to Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School, Attn.: Earth Awareness Activities, at 143 Pond St., Cohasset.

Dan Cotton to move King Street intersection

Local resident Dan Cotton approached selectman Chairman Burtram Pratt about the infamous intersection of King Street and Route 3A. Cotton's home has been damaged several times by cars failing to execute the turns safely, Pratt said.

According to Pratt, Cotton wants the town to fix the intersection rather than waiting forever for the state to come up with the money for it.

Cotton spoke with highway superintendent Harold Litchfield about the cost of re-engineering the intersection. Pratt said Litchfield quoted a figure of $75,000 for re-engineering the intersection, but it would not be banked or flanked with granite curbstones and drains as the state's work would be.

"I don't think the state will permit us to do the work," Pratt said. But the selectmen decided to take a chance and will ask the state department of public works for permission to redesign the King Street half of the intersection with the state highway.

Route 3A and King Street came up again with a curb cut proposal by the Sunoco gas station at the intersection.

According to Executive Secretary Greg Doyon, the gas station contends that vehicles trying to exit back onto Route 3A have been subject to several "near misses." Station owners want to install a second curb cut to solve the safety issue.

Doyon has scheduled a meeting of the engineer for the Sun Oil company, highway superintendent Harold Litchfield, the police chief or safety officer and himself.

According to Doyon, the first proposal by Sunoco was totally unacceptable because it featured a curb cut across the green strip onto King Street.

"They're coming up with a second plan that would be an exit only, right hand turn onto Route 3A," Doyon said.

Art Center gains license

Selectmen unanimously granted an entertainment license to South Shore Art Center for its annual summer arts festival to be held on the town common June 21 to 24.

In previous years, the festival has been free of charge. This year, the art center, suffering from a steady decline in funding for the arts, wants to charge an admission fee to the tent area to view the artwork.

The fee has not been set, but it is not expected to exceed $2.50. There will be no admission charge for children.

A thorny donation

Rosa rugosa reared its thorny head again this week.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby reported that an as-yet anonymous couple wished to make a donation to the town.

"They have been cleaning Black Rock Beach on a regular basis," Gjesteby said. "They would like to remove the broken fence and replace it with rosa rugosa."

Ever the diplomat, Selectman Rocco Laugelle jokingly offered to transplant the rosa rugosa bushes from Veteran's Memorial Park.

"I want to encourage this person, this do-gooder," he said.

Chairman Burtram Pratt expressed a wish that the fence would be repaired to protect the rosa rugosa, otherwise known as beach rose, from being damaged by foot and vehicular traffic.

Gjesteby said she would have the prospective donors confer with Peter Laugelle, head of the tree and park department, about their plans to beautify the location.

Gardeners to beautify hall

Selectmen gratefully accepted an offer by the Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset to plant bushes in front of the old section of town hall.

The project, while part of Earth Day celebrations, will take place in several phases over a period of three years.

"Our group is small and our budget is low," Martha Hurtig explained.

After warning Hurtig that a broken conductor pipe over the area spews water that could threaten new plantings, the selectmen accepted the garden club's offer.

"Perhaps some temporary repair measures can be taken (until the town votes the money necessary to repair the pipe)," Chairman Burtram Pratt said. "We shall be looking forward to the viburnum."

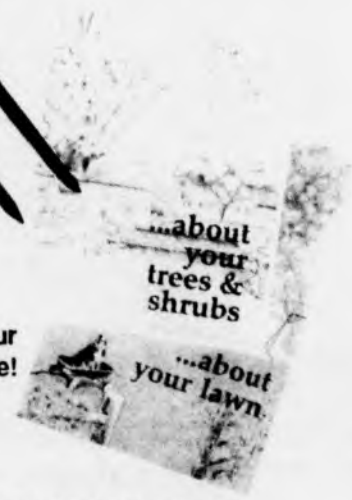
Registry comes to town

Selectmen granted permission to the state registry of motor vehicles to use town hall for road testing one additional day per week.

Under the new schedule, the registry will be using town hall two days per week.

The move was necessitated by closure of the Hingham site.

How much money is planted in your yard ?



Count it up. A couple of flowering shrubs, a hedge and a maple tree from the nursery could amount to as much as $600. You've probably made a considerable investment, in plants alone. A living investment that needs attention to grow.

Take this little quiz, to find out if your landscaping investment is increasing or decreasing in value:

- ☐ Are any of your bushes yellowish?
- ☐ Do any of your trees or shrubs have dead or dying branches?
- ☐ Did your flowering shrubs fail to bloom as well as expected ?
- ☐ Are insects nibbling holes in the leaves ?
- ☐ Are the leaves and branches sparse or stunted ?

If you answered yes to any of these, call us for a free , no-obligation survey and price quote. Our ornamental tree and shrub inspection, pest control and fertilization programs are designed to promote healthy and attractive plants. And healthy landscaping means a healthy increase in your property's value.

FOR AN IDEA OF HOW DIRTY YOUR ORIENTAL RUG IS, RUB THIS AND LOOK AT YOUR FINGER.

Oriental rugs are constantly picking up various types of soil. Some are greasy and some are gritty. But they all can eat away at your treasured possession.

For your Oriental rug to retain its beauty and value, it should be cleaned at least once every three to five years.

At Grillo Oriental Rug Cleaning, we carefully examine each rug, then give it the most suitable treatment. Sometimes that means gentle machine-washing, other times it means our 'Art-Safe' hand-washing. And our exclusive equipment and methodology enable us to remove the deep-set grit that others miss.

Furthermore, unlike harsh commercial cleaning, our individualized, museum-quality care is always safe, always effective.

Men's fashion delivers traditional message

Conservative = successful

South Shore men want a traditional look in their clothes, according to Steve Norton of The Bay Company in Hingham Square.

"Wide shoulders are in," Norton said. "But you don't find them here. This is a bastion of tradition."

Men in this area are looking for the type of business clothing that will remain in style – clothing that can be worn beyond this spring and summer.

Another men's retailer put the issue in terms of simple economics.

Men want to achieve a look that will help them get ahead in the business world. They discard trendy items before they ever reach the store's cash register. Being a fashion-plate just doesn't fit with the image of a successful businessman.

What's in style this season locally might seem much the same as last year's top selling items – well-cut suits are always appropriate. Colors in suits and blazers remain in the conservative tones – gray, blue, shades of brown.

"Men are looking for a softer, more natural look," Norton said.

"Actually my advice to a young men looking for his first job would be to buy some fairly conservative items. There's nothing worse than to go on a job interview and have the person doing the interviewing take a look at the applicant and say to himself, 'Where did he get that outfit?'

"Young men need to be cautioned not to get caught up in fads. The traditional clothes have proven their ability to stay and last season after season," Norton said.

Suits remain basic but sport jackets and blazers are rating attention.

Norton said that despite their inclination to stick with tradition, men are willing to try a new look in neckwear.

The latest ties are a trifle wider than those of last season.

And in the lines of neckwear some new patterns and colors are finding acceptance.

"Prints, retro-looks, florals, larger geometric patterns are replacing the small neat paisleys of the past few years," Norton commented.

"Color in neckwear is important. Lilac is popular, so are the oranges and the bright shades. Pastels are in style."

He said that in casual wear cotton sweaters are now considered suitable for year-round wear.

Cotton sweaters are being shown in a variety of solid colors and prints. Geometric prints, as well as the old standby cables, are the latest rage.

"Cottons are popular for the ease of care," Norton said.

"In casual clothes madras is being seen in shirts as well as shorts and trousers. As a category, walking shorts are becoming larger."

Norton said pleats in trousers are accepted these days for their comfort.

Omega features snappy all-weather apparel.

The Bay Company of Hingham offers a traditional approach to men's fashion whether in a sport jacket and slacks as shown above or in the type business suit shown at left.

Bright colors are now hot in men's casual wear

Bright and neons are the colors for men's spring fashions, according to Tom Patrolia of T. Michaels at Merchants Row Mall in Hanover.

Jade, royal blue, purple, watermellon and yellow with black and white are the colors celebrated this spring.

For casual knit tops and swimwear, the colors are electrifying – lime green, orange and hot pink can be seen in solid fabrics or as accent colors.

"For casual wear, knits are becoming more and more popular as easy, carefree clothing fits everyone's weekend wardrobe.

"Specifically, shortsleeve mock turtlenecks and one-pocket T-shirts are must haves in three or four colors. These can be worn with swim suits, shorts or under a casual blazer or cardigan. Nautica or Newport Blue are great at coordinating swim with casual knits."

Walking shorts of all lengths are popular, Patrolia said. The shorts can be combined with knit, oxford cloth or madras shirts.

"Silk shirts are the most luxurious fabric," he said pointing out that Perry Ellis makes a sanded silk that is machine washable.

The basics of a spring wardrobe are still cotton sweaters, madras shirts and twill trousers or shorts.

Sporting outfits brighten

Omega, a Boston-based manufacturer of products for water sports and outdoor enthusiasts, is showing bright colors along with some old classics.

Foul weather gear can be had in yellow, fire engine red, royal blue and silver these days.

From glancing through the spring catalog, it's easy to see that gray is the staple.

Boat shoes for men – which used to be called sneakers – are available in old standby styles and colors plus some innovative designs and brighter hues.

Lifesaving vests have entered the fashion field as blue and white zipper vests bring a sense of style onto the water.

Wild shirts are hot this season as tropical prints in geometrical prints or florals can be found in bold patterns and colors. Cotton and rayon combinations, which create a machine washable fabric, are popular.

T. Michaels features weekend clothing for men including fashions by Perry Ellis, Chaps by Ralph Lauren, Boston Traders, Nautica, Woolrich, Newport Blue and others.

Better hair care can improve man's look

American men spent approximately $1.3 billion on grooming products in 1989.

Yet, rather than appreciating the array of hair care choices available, many men are overwhelmed.

To guide men in making product selections that will help them better manage their individual hair care needs, hair growth experts Dr. Thomas Nigra of the Washington Hospital Center, Washington, D.C., and Paul Glick, Chicago-based image consultant, offer the following tips:

• Be skeptical when reading product label claims. Every product has a promise or an offer of hope in addressing a self-image concern. To avoid disappointment, set realistic expectations and don't be afraid to ask questions. If the salesclerk is unable to help, ask for the store manager or product buyer.

• Be aware that, by and large, all conditioners accomplish the same thing. Conditioners simply add protein and other agents to hair to improve manageability.

• Be careful when buying a dandruff shampoo. Make sure the shampoo you choose has one of the five ingredients cited by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) as safe and effective in controlling dandruff These are salicylic acid, pyrithione zinc, sulfur, coal tar and selenium sulfide. Because dandruff shampoos are highly toxic, they should be used sparingly and kept away from children.

• Be conscious of your hair type when buying any shampoo. Men with thinning hair for example, frequently have oily hair and should use a shampoo for oily hair or one specially formulated for thinning hair that won't leave unwanted residue. If men use a shampoo designed for dry hair, they may develop the scaling and itching problems of aggravated dandruff.

• Be realistic about shampoo additives. Herbal, lemon and egg shampoos smell good, but they offer little or no cleansing benefit. Often additives reflect the perceptions of marketers more than the needs of consumers.

• Differentiate between over-the-counter hair thickener products and a prescription hair growth treatment. Hair thickeners use ingredients such as trisaccharide chemicals to add body to hair and make it appear fuller.

A new FDA regulation effective Jan. 7 prohibited companies from claiming that nonprescription products actually grow hair or prevent hair loss.

The only product proven to grow hair is minoxidil which is available only with a doctor's prescription.

Selectmen dedicate flag for Red Cross

The American Red Cross is always ready to offer assistance to the victims of disaster.

They were there to help the victims of Hurricane Hugo, the California earthquake, and similar disasters in Kentucky, the Gulf of Mexico and Alabama.

Locally, Red Cross assists hundreds of south area citizens every year. When your neighbor's house is destroyed by fire, or your child needs blood, the Red Cross is there.

For the past 127 years, the Red Cross movement has upheld and protected humanitarian rights, helping people in need throughout the world.

March is American Red Cross Month. All across the south area, communities are coming together to strengthen support of Red Cross programs and services, and the Cohasset is no exception. Cohasset selectmen showed their support by proclaiming March Red Cross Month and forwarding the official proclamation to the Red Cross office.

To ensure support for Red Cross services in the south area, volunteers and staff are approaching Red Cross Month with a fourpronged campaign -- to thank people for supporting the Red Cross through their United Way gift, to inform them about Red Cross services, to recruit additional volunteers and to solicit new contribution members to the Red Cross family.

To carry out its worldwide services, the Red Cross depends upon both contributions and volunteers. More than 1.8 million men and women volunteer their time to the Red Cross on a regular basis.

Nationally, volunteers outnumber paid staff by more than 80 to one. The south area has more than 700 volunteers serving in a number of Red Cross programs.

Spring soccer excitement comes to Cohasset

By Carol Riley
Special to the Mariner

An exciting, but soggy spring soccer season for the Coastal Youth Soccer League began last Saturday on muddy fields around the South Shore.

Cohasset is fielding 26 teams ranging in age from 7 to 19 years--some 450 boys and girls competing against teams from 13 South Shore towns.

Here are the results of Saturday's and Sunday's soccer contests:

Boys Under-19 team suffered a 3-0 loss to Duxbury, despite great hustle by midfielder Bob Whittaker and sweeper Billy Baird.

Playing goalkeeper for the first time in more than a year, Mike Cisneros "did an outstanding job," according to Coach Larry Shultz.

Girls Under-19 team scored a big 2-0 win over Plymouth with goals scored by Jen Reidy and Scituate's Colleen McClary.

Scituate goalkeeper, Marcella Gillis, playing for Cohasset, held off many shots. Outstanding offensively were Debby Beal and Rebecca Tosca, who, sadly, fractured her leg and is out for the season.

Boys Under-16 - 1 team's game was cancelled, but the boys Under-16 - 2 squad experienced a 5-1 triumph over Kingston with goals scored by Billy Jordan and Willie Adams.

Boys Under-14 - 1 scored a big 1-0 win over last year's state championship team from Hingham on a penalty kick goal by Scott Theriault. Goalkeepers Tim Brister and Ben Redfield were outstanding in holding off the red menace from Hingham.

Boys Under-14 - 2 team scored a close 2-1 victory over Duxbury, with goals by Kevin Gentile and Edward Hamilton. Great offense by midfielder Thomas Greco and great saves by keeper Chris McKenna helped in this big win.

Girls Under-14 - 1 team suffered a 6-0 loss to Middleboro, despite a valiant effort by goalkeeper Sara Kirk and great defense by Sara Atherton.

Girls Under-14 - 2 tied Hingham 1-1 in a thriller with Melinda Johansen in goal, Megan Rhodes at forward and Amy Silvia providing great defense.

Boys Under-12 - 1 team, coached by Peter Mangan, lost a close one to Norwell, 3-1, with Cohasset's goal scored by Joey Magner.

Looking strong in goal was Kevin McKenna and showing great hustle in midfield were Taylor Devin and Jamey Kondrat.

Boys Under-12 - 2 squad lost 6-0 to Kingston despite noble goaltending by Teddy Noon and Andy Hamilton. Playing strong defensively were Ryan McWilliams and Jamie Buick.

Boys Under-12 - 3 team was beaten 2-0 by Plymouth. Bobby Meehan shows great promise in goal and looking tough on the field were Kevin Duffy and Ryan Stasko.

Girls Under-12 - 1 team coached by Sandy Theriault, fell to Marshfield 4-2, despite great goals by Catie Campbell and Ashley Brister and excellent goaltending by Laura Slotnick and Caroline Delima.

Girls Under-12 - 2 lost a close one, 4-1 to Plymouth, with a goal by Katie Ross and fine play by

Gill looks for a turnaround for Skippers

By David McKee
Mariner staff

Cohasset High School softball coach Mike Gill is looking to turn things around for the Skippers this season.

"What we're trying to do this year is improve in every game that we play," he said. "And work on improving our record. The last two years have not been so hot record-wise, and we are looking to turn that around."

And with only one senior, Gill will be doing it with a young squad.

"I have some good young players," he said. "And I'm hopeful that they can play hard and win for us."

The only senior returning from last year's 1-15 squad is Andreya Cann, who is expected to see some time in the outfield.

The rest of the Skippers are comprised of underclassmen, many with varsity experience.

Four juniors look to play important roles for the Skippers.

Kay Long will see some action in the outfield.

His sister Maureen Long will do some pitching. Nicole Barry will see action at second base. And Kerri Mieli will see action at first base.

Gill is looking for contributions from two of his sophomores.

Heather Bass will see action in both the infield and outfield. And Bridget Leung will be the number one pitcher for the Skippers.

"Bridget didn't play last year and I'm hoping that she will be able to provide us with some pitching consistency," Gill said. "The last couple years, we have been giving up too many walks and that has hurt us."

He is also counting on three freshmen to contribute heavily to the team's success.

Alison Ludlow will be the Clippers' shortstop.

"She has been starting catcher since seventh grade," Gill said. "She is just a great athlete. But we need her more at shortstop this year."

Jennifer Knowles will be behind the plate for the Clippers.

"She will be playing an important role for us this year," Gill said. "Because of her, we were able to move Alison to shortstop."

And Danielle Shaughnessy will be seeing some time in the infield.

"The young players are the future of this team," Gill said. "And I'm looking for them keep getting better and better."

The Skippers get underway next Tuesday against Scituate with their first game.

During the last few weeks the Skippers have been getting ready for the season.

"The weather has not been too good, especially last week," Gill said. "And since we are young, we need more time for instruction. But the weather has affected everyone. We're doing the best we can."

Gill said for the Skippers to be successful, strong pitching and defense will be the key.

"We have looked good defensively," he said. "We are real sure-handed. And I like what I have seen so far of our pitchers. But we do not have a lot of power at the plate. We mostly have a lot of singles hitters. But I'm trying to find some hitters who will keep the outfield honest.

"I think we will have to be pesky out there on offense. We will have to hit singles, take the extra base, steal and do whatever it takes. We do have some quickness, so we should take advantage of it. If we can off to a good start and get some confidence, I think we can surprise some people."

CHS coach is building a winner

By David McKee
Mariner staff

Cohasset High School baseball coach Ted McDermott is looking to build a foundation of winning for the Skippers and this year he is starting from scratch and starting with pitching.

"We have only one or two returning players with varsity experience" McDermott said. "So we will be building from the bottom up."

The lone returning varsity letterman is senior Michael Ellinger.

Ellinger will be the number one pitcher for the Skippers and will be at first base when not on the mound.

McDermott is hopeful that two other seniors, Noah Hill and Mike Rollandeli will help boost the Skippers pitching.

Hill, a lefty and the quarterback for the football team has looked good this spring. Hill will play left field when not on the mound.

And Rollandeli will also be called on to pitch. He is the Skippers regular catcher.

Sophomores John Geary and centerfielder Ryan Cibelli are also expected to see some action on the mound.

"If we have a strength, it is that we will have strong pitching," McDermott said. "Those pitchers are going to be our nucleus of our team. Ellinger is an established pitcher. Hill has shown he can throw. Rollandeli and Cibelli have shown they can throw strikes and Geary will be our main relief pitcher."

McDermott is also counting on key contributions from his infield, comprised entirely of underclassmen.

Junior Matt Berger will be at first base.

Freshman John Maynard will be at second base.

Freshman Peter Fahey will be at shortstop.

And Joe Andrade will be at third base.

Senior Curt Ludlow will round out the lineup in the outfield.

"The nucleus of the infield are freshman and they have to come along if we are to play top defensive ball," McDermott said. "We have solid pitching, the outfield and catching look solid, the only concern is how the freshmen handle the infield. But they are all very talented players."

McDermott is also looking for contributions from senior infielders Sean McCarthy and Mike Dockray, senior pitcher Eric Theriault, senior DH David Farag, sophomore outfielder Topher Henderson and freshman catcher Nate Fiorie.

The Skippers have been practicing the last few weeks in preparation for the opening of the season.

"The weather has limited our options," McDermott said. "We have been in the gym a lot and there is only so much you can do in the gym. But I like what I have seen so far from the kids."

As for what it will take to be successful this year, McDermott said, "Our pitching will have to be solid and our so will our defense. As for offense, we will have to take every advantage that we can. The weather has been tough on us, but I'm confident that our hitting will keep getting better and better."

McDermott is offering no predictions about the upcoming season.

"I'm simply looking for the kids to play some competitive baseball," he said. "It wouldn't be right to set goals on X number of wins and losses. But seeing that we are starting three freshman and a sophomore and have only one returning letterman, this is going to be a season where everything will have to fall into place."

Recreation Notes . . .

Easter egg hunt, April 14th

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct its 14th annual Easter egg hunt, for children 3 through 11-years-of-age, on Saturday, April 14, at noon at the Deer Hill School field.

This year there is again the distinct possibility that the Easter bunny and helpers will be on hand. There also will be live animals t this year's hunt, as well as the other attractions.

Children will be divided into three age groups:

Group 1. Ages 3 and 4 (with parent)

Group 2. Ages 5 through 7

Group 3. Ages 8 through 11

Children younger than 3-years-old also may attend, but with at least one parent with them at all times.

Participants should gather around their designated area signs before noon, and bring a small paper bag or container for candy.

Individually wrapped chocolate eggs will be scattered about the designated areas. In each group some of the eggs will be wrapped with masking tape that will have a number on the tape. Should a participant find one of the numbered eggs, he should hold on to it to receive a prize from the Easter bunny.

This year's program sponsors are: Cohasset Rotary Club, Veteran's of Foreign Wars Post 9146, American Legion Post 118, the Cohasset Police Association, and the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce.

The rain date will be Saturday, April 21 at noon at Deer Hill School field.

During the past few years, the Easter bunny and helpers have visited Cohasset residents who are hospitalized or homebound, during the Easter season. Should you know of anyone that you feel could benefit from a visit by the Easter bunny and helpers, you may call either the recreation department office at, 383-6791, or you may call Mrs. Manuel Salvador, and in either case, arrangements will be made.

April vacation program

The Cohasset Recreation Department is sponsoring a 1990 April vacation program at Deer Hill School Monday, April 16 through Friday, April 20, 9 a.m. through 3 p.m. for children ages 3 to 12.

The program features activities and games, arts and crafts, movies and entertainment, tournaments and competitions, bowling at the Community Center, art project at the South Shore Art Center, a Paul Pratt Library visit, outdoor activities and a pizza party finale.

The program will be directed by Ted Carroll. If you are interested in having your child participate, you should call the Cohasset Recreation Department for pre-registration at 383-6791 by Thursday, April 12.

A registration also will be held Saturday, April 14, at the Deer Hill School from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. after the Cohasset Recreation Department's Easter egg hunt.

The cost is $65 for a first child and $60 for subsequent children and daily rates are available with optional extended hours.

New copy deadline

Within the next few weeks, the Cohasset Mariner will be going to fully computerized pagination. New technology means new headaches and new rules.

From here on out, we can no longer guarantee that any submittal received after noon on Monday will get in the paper. All submittals must be typed and must include a name and number for verification. Thank you for your indulgence.

CHS students and faculty laud Gallagher

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

On April 6, the normally business-like administration offices at Cohasset High School were decked out as if a party was about to happen.

The reason for all the fuss was that it happened to be the second annual Principal's Day.

The Massachusetts Association of Student Councils started Principal's Day as a way to recognize the principal as the instructional leader and supporter of student government.

In Cohasset, it is also a formal way of paying tribute to a woman who is both respected and loved by students, faculty and staff and the Parent School Organization.

In addition to the respect, Gallagher was the recipient of goodies including plants from the PSO and custodial staff, a cake from the staff and a gift certificate to Barker Tavern from the student council.

According to Gallagher, the day was a good one to focus on education and the changing role of the principal.

In the past, the primary function of the principal was to be a caretaker. Now the emphasis is pro-active. The principal is expected to lead the school in developing new curricula and instructional approaches.

The job of the principal is likely to become more challenging in coming years. With communities facing fiscal crisis, voters are demanding deep cuts in school administration positions. Many of the responsibilities handled by assistant principals, curriculum development specialists, counselors and the like are falling on the principal. Yet schools are facing more challenges as they are required to provide a high quality education to the most handicapped children as well as the best and the brightest.

In addition, Gallagher said society expects schools to take on tasks that used to be the responsibility of other institutions, such as the family and the church.

Principal Meg Gallagher

She remarked that schools are being asked to be the primary source of values education, health education, sex education and suicide prevention, as well as drug education and treatment. And that list hardly exhausts the demands on the modern school system.

At the same time, school budgets and resources are expected to remain the same.

For the past two years, Gallagher has attended meetings of the Commonwealth Leadership Council to strengthen her skills and learn about new developments in education and school administration.

At town meeting

Voters adopt harbor bylaw

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

Voters overwhelmingly adopted a new harbor bylaw at the annual town meeting Saturday that put an end to corporate ownership of moorings.

In presenting the bylaw, it was the harbor committee's intention to make sure that only individuals will be issued moorings in Cohasset Harbor, and that in the event of a mooring-holder's death ownership of the mooring shall be transferred only to a surviving spouse.

And when the spouse dies, ownership of the mooring then would revert to the town and would go to the next person on the waiting list.

The bylaw disallows the assignment of a mooring to any corporation, trust, partnership, joint venture or any joint ownership—except that "permits shall continue to be issued from year to year... to those entities currently holding permits which operate clubs or marine-related businesses adjacent to Cohasset Harbor."

"This puts into writing what has been done for some time," said John "Fritz" Pfaffmann, committee chairman. "It is unfair to allow a corporatation to pass a mooring permit from one person to another" while others are waiting on the waiting list.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Voters crushed an attempt by Robert Martin to alter the bylaw dramatically via amendment.

Martin's amendment would have provided separate rules for "commercial moorings" and "non-commercial moorings."

The commercial moorings, he said, would be allocated for business usage only.

Martin's amendment would have provided that "in the event of the death of an individual holding a permit, it is understood that every effort shall be made to preserve the livelihood and income of the family of the deceased by continuing the permit within the immediate family defined as the spouse, children and grandchildren.

"The harbormaster will offer to continue the permit as long as the immediate family is actively involved in the operation of the boat," Martin's amendment said.

The amendment also would have provided that "in the event of the death of a partner of a partnership holding a permit, the harbormaster would offer to continue the permit to the surviving partner or partners with no further offers beyond the death or deaths of the surviving partners."

Martin also called for the creation of an arbitration panel from a pool of commercial boat owners "to assist the harbormaster in the event of a dispute as to the facts involved."

Selectman Rocco Laugelle summed up the feelings of the majority of the voters, who denied the amendment. "What do we do for other businesses in town. We don't do anything for gas station owners, for instance. It's a tough life out there, but we can't go overboard for commercial fishermen."

OTHER CHANGES

The original proposal, which the voters did adopt, provided other changes as well:

- No permit shall be renewed in Cohasset to those who have not paid their boat excise taxes ;
- Those who do not make use of their permit during the year will not have their permit renewed;
- If a boat owner is to remove his boat for a period

Fire department gets burned by voters

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

Cohasset's fire department felt the heat from the town's voters during special town meeting proceedings Saturday, April 7.

Voters overwhelmingly rejected articles to pay for computer equipment at the fire department and fire department overtime.

And they accepted amendments to Article 4 of the general bylaws that change the means of determining compensation for both the fire chief and the police chief, so that in the future, they shall be compensated as determined by the selectmen.

In his forecast for the town budget, Raymond Kasperowicz, chairman of the advisory committee, said Cohasset is in better shape for fiscal year 1991 than most towns, but added that the town should seriously consider "collectivizing" town

"Our committee is looking at the fire department and other groups; we're looking at ambulance options and a DPW alternative," Kasperowicz said.

With regard to the $3,000 request for a computer system, Fire Chief Daniel Brock said the equipment would help make up for the loss of the fire department secretary, who used to do the billing.

Firefighters, he said, would take care of the billing during their down time.

Arne Gjesteby of the advisory committee chided the chief, saying the number of bills the fire department generates comes out to about one per shift. He suggested the firefighters could do the bills by hand and still get them out with accuracy.

Besides, he said, if the fire department were to get new computer equipment, then the town would have to pay to have the firefighters trained to use the computer.

With regard to the $17,600 transfer request for fire department overtime pay, Brock said overtime pay exceeded the $49,000 town meeting had set aside this year because broken vehicles required excess time from the mechanic for vehicle maintenance, and because of several major fires, both in Cohasset and in neighboring communities with which Cohasset has a mutual aid agreement.

Ninety percent of the overtime costs were incurred by firefighters on duty, while 10 percent of the costs were due to call-back situations.

Of the $17,500, Brock said, $7,000 was used for call-back and $3,500 was used for personal days, with which firefighters were rewarded for excellent job attendance.

Gjesteby again assailed the department, saying the chief had promised to make changes in operations and then did not follow through.

He urged town meeting voters to let the chief know they demand a change in operations by rejecting the request.

Any legal obligation to pay for work performed could come out of the reserve fund, he said.

According to advisory committee figures, Cohasset pays the highest per capita cost for fire protection of any town in the area at $133 per.

"What do those other towns do that we don't?" Gjesteby asked. "Do they use a mix of regular and call firefighters?"

Finally, voters rejected a plea by Brock to maintain the chiefs' salary structure as it was, guaran-

Funding crisis prompts festival admission

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

When the South Shore Art Center sets up its tents for the summer arts festival on Cohasset common, patrons may see something new besides the art work.

Recently, selectmen gave the center permission to charge an admission to the exhibition tents.

"We got the permit so we would have the option of charging admission," executive director Lanci Valentine said. "How we will use it is still up in the air."

One possibility will be to keep admission free, but charge a fee for the exhibition catalog. In previous years, the center requested only a voluntary contribution.

If the center charges admission, it will be a first. The center would like to avoid that.

"The exhibit is under the tents," Valentine said. "It should be an open door."

The funding crisis in the arts propelled the board of directors to seek the permit.

"The festival is an enormous undertaking," Valentine said. "It takes hundreds of volunteers and literally thousands of volunteer hours for very little financial return."

The festival has become a real mainstay of the summer season for residents throughout the South Shore. The center plans to continue presenting the festival.

"The thing is, we need to make it more profitable for us," Valentine said.

The art center is suffering from an attitude that in fiscally tough times art is fluff. It is particularly rough for the center because they recently built a $1.3 million facility.

"Once the mortgage is paid off, we should be in very good shape," Valentine said.

The total budget for the art center is $280,000 per year. Valentine described it as a "bare bones budget."

The center gets a minimal funding from the state. That funding was decreased from $2,500 to $1,400 recently.

The center gets $4,000 to $5,000 from the Arts Lottery. The cost of that funding is spread out

Chiropractic for Health

Chiropractors

HARD-TO-STOMACH PROBLEMS

Judging by the sales of antacids, heartburn and indigestion are widespread problems. Anyone with these or other digestive disturbances should avail themselves of the services of a chiropractor in an effort to realize long-term relief. The key to such an effort is to visit the chiropractor before the condition becomes severe or chronic. Oftentimes, the chiropractor can seek to relieve mild gastric upset by applying manipulative therapy to the region of the mid-back. It is here that nerves controlling the stomach emerge from their final opening. If these nerves are impinged by misaligned vertebrae, their ability to control stomach functions may be impaired. The chiropractor's goal is to remove the source of the interference, not cover up the resultant symptoms with antacids.

Periodic chiropractic exams serve to address existing problems as well as preventing unwanted situations from developing. We offer the chiropractic exams that will address all your needs. For a total state of well-being, call DR. DEBRA M. TRANBERG, SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, 80 Front St., Scituate, 545-7388, and DR. SUSAN EMMER, CHIROPRACTIC & FAMILY WELLNESS CARE, 87 Sohier St., Cohasset, 383-1330. By appointment. Workers Comp. cases and most insurance plans accepted.

P.S. If a patient's digestive problems are a result of improper eating habits, the chiropractor is prepared to offer nutritional guidance.

Voters adopt new harbor bylaw . . .

in excess of seven days, the harbormaster must be notified in advance;

• No boat longer than 45 feet will be granted a mooring space in Cohasset Harbor;

• All persons and entities owning boats, other than un-registered tenders, who have a continuous right to moor such boat at any privately owned mooring, pier, wharf or float within the confines of Cohasset Harbor, shall pay a users fee as set by the board of selectmen from time to time, and shall receive a decal by April 1 of each year—the owners of all boats moored or berthed in Cohasset Harbor not displaying a mooring decal or a user's decal at certain times of the year prescribed by the selectmen, pay a temporary per diem fee as set by the board;

• If a boat owner sells or disposes of his boat, he may keep his mooring space if he notifies the harbormaster within 30 days and the boat replacing the original is approximately the same size in the judgment of the harbormaster;

• No person shall discharge, deposit or throw overboard into the harbor any oil, refuse or bait, or any similar type of waste.

SWIMMERS ON NOTICE

The new bylaw also puts swimmers on notice, Pfaffmann said, that they will be liable in the event of any accident in which they might be involved in Cohasset Harbor.

The new bylaw requires skin divers to obtain permission from the harbormaster, to display a diver's flag, and operate from a boat attended by another person.

Furthermore, No person may operate a boat in the harbor while towing a water skier, aquaplane or any other device, unless involved in water carnival or exhibition authorized by the selectmen.

No one will be allowed to swim or dive from town or private piers or floats within Cohasset Harbor unless enrolled in an organized instructional program permitted by the harbormaster.

And absolutely no swimming will be allowed near or in a navigational channel or in an area where vessels normally navigate.

The law also provides that no person shall operate a boat in Little Harbor while towing a water skier, aquaplane or other device, except on even-numbered days.

"The two-day workshops of the council are very intensive," Gallagher said. "The sessions, held every few months, begin at 8 a.m. and run until 10 p.m."

The council writes grants to bring in consultants to train the members in new techniques.

One of the current workshops focused on cooperative learning. Gallagher is working on implementing at Cohasset Junior-Senior High School that will strengthen students' problem-solving abilities and foster mutual respect among them.

"Students of varying ability levels are assigned to a group and the group is given a problem to solve," Gallagher explained. "The teacher, who has already taught problem-solving techniques to the members of the group, leaves them to solve the problem as a group."

"In this kind of model, students urge each other to become leaders because they know they will come up with the best possible answer only when all members are responsible for the solution."

Gallagher said the respect she enjoys from her students and staff is a two-way street. In her four years at Cohasset High School, she has moved in the direction of more shared decision-making with her faculty.

"I have such a highly competent staff," she said. "It makes sense to give them the ability to use their knowledge and talents."

Gallagher pointed to the faculty senate as an example of the way in which joint decision-making can be accomplished.

"We meet once a month to discuss issues and ideas and arrive at mutual decisions," she said.

One decision that came out of the faculty senate was the increase in requirements for graduation.

The decision tracked what already was occurring for most students, but it ensured that others would not reach their requirements by the end of junior year and slough off during the last year of their high school education.

"I find that very exciting," Gallagher said. "That's the way it's supposed to be."

The result is that seniors are taking advantage of the extensive list of elective courses. Students are exploring new areas or learning in greater detail, Gallagher said.

"I get such positive feedback from students who are taking international relations of law," she said. "Several girls who have an interest in fashion design and related areas are taking mechanical drawing."

Before coming to Cohasset, Gallagher had worked as an assistant principal in Hingham. She sees the two communities as very similar in their commitment to high quality education. She also sees Cohasset as unique.

Part of the uniqueness of Cohasset is in its small size, but that alone doesn't make it the "wonderful, wonderful" place Gallagher praises it for.

She singles out the team work between the administration, faculty, parents and students. Teamwork made easy because the students are, she said, outstanding.

While many educators would say a combined junior and senior high school is a deficit, Gallagher sees it as an advantage.

"The older students are really very protective of the young," she said.

More importantly, the school offers a continuity in curriculum and instruction possible only with the set-up Cohasset has.

"We have a six-year curriculum plan," Gallagher said. "There is no transitional crisis for our students as they pass from junior high to senior high. It's a steady, even growth."

Gallagher is so proud of her school and her students that she invites community people to come in any time. She wants them to know they are free to walk around and observe the kids as they are without advance warning.

"We are eager to have people come in," Gallagher said. "We are really proud of what we have here.

"These are good, good kids."

MAPC to lobby for funds

By Marilyn Jackson
Mariner staff

The 101-community members of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council have been asked to pull together their transportation priorities so that MAPC can lobby the state Executive Office of Transportation and Construction in their behalf.

"We're in danger of losing federal funds," said MAPC transportation specialist Dan Fortier.

Fortier's remarks preceded news reports last week that Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., had been informed by federal highway administration officials they were concerned that Massachusetts was not repairing its highways.

Federal funds are used to do much of that work, but because of the state's fiscal crisis, the state has not been able to provide its share of the funds.

Within the past four-and-a-half years the federal government has provided Massachusetts with nearly $391 million for road repairs which has not been committed to any specific projects.

"the federal money cannot be released because the state construction money is tied up," said Fortier. "That's why we need a gas tax."

He added that there is about $1.6 billion worth of traffic repairs in Massachusetts that have been identified.

In a good year, the federal government will provide about $140 million.

"So it makes it very important to identify the projects.

Two of the MAPC's subregions have drawn up their lists of highway and transit needs; but six have not, including the 10-town South Shore Coalition, he noted.

Fortier told members of the coalition's transportation subcommittee to push their towns into drawing up the list.

He added that Jean Christensen, the coalition's director, has been given a $6,000 grant to compile the list in the region.

She will visit each town to talk with officials, then return to the subcommittee which will pare the list to only 10 projects.

According to a 1989 federal list of projects earmarked for transportation improvements, the South Shore has between 10 and 15 projects.

"I know there are a lot more than that," said Fortier.

Among the listed projects were:

- Route 3 from Route 18 in Weymouth to Route 14 in Duxbury
- Route 53 from Queen Ann's Corner to the Hanover-Pembroke line
- Route 123 in Hanover
- Route 3 rest areas, northbound and southbound, in Norwell
- George Washington Boulevard in Hingham
- Route 139 in Pembroke
- Route 139 in Marshfield
- Route 3A over the North River between Marshfield and Scituate
- Edward Foster Road in Scituate
- Front Street in Scituate

"Sometimes a project is very much needed, but a region does not list it because it is so obvious," Fortier continued.

For example, he said, "I know the rail line is important. I urge you to say so on your list."

Theodore Dawe, a member of the Norwell planning board, told Fortier his town had appropriated $140,000 for a transportation study at the intersection of High and Grove streets in an effort to get the state to upgrade that location.

Dawe said it was a particularly dangerous intersection; there were 71 accidents at that location during the two-year study, including a fatality.

"We were close to getting the project on the state Department of Public Works' list, but the state had funding problems," said Dawe.

"No new contracts have been awarded for the last year-and-a-half," said Fortier. "That's another reason why we are looking at projects.

"With the current state of affairs, the state is getting a larger backlog.

Norwell selectman Rebecca Freed, who is chairman of the coalition, took issue with the federal list.

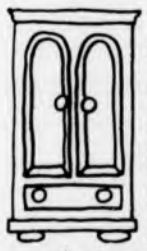
She told Fortier that Route 53 improvements are far more important to Norwell residents than upgrading the Route 3 rest areas.

Bill Grimes of Hingham's transportation committee noted two other problem areas: Cushing and Derby streets and North Street to the harbor.

"Every intersection is a candidate for the list," said Fortier.

He urged each town to list all problem areas — perceived and studied — so that everything would be on the record.

"There are dire transportation needs in the state of Massachusetts, and the towns are bearing the brunt of them.



The subcommittee will meet again at 7:30 p.m. May 3 at Norwell town hall.

South Shore coalition to try out co-op buys

The South Shore Coalition hopes to obtain a computer maintenance contract through co-operative purchasing for the 10 towns.

This would be the coalition's first effort in co-operative purchasing.

Co-operative purchasing and sharing large pieces of equipment – most likely public works equipment – were considered when the coalition was formed four-and-a-half years ago, according to coalition chairman Rebecca Freed of Norwell.

She said a subcommittee on co-operative purchasing recently decided computer maintenance was an appropriate item for bidding because there are many vendors and a considerable range in the price of individual contracts.

She asked the member towns to provide a list of their computer equipment in town offices – and in schools if they are participating – along with a list of vendors to service that equipment during the past five years.

Freed said the subcommittee would put a computer maintenance proposal out for bid May 15.

She described this initial effort as a "tryout" and a second proposal for a combined bid on sand and gravel would be advertised June 1, followed by a third cooperative bid on computer paper June 15.

Norwell executive secretary Annette Sexton will coordinate the first co-operative bid, handling all the specifications, advertising and other related matters.

Marshfield town administrator Clayton Carlisle has agreed to take responsibility for the next several cooperative bids.

"We realize there are many more goods and services that our towns use on a regular basis that would lend themselves to joint purchase," said Freed.

Such items include salt, tires, catch basins, landfill cover, gasoline, fertilizer, plow blades, stationery supplies, toilet paper and hand towels.

For further information or to participate in the planning process, call Jean Christensen, executive director of the coalition, at 659-4909.

The remainder of the budget is made up by memberships, contributions from individuals and corporations, class fees and benefits.

The center also rents out its facilities for meetings, weddings, receptions and birthday parties.

Recently, the Polaroid company helped sponsor the all New England juried photography show. The center hopes to encourage more corporate sponsorship.

"For businesses, it's a nice place to support," Valentine said. "One gift supports the arts on the whole South Shore."

The arts aren't something to support only in flush times, according to Valentine.

"A society isn't remembered by its balance sheets, but by its cultural achievements." she said. "To put the arts on the back burner is just wrong.

"The arts deserve support in these trying times."

Frederick Healey, senior vice president of South Shore Bank, accepts a certificate of appreciation from Lanci Valentine, director of the South Shore Arts Center, for his support of the arts through the center's programs.

VOTE YES FOR COHASSET
SUPPORT OUR TOWN AND SCHOOLS

VOTE YES ON QUESTION 1-LEVY OVERRIDE

- A YES vote will support the town budget as recommended by the Advisory Committee and the Board of Selectmen.
- A YES vote will maintain most town services. However, the approved school budget did mandate the following cuts for next year:

Business Education Teacher	3/5 Position High School
Foreign Language Teacher	3/5 Position High School
Industrial Arts Teacher	1/2 Position High School
Home Economics Teacher	1/2 Position High School
Curriculum Coordinator	Elementary School

These cuts have already been made for the 1990-1991 school year.

- A YES vote will require a $120,000 override. The cost will be 13 cents per $1,000 evaluation or approximately $26 per year on a $200,000 home.

Failure to pass the override will result in an additional $60,000 cut from the school budget, causing further reductions in faculty and staff. The Superintendent has proposed these additional cuts:

Art Teacher	Part Time Elementary School
Music Teacher	1/2 Position Elementary School
Physical Education Teacher	Part Time High School
IMS Math Aide	Elementary School
Library Secretary	High School

These cuts will seriously weaken the art, music, phys ed and math programs.

VOTE YES ON QUESTION 6-DEBT EXCLUSION

- A YES VOTE WILL INSURE VITAL REPAIRS TO THE OSGOOD SCHOOL

An override does not repeal Proposition 2-1/2; it is part of the law. It gives you, the voter, a direct role in establishing a 1991 budget that will meet our needs as a community. Stop the "incremental dismantlement" of the Cohasset school system. We all have a stake in preserving the quality of life in Cohasset.

Historical Society presents "Bellarmine House" tour

On Sunday, May 6, the Cohasset Historical Society will present a tour of the house and estate known today as the "Bellarmine House," a 19th century seaside estate near Cohasset Harbor.

Of America's native born 19th century architects, Henry Hobson Richardson ranks among the highest. Louisiana born, Harvard educated (he was a member of Hasty Pudding Club), and Paris trained, Richardson became an adopted Bostonian in his later years and was responsible for the design of numerous prominent buildings in the Massachusetts area.

Richardson's architectural designs ranged from railway stations to gatehouses, hotels to classroom buildings at Harvard, churches to summer cottages, among which were massively built Romanesque designs in stone.

He also built using wooden frame, and of his houses that rivaled the largest and most elaborate, was one on the shoreline at Cohasset.

At the peak of his creative career in the 1870s and '80s H.H. Richardson's buildings in eastern Massachusetts included Boston's Trinity Church, Quincy's Thomas Crane Library, Harvard's Sever Hall, and a complete group of buildings together in the small town of North Easton.

Among his wooden buildings was a great estate house in Cohasset, built at the height of the town's "summer colony" era. This house was constructed at Hominy Point, at the north edge of Cohasset Harbor, for Dr. John Bryant of Boston and Cohasset.

Dr. Bryant, whose wife was a daughter of the eminent American landscaper Frederick Law Olmstead, himself was a prominent yachtsman and sportsman. (H.H. Richardson and Olmstead often collaborated on designs for buildings and land).

Constructed in 1880, the great house at Cohasset's shore followed the custom of being given a name by its owners, and was called "Hominy Point."

The Bryants spent numerous summers at "Hominy Point." Then, during the time his large estate "Dreamwold" was being constructed at Scituate, financier Thomas Lawson leased the Cohasset estate.

Today "Hominy Point" is named the Bellarmine House, and is owned by Trustees of Boston College.

By special arrangement with Boston College, the Cohasset Historical Society will present a tour of the Bellarmine House and estate grounds from 2 to 5 p.m. on Sunday, May 6.

The cost of this special tour will be $10, in the form of a donation to the Cohasset Historical Society, 14 Summer St., Cohasset 02025.

During the event, guides will be present to assist visitors, and photographs are permitted. Parking will be available in the vicinity of Howard Gleason Road, the site of the estate. Refreshments will be provided by the society.

The shoreside estate, which commands a magnificent view of Massachusetts Bay, included formal landscaping, and its grounds will be included in the forthcoming tour.

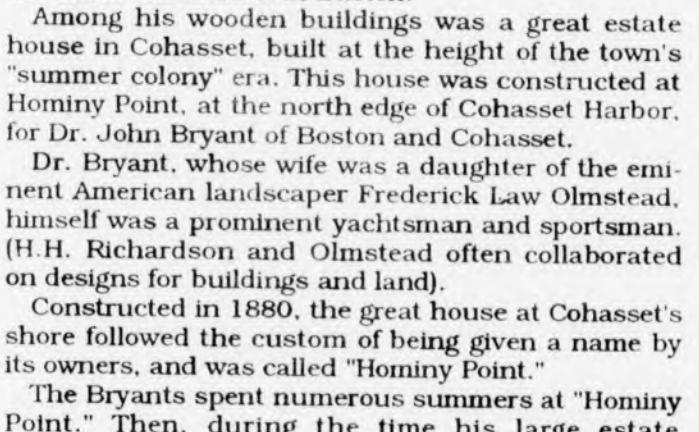
In the early 1900s, "Hominy Point" was bought by Lewis A. Crosset, industrialist and owner of Crosset Shoe Company, who owned the property until 1927, when it was purchased by Mr. and Mrs. William H. Brown of Boston and Cohasset.

The Browns resided at "Hominy Point" until 1932. During those years it was the site of flower shows and of beautiful formal garden plantings.

The Brown's daughter, Adelaide, whose wedding reception was held at Hominy Point, spent her honeymoon in a stone cottage still extant on the estate and afterwards named the "Honeymoon Cottage."

In May 1932, the Browns sold "Hominy Point" to the Trustees of Boston College. Since that time, the estate has been used by faculty and students of that educational institution for seminars, retreats and for recreation.

The modern name of "Bellarmine House" honors a 17th century Italian Cardinal, Saint Roberto Francesco Romolo Bellarmino, Catholic professor of theology and polemicist, Archbishop of Capua and teacher at Louvain and at the Roman College. Cardinal Bellarmine lived from 1542 to 1621.



The Cohasset Historical Society's forthcoming tour of Henry Hobson Richardson's 1880 house at Hominy Point offers a rare opportunity to see this unusual seaside estate designed by one of America's foremost 19th century architects. The Historical Society's telephone is 383-6930.

Endorsements

On Saturday, April 14, the voters of Cohasset will have the opportunity to chart a course for the town's future via the ballot.

We have heard what the candidates have had to say about the direction in which they want to take the town, what they would do to help solve Cohasset's problems.

In reporting the news of the town, we at the Mariner have seen many of the candidates in action as political office holders over the years. And we have encountered the new challengers along the campaign trail.

Our's is just one opinion we hope you will take into consideration when it comes time for you to make your choices on Election Day.

SELECTMAN

Of the three candidates running for the two open seats on the Cohasset Board of Selectmen, Jane Goedecke and Martha Gjesteby deserve your votes.

We believe Goedecke will be a terrific selectman. Her recent experience as chairman of the advisory committee has given her great insight into how the town budget is put together and how the town operates.

In these tight fiscal times, it will be helpful to have a selectman with a strong link to the budgeting process.

What struck us about Goedecke as a member and then chairman of the advisory committee was her forthrightness — her direct, common-sense approach to solving problems and her honesty and openness with those who went before the committee.

Goedecke comes across as a team player who, as selectman, will ensure that the governing of the town is an inclusive activity. If Cohasset is to overcome the challenges it currently faces, then its leaders will have to be willing to tap all resources to come up with solutions.

Gjesteby, long a devoted public servant in Cohasset, has the background and the knowledge the board will require if it is to formulate new ways of meeting the town's needs.

As a selectman and member of the South Shore Coalition, the Metropolitan Area Planning Council and the Old Colony advisory committee, and numerous other town committees and organizations, Gjesteby has gained more insight into issues such as affordable housing, public transportation, regionalization and waste management than perhaps any other civic leader on the South Shore.

During the past three years, we have observed the manner in which the chairman (Burt Pratt) has continually stifled Gjesteby.

We look forward to Gjesteby evolving into a more effective spokesman for her constituency. The problems Cohasset faces demands that she be a leader and a problem solver during the next three years.

Like Goedecke, Gjesteby also comes across as one who would allow the governing of the town to be an inclusive operation. And as selectman, she has been a champion of open government and always has treated those who have gone before her board with respect.

This endorsement is not meant as a denouncement of the other candidate, Burt Pratt, and should

State insurance: highway robbery

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Commentary

Don't move to Massachusetts, unless you bring your walking shoes.

The Attorney General's office and representatives from the Massachusetts automobile insurance industry have just sentenced all new residents to six years of financial penalties — without possibility of parole.

Depending on when you moved here and when you acquired your Massachusetts driver's license, a two-driver family, who moved to Massachusetts within the past two years, could be paying a penalty of about $450 this year. That figure rises with each driver in the household.

The insurance industry came up with the new plan, entitled the 'Safe Driver Insurance Plan,' which intends to transfer the burden of unsafe driving onto the back of the dangerous driver.

No argument.

They came up with what they refer to as a 'ladder system' which rates drivers based on six years of driving history.

Those with a clean slate are placed at step 9; new drivers start at step 15. Drivers with multiple moving violations and accidents can go as high as step 35.

NEWLY LICENSED ARE PENALIZED

The trick is that the history has to be on Massachusetts roads, so newly licensed Bay State drivers are penalized.

The flaw in the plan is that new residents are placed at step 15 — what is called the neutral step, simply because the state either says it does not have access to their driving record in another state or if it does, says the information from that state may be incomplete. But the state — and insurance industry — seem to have no problem finding out a driver's history when they want to. After all, most companies write policies in many states.

So despite the fact, new residents may have been driving considerably longer than the six year trial period and have flawless records, Massachusetts is going to treat them as insurance risks and penalize them — in the pocketbook — until they have accumulated a six-year history on Massachusetts roads.

This action, which does not afford new residents the same rights and privileges as existing residents, is not only unfair, it may be illegal.

"I think there's a lawsuit there," says Attorney Alan Rolm, a member of the Lawyers' Committee on Civil Rights in Boston.

MAY BE UNCONSTITUTIONAL

Rolm said the plan appears to be unconstitutional and may be in violation of the 14th Amendment which guarantees equal protection under the law.

Attorney Lewis Victor, past president of the Plymouth County Bar Association, agrees.

"I think there are legitimate constitutional arguments," says Victor. "An argument could be made that this is not equal protection under the law."

Victor said under the Interstate Commerce Clause, citizens cannot be discriminated against because they are from another state.

"They (new residents) are discriminated against because the state does not have a driving record on which to base the credit," he said.

TOO LAZY TO FIND OUT

And what does the insurance industry say?

They admit they are simply too lazy to find out.

"It's not that we don't want to give credit — we just can't trust the information either way until we are able to arrange legal compacts (with other states) to get the full (driving) history," said Ruy Cardoso, vice president and chief actuary of the Automobile Insurer's Bureau, an industry association.

"And even if legal things were in place there is no good method of affecting electronic transfer," he said. (Twenty years ago I worked in the insurance business in California and we were able to get information on out-of-state drivers at that time — computers have come a long way since then.)

And Cardoso admits, insurers are willing to punish the good guys just to make sure that none of the bad guys get away.

"The basic problem is we can't discriminate well those with truly clean records and those who are lying about it," he said, ignoring the obvious fact that the insurance industry's standards are higher than those used in every court in the world. People can be sentenced to death based on sworn testimony — but they can't get insurance credit in Massachusetts.

ROBBED AT GUNPOINT

"Not everyone would benefit if we don't collect from people who lied," said Cardoso. "There's always a group or sub group who are losing, but in our viewpoint the plan is fair to most people." Yes, and 'most' people aren't robbed at gunpoint, but we still make it illegal.

Thanks for support

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Rotary Club and the roadrace committee, I want to express our most sincere gratitude to the residents of Cohasset for the support and warmth they gave the over 900 runners.

Without the special warmth that is Cohasset, the event would not be the success it has become.

Special thanks to the fire, police, park and highway departments for their assistance. They are departments the entire town may take pride in.

Our gratitude to Don Harold, The Muncey Family and Roy Fitzsimmons for the endless hours and planning.

This annual ritual of spring could not exist without the generous support and donations of the local merchants and the Mariner's pre-race promotion.

Our heartfelt thanks to the entire community.

Pratt is a good man who deeply cares about Cohasset. He has been greatly involved in a number of issues, including the court action involving the Curtis Estate and the town's efforts to provide state-mandated affordable housing.

But in his three years as selectmen chairman, the governing of the town has not been an open and inclusive affair.

His well-publicized derision of Cohasset's so-called "Johnny-come-latelys" only serves to divide the community at a time when the selectmen will have to reach out to all segments of the community for help.

HEALTH BOARD

William Baird has done an excellent job as a member of Cohasset's health board, and should be rewarded with another term.

Baird came into office on the tide of anti-Cohasset Heights Landfill sentiment. At that time when residents' emotions over the issue were at a fever pitch, his voice was one of reason. It still is today.

His credentials alone are impressive. As president of a local environmental engineering and hazardous waste management firm, Baird has the knowledge and background the job demands.

Throughout his tenure, we have been impressed with his breadth of knowledge and with his respectful attitude toward everyone who goes before that board.

Although there is only one seat open on the health board at this time, the other candidates, John McNabb and Hugh Morgan, should be commended for their interest in serving the town.

McNabb's environmental background and interest and Morgan's concern for finding cost-effective solutions to Cohasset's environmental dilemmas might be welcome on one of the many volunteer study committees in town.

LIBRARY TRUSTEE

There are four candidates running for three open positions on the Paul Pratt Memorial Library Board of Trustees.

We endorse Sheila Evans, Doris McNulty and Lucille McLoughlin.

Evans, who is running for re-election, said her 10 years' experience on the board has been invaluable and will help get the library through these difficult financial times.

As the library staff works to complete a computerization project, that continuity and experience will come in handy.

McNulty, who worked as a professional librarian with the U.S. Navy, and also is running for re-election to the board of trustees, is a good choice to keep the library in ship-shape condition.

McLoughlin, who has spent a lot of time as a volunteer at the library, will be a good addition to the board of trustees, having witnessed the programs and operations of the library from several different angles.

We hope that Sigrid Carey, the other candidate, will not be discouraged from seeking to serve the public in Cohasset.

Perhaps as a library volunteer she could share her experience as librarian for the South Shore Spinners and editor of their newsletter to make the Pratt Library even more of a jewel than it is already.

By Alix White
Special to the Mariner

I went to see Bob and Martha Hurtig this week to share in their composting stories:

Her mother had a small city lot in Boston with two apple trees in the yard. In the fall, she would put the rotting apples in a low corner of the lot.

As she grew, Martha noticed that the low part of the lot had become level with the rest of the yard with dark, usable earth made from compost.

Martha's uncle on his farm in Randolph was scientific about his compost. It was in 2-foot x 3-foot bins.

Whenever the family came to visit, she remembers, they were taken over for a mandatory session at the compost bins. They would see the beautiful dark earth that came from composting vegetable scraps, leaves and animal waste.

Complete composting was not always the way at the Hurtig household. When they moved to their seaside home, they remodeled the kitchen with all new appliances. That included the garbage disposal.

Garbage disposals are those grinders in your sink that seem to whisk all your waste away, when actually they go to our septic system and float on the top as solids, and often clog the pipes to the leach field. It can cost thousands of dollars to repair a clogged system.

One Christmas Day, the Hurtig's disposal broke. "It was a sign," said Martha. "We took out the disposal and have been composting ever since."

The key to their composting success is convenience and attractiveness. There is a tucked-away place near the kitchen for vegetable scraps that she uses for potting soil in her flower boxes when the composting is "done." The leaves raked up near the rhododendron bushes are simply swept under the bushes.

The marsh grass at the shore gets raked into the beds nearby. The Hurtigs prefer the soft yellow color of the grass to the darker wood bark mulches that are commercially available.

The wild ducks also help in the yard work! They eat the nut of the acorns and leave the tops as more mulch.

When asked if people starting out could compost, the Hurtigs immediately responded with an emphatic "yes."

CARE
to Recycle Everything

What about families with both parents working? Bob responded, "It's important to get your priorities straight. Do you pay to have your lawn mowed, raked, and then the compostable material hauled away (at your expense, of course) and then pay to go to the gym for the exercise you didn't get gardening?"

Martha said again and again: "Anyone here in town could find a small spot for composting."

Trouble shooting at the RTF

Troubleshooting at the RTF: We are asked to take off all lids on our containers: glass, plastic, and steel/tin cans. Someone brought 150 baby food jars with all the lids on, and it takes the monitor hours to undue them. No lids please!

Also, no plastic bags in the recycling please. Put them in with the trash, or better yet, reduce your plastic consumption by asking for paper bags at the store and reuse these to recycle your newspapers.

You missed the point

To the Editor:

After reading your April 5 editorial "No Big Deal" relating to the upcoming override vote in Cohasset, it is clear to me that you have missed the whole point of Prop. 2 1/2.

The important issue is not whether one or another town will vote for or against an override, but that the voters have been empowered, through the vehicle of town meeting, to set their own tax rate.

Each individual has the right to stand up, voice his opinion in an open forum, and debate opposing views. Collectively we then cast our votes to decide.

A few citizens have spent the time to sit on town boards to gain intimate insight into the issues. Many of us have attended town meeting and read and learned about these issues.

Most of us have exercised our right to vote according to our interests and the interest of our town.

Annually, the budget is proposed; each item carefully weighed and measured in full public view, and then decided by majority rule. A balanced budget. No excuses.

The commonwealth should pay heed to the example of these towns. If our elected representative would strive to replicate this process perhaps we could balance the state budget as well.

MASSPIRG, a public interest research group, supports the new ladder system as it pertains to Massachusetts residents with a driving history in this state.

"It is our position that drivers should be rated on individual driving records. This is the fairest way to apportion insurance costs among consumers," says Josh Kratka, an attorney with MASSPIRG. "But not taking out-of-state records into account is an unfair approach.

"It seems to me if the vast majority of Massachusetts drivers are good enough to get the credit (at Step 9) then the system works against people from out of state," he said.

MWRA launches contest

The eighth annual water conservation poster contest sponsored by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority is underway.

Contest entry information has been sent to public and private schools throughout Massachusetts.

"The MWRA poster contest, seeking creative and original art work about ways people can save water and the importance of water in society, has been expanded this year to include a special essay contest about the Boston Harbor project," said Paul F. Levy, MWRA executive director.

The poster contest is open to students in grades kindergarten through eight, with prizes awarded in three categories—K through three, four through six, and seven through eight.

Students in grades four through eight are eligible for the essay contest. Prizes will be awarded in 2 categories—4 through 6, and 7 through 8.

Entries will be judged on clarity of message, originality, and quality of work. There may be only one entry per student, per contest; but a student, if eligible, may participate in both the poster and the essay contests.

First prize in each category is a $200 savings bond. Second prize is a $100 bond. Third prize is a $50 bond. Other outstanding entries will be eligible for honorable mention.

All students who participate will receive certificates for their efforts. Entries will be judged by an impartial panel of educators, conservation and environmental experts, and MWRA staff members.

The deadline for entries is Friday, April 20. As in the past, this year's award ceremony will be at the State House in Boston, as part of water conservation week.

Last year's poster contest, sponsored by the MWRA, which supplies water to 44 communities in Massachusetts and sewer services to 43 communities, attracted 3,900 entries from 54 Massachusetts communities.

Entries may be sent or delivered to Teresa Quinton, MWRA School Programs, Charlestown Navy Yard, 100 First Ave., Boston, Mass. 02129. For contest details, call 617-242-SAVE.

Post 28 holds road rally

Explorer Post 28 of Cohasset will be conducting its 20th Old Colony Council Safe Driver Road Rally on May 6 from noon to 4:30 p.m. at the South Shore Music Circus lot in Cohasset.

This event has been very popular over the yeas in testing a driver and his navigator in their ability to follow a course of about 50 miles at a safe speed on a timed basis (timed at less than posted speed limits on route).

Judges are stationed at unannounced check points along the course to verify time and safe-driving.

The driver must be licensed in Mass. and the vehicle must pass state inspection.

Navigators may be 14 or older. At least one participant must be a registered Explorer BSA to qualify for trophies.

A test is conducted after the rally to determine safe drivers. Such events as parking, backing, driving blindfolded and musical chairs are included.

Entrants outside of Exploring are invited to participate but cannot qualify for trophy awards.

YPST begins season

The Young People's Summer Theatre in Scituate, is about to enter its 14th summer of educational youth theatre. Registration forms are now available. The group is open to youth from all area towns.

The evening program, for actors 13 to 22, will be Leonard Bernstein's musical "Wonderful Town." Based on the play "My Sister Eileen," the show originally played on Broadway in 1953 with Rosalind Russell and Edie Adams.

Donald Capen, YPST director, says the show is a natural for the group, which has gained a reputation for doing shows other groups don't ordinarily attempt.

"It's got a great brassy score," Capen said, "typical of Bernstein and somewhat reminiscent of "West Side Story" although "Wonderful Town" came first.

"And this year there's no gimmick to attract the audience--it's an old-fashioned, funny, and musically exciting show, with lots of roles, and lots of dancing," Capen said.

The show includes the songs "Swing," "Wrong Note Rag," and "Conga" — all with large dance sections including the jitterbug. "We're looking for all types of talent this year."

In addition, the theatre is planning that a one-act comedy to be produced to give those with "not quite so much" musical ability, but who demonstrate above-average straight acting ability, the chance to shine.

The children's program, which is conducted during the morning hours, also will return for its second year. This program is open to ages 7-11. The classes will meet three times a week and will give the children a chance to act and sing in a workshop atmosphere, then perform in a mini-show at the end of the program. The workshops will be divided into two sessions, one for ages 7 and 8, the other for 9 to 11.

Advance registration for ages 13 to 22 will be $45 and will be accepted through June 1. Then, a walk-in Registration (at $55) and an orientation meeting will be held Monday, June 11 at 7 p.m. at the First Congregational Church on Country Way.

Auditions for casting will be held Tuesday and Wednesday, June 12 and 13 starting at 7 p.m. "Wonderful Town" will be presented over the first weekend in August.

Advance Registration for ages 7 to 11 will be $100 and also will be accepted through June 1. The sessions will begin during the last week in June and run through the end of July. All fees are non-refundable.

Registration forms, schedules and detailed information can be obtained by writing YPST, Box 41, Scituate 02066, or by calling 826-7983.

How much money is planted in your yard ?

Count it up. A couple of flowering shrubs, a hedge and a maple tree from the nursery could amount to as much as $600. You've probably made a considerable investment, in plants alone. A living investment that needs attention to grow.

Take this little quiz, to find out if your landscaping investment is increasing or decreasing in value:

- ☐ Are any of your bushes yellowish?
- ☐ Do any of your trees or shrubs have dead or dying branches?
- ☐ Did your flowering shrubs fail to bloom as well as expected ?
- ☐ Are insects nibbling holes in the leaves ?
- ☐ Are the leaves and branches sparse or stunted ?

If you answered yes to any of these, call us for a free , no-obligation survey and price quote. Our ornamental tree and shrub inspection, pest control and fertilization programs are designed to promote healthy and attractive plants. And healthy landscaping means a healthy increase in your property's value.

Harbour choral concert

The Harbour Choral Arts Society, a 60-member community chorus, will perform a spring concert at 8 p.m. on Saturday, April 28 at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Cohasset and at 8 p.m. on Sunday, April 29 at the Carter Memorial Methodist Church, Needham.

Featured on the program will be the Requiem by Maurice Duruflé. David Carrier, organist, will accompany the chorus.

A spring motif will be featured on the rest of the evening's program. The chorus, under the direction of Ken Clinton, choral director at Hanover High School, will perform "The Spring Time of the Year," by R. Vaughan Williams, "Now is the Month of Maying," and "My Garden," both composed by Carol Nicholeris, a member of the Harbour Choral Arts Society tenor section, and "A Prayer for Spring," a poem by Robert Frost with music composed by Mr. Clinton.

Currently completing their third year, members of the Harbour Choral Arts Society have delighted audiences with performances of such choral works as Brahms' "German Requiem," and Thompson's "Frostiana." The group has been working on the haunting Duruflé composition since January and members are looking forward to performing the piece which features one of the most beautiful and difficult organ scores in the modern music repertory.

Tickets for previous concerts have consistently sold briskly. Those wishing to attend either of the concerts are advised to reserve tickets by calling 878-6331. Prices are $5 for adults and $4 for students and senior citizens. Tickets will also be available at Hanover High School, beginning April 23.

Safe boating course

The United States Coast Guard Auxiliary, Flotilla 1208, and the Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor a six-session safe boating course this spring, offering certification by both the Coast Guard and the commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The course will be offered to both youth and adults, however certification in this course is mandatory for 16-year-olds and under, who wish to operate a craft powered by 25-horsepower or more.

U.S.C.G.A., Flotilla 1208 instructors will teach the six-session course, scheduled to begin Tuesday evening, May 1, at Cohasset High School. (Audio-Visual Room). Class will meet each Tuesday and Thursday evening, from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m., from May 1 through Tuesday, May 22.

To register, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791 as soon as possible, as class will be limited in size, and participants will be enrolled on a first-call basis.

There will be a $15 per person fee for this program that covers the cost of the text book and class materials.

Checks for payment must be made out to: U.S.C.G.A. Flotilla 1208.

While the class is designed for children, youth and adults, it is suggested that children aged 12 and under be accompanied by a participating adult.

Certification cards will be issued, and both the Coast Guard and state recognize the safe boating certificate. Further, for those who may be interested, certification for this course will allow you a discount on your boat insurance premium of 5 to 10 percent depending upon your insurance carrier.

Woodworker visits CHS

Peter Follansbee, traditional woodworker, was a visiting artist at Cohasset High School recently.

He arrived with 100-year-old tools, a log, and an idea to build a chair from a tree. Throughout the day, students assisted in splitting and shaving the leg to create the chair parts. By the end of the school day, a ladderback chair was nearly completed.

Follansbee spoke about the beauty and durability of handmade furniture. He also discussed with students the importance of quality in our society and the fact that we seemingly don't appreciate fine quality.

Students were able to use the tools, and work together to create a beautiful, strong chair.

The ladderback will be on display in the artroom at Cohasset High School after Follansbee weaves the seat. The PSO curriculum enrichment committee sponsored this event.

Brock said that before the existing rule came into being, chiefs could be paid less than the workers they supervise. "You need good people running your departments."

Although they nixed most requests, voters did agree to spend $14,500 for a new police cruiser, replacing one with more than 100,000 miles, and to spend $11,000 to refurbish the fire department's ladder truck.

Earth Day marks Anniversary

By Marilyn Jackson
Mariner staff

Earth Day on the South Shore will be celebrated a little bit earlier than the officially declared day of April 22 which marks the 20th anniversary of the first Earth Day.

An afternoon of entertainment, discussions and displays designed to heighten environmental awareness will be presented from 1 to 5 p.m. Saturday, April 14, at the South Shore Natural Science Center on Jacob's Lane, Norwell, off Route 123.

The theme is "Our Earth — Don't Waste It."

The program is sponsored by the center and four other groups — the Massachusetts Audubon Society's South Shore Sanctuaries based in Marshfield, the New England Wildlife Center in Hingham, the 10-town South Shore Coalition and the Leagues of Women Voters from Hingham, Weymouth and Scituate.

Admission is $5 for adults and $3 for children. Members of the sponsoring organizations receive a $1 discount.

Vicki Smythe of the New England Wildlife Center will talk about the effect of toxins on wildlife, and Maria Valenti of Westborough will discuss waste reduction in the home, "One Person's Impact."

Don Hickman of the Audubon Society will discuss the economics of recycling business waste.

A panel discussion with the three speakers will be held at 3:20 p.m.

Interspersed with the talks will be entertainment.

Evi Seidman who bills herself as a standup environmental poet will be one of the entertainers.

Earth Tunes, a musical group that teaches youngsters about the environment, will sing near the end of the day.

During the afternoon children will go on nature walks, play environmental games and make "musical" instruments from recycled materials.

The activities will be held rain or shine. Tents will be set up in case of inclement weather.

For those who would rather browse, there will be exhibits and resource information on environmental products.

"One of the exhibits will feature three tables — red, yellow and green — displaying inappropriate and appropriate items," said Jean Christensen of Marshfield, director of the South Shore coalition.

Plastic dams for the toilet and aerators for faucets, both which conserve water, would be on the green table, Christensen explained.

She said Ocean Spray, the cranberry growers' co-operative, has underwritten the cost of producing 2,000 reusable canvas bags which will be sold at the Saturday Earth Day celebration for $5 each.

One one side of the bag it says, "Our Earth — Don't Waste It" with a design of the globe, and on the other side it identifies Ocean Spray and the various sponsors of Earth Day.

Tedeschi Food Shops will carry them in their stores.

"The idea is to take the bag to the supermarket to carry home groceries, rather than use paper or plastic bags," Christensen said.

She added she hopes there will be string bags also on display. "People take string bags shopping in Europe all the time."

Betsy Detwiler, co-owner of Buttonwood Books of Cohasset, will have a display of various books with environmental themes, such as 50 Simple Things You Can Do To Save The Earth.

She said she would like to see the book in public and school libraries throughout the area.

Several other businesses have contributed funds for the event.

They include Abington Savings Bank, Lincoln Trust Company, Rockland Trust Company, Shaw's Supermarkets Inc., South Weymouth Savings Bank, Stop & Shop Supermarkets, Waste Knott and World Wide Waste Inc.

Boston Whaler Inc., Continental Cablevision and Waste Management Inc. contributed money for educational materials.

Christensen said the groups decided to hold a South Shore Earth Day early so as not to conflict with the major observance eight days later.

According to a bulletin printed on recycled paper, Boston Earth Day kicks off at 9 a.m. at Franklin Park and Franklin Park Zoo, with entertainment, games, hikes and zoo activities, followed by an environmental march.

Those festivities will be held from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., but the zoo remains open until 5.

An environmental fund-raising earth walk will step off at 10:30 a.m. from Cambridge to the Hatch Memorial Shell.

And Cambridge Earth Day will be held from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

At the Hatch Shell, a concert and rally will be held from 1:30 to 6 p.m., featuring national and local musicians.

Sidewalk Sam, who creates art with chalk, will help participants create the "world's longest mural" on Storrow Drive, which will be closed.

And, on Saturday, April 21, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., a festival will be held at the Boston Harbor campus of the University of Massachusetts.

For more information about other Earth Day events, call New England Earth Day at 542-6333.

Earth Day 1990

By Sharon Becker
Earth Day Steering Committee
Special to the Mariner

The first Earth Day in 1970 was the largest organized demonstration in history. More than 20 million people participated in the event that gave birth to the modern American environmental movement.

In response to the concern voiced by Earth Day activities, the Environmental Protection Agency was created, and the Clean Air and Clean Water acts were passed.

Earth Day 1990, to be held April 22, will mark the beginning of a long-term commitment to building a safe, just, sustainable planet.

The event will launch a "decade of the environment," where scores of important issues will be addressed, and important decisions will be made.

Every individual and every town has a role to play. It is important that each person becomes informed about our environmental problems and solutions so that responsible action can be taken.

These educational events were organized to help inform people about the environment we live in. There will be time for discussion and questions at the event.

The Cohasset Earth Day Committee welcomes your suggestions and comments. All events are free.

Groups willing to adopt a site simply agree to look after it from time to time, possibly by scheduling a fall and spring cleanup. Two or 20 persons may choose a site.

On Earth Day itself, April 22, it is hoped that everyone, especially families, will help celebrate by joining any group at any site.

Ceremonies begin at 2 p.m. with a simple Earth pledge at the Meeting House Pond on the common.

Participants will help plant a special Elm tree on the common, disperse for clean-up and meet at the Recycling/Transfer Facility for closing ceremonies at 4 p.m. and receive a free T-shirt.

A perfect day, a perfect race

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

April Fool's Day dawned cool and cloudy. It was perfect weather for the 900 registered runners who were setting out for the Rotary Club's 14th annual "Road Race by the Sea."

The race takes runners on a 6.2 mile circuit of some of the most beautiful sights in Cohasset. The New England Runner rated it the most scenic course as well as putting it in the top 40 races in New England. And the timing of the race makes it a perfect tune-up for the Boston Marathon.

The course record is 29:30, set many years ago by Bobby Hodge of Boston. Race director Peter Logan said runners find the east wind off the ocean will slow them down even if the hills on Forest Avenue don't faze them.

Many runners come back to run the course again and again.

"I've run it almost every year except one," Mary Cowan said. "I love it."

Cowan has been running for twelve years just for the fun of it. She only runs two races-- the "Road Race by the Sea" and the Fourth of July race in Hingham.

She finds the Cohasset race is beautiful and challenging.

"It's fun, but there are a lot of hills," Cowan said. "And somehow we never seem to have any sunshine.

Her husband, Tom, is also a runner. They don't really keep track of their race times, but just for the record, Mary ran a 59:07 race while Tom finished his race in 46:20.

Newcomers to town also discovered the race this year.

A friendly crowd, good weather and beautiful scenery turned out for the runners of the great 1990 Cohasset Road Race By The Sea.

Janet Hock, a recent arrival from Connecticut, was Cohasset's top woman finisher with a time of 45:14.

Hock said the time was slow for her.

"When I came to Forest Avenue, I slowed down going up the rollercoaster there," Hock said.

Hock raved about the beauty of the course, but also said the friendliness of people who came out to cheer the runners along really made it special.

She isn't the only runner commenting on the crowd. Logan said he has received 25 letters from runners praising the friendly atmosphere.

Hock plans to run the race again next year. She also wants to share the ambience of her new hometown with friends from Connecticut.

In the meantime, she will continue putting in 25 to 30 miles a week to get ready for the James Joyce race in Dedham.

"I understand that instead of giving you your time at the mile marks, they recite Joyce," she said laughing.

According to Logan, the race also attracts a big contingent of young runners.

A tough opener for the Skippers

By David McKee
Mariner staff

Opening day was not kind to the Cohasset High School baseball team as it fell behind early and lost a tough 9-1 decision to Scituate.

The Skippers struggled at the plate all day against the Sailors as they only managed one hit. But what a hit it was.

Leading off the fourth inning, senior Michael Ellinger connected on an offering from Scituate's Michael Coyne and launched a ball deep to right center that landed in the road that surrounds ball field.

"I knew it was gone as soon as he hit it," coach Ted McDermott said. "He has shown some power in batting practice. But he really got a hold of that one. When he's at the plate, he does not get cheated with his swings."

Ellinger's blast was one of the few highlights for the Skippers as they struck out 11 times and could not solve the three Scituate pitchers.

"Our poor hitting could somewhat be attributed to first game jitters," McDermott said. "But we really weren't selective at the plate. We took too many strikes and were not as aggressive as we should have been. I thought the work we did outside got us ready; the kids were really stinging the ball. But it wasn't there against Scituate."

Scituate took a 1-0 lead in the first inning as they successfully pulled a suicide squeeze against Ellinger, who got the opening day start on the mound for the Skippers.

Scituate got four more runs in the second with a big two-run triple by Tim Beal being the key hit.

Scituate got another run in the fifth inning, as Ellinger was lifted for senior Noah Hill. Hill shut down the Sailors in the sixth inning.

Sophomore John Geary pitched the seventh for the Skippers and gave up the final three runs of the day to account for the 9-1 final.

Ellinger did not pitch his best ball, according to McDermott. "He looked like he was fighting himself out there," he said. "He wasn't as fluid as had been in the gym. But that's just the gym. He will improve, however. I have confidence that he can throw better than he showed out there."

In Ellinger's five innings he allowed two earned runs on eight hits, walking three and striking out two.

Despite the tough opening loss, McDermott did see some positive things come out of the game.

(See page 25)

Softball squad sags in Scituate

By David McKee
Mariner staff

The Cohasset High School girls softball team went toe to toe with South Shore League rival Scituate on opening day, but when the dust settled, the Skippers found themselves on the canvas as they lost 21-10.

"We got off to a good start," coach Mike Gill said. "We got some good hitting early and looked good out there. But that one inning killed us."

That one inning was the third inning when Scituate lit up the Skippers for 12 big runs.

At the time the Skippers were actually ahead in the game as they led 5-2. Some key hits and daring baserunning gave them an early lead as Scituate had trouble getting out of the gate.

But the complexion of the game changed in a hurry in the Scituate third.

The key hits in that big inning were provided by the same player, Katie Devine, who launched two three run doubles.

Those hits plus several errors and some walks, opened the floodgates.

"We are a young team and we had trouble in the field," Gill said. "We threw the ball around a little bit too much."

The Skippers now trailed 14-9 and Scituate continued to pour it on against sophomore pitcher Bridget Leung who pitched until the fifth inning.

"She had a few good innings out there," Gill said. "But she got tired and walked a couple. That combined with some errors opened the door for Scituate."

Junior Nicole Barry came in to relive Leung.

"Nicole came in and restored order for us," Gill said. "It was a tough situation to come into, but she made the most of it."

Despite the big 12 run inning, the Skippers did not lay down and die on offense, as they rattled off 10 hits and scored 10 runs on the day.

"I was very pleased with our offense," Gill said. "It was spread around and for a young team in our first game, you can't complain."

Junior captain Barbara Lagrotteria led the way

Friendly folk and sweet scenery highlight race

"The kids seem to get into it," Logan said of the Cohasset youngsters. "They really want to participate."

This year, 42 kids under 14 came out to run. The top runners in that age group were Ryan Freeman, 12, with a finishing time of 45:47 and Kate Carroll, 13, who ran the race in 51:20. The youngest finishers included nine-year-olds, Andrew Singleton and Bobby Morgan.

The Rotary Club sponsors the race as part of an ongoing fundraising campaign. The race generates about $5,000 a year that is used for scholarships and the support senior citizen and youth projects.

"It's a really nice day," Logan said.

Cute kids' clothes tempt parents to buy

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Looking at the clothes in available in children's sizes is enough to make me wish I had another little girl.

My daughter is nearly 20 and hasn't wanted to wear anything I'd pick out since she emerged from early adolescence.

It used to be such fun buying for her things I wish I had growing up — like the rabbit fur muff she had at seven or the lacy Easter dresses she wore year after year — each one outdoing the one before.

Some years my daughter and I selected long and elegant designs. Some years we chose above the knee styles.

My 11-year-old son has already taken control of his wardrobe selection. But then, buying for him just doesn't have the vicarious thrill she gave me. Orange is in for him this year.

Gray and black have always been his favorites.

Jeans have to be ragged or at least acid washed.

He has his own sense of style.

The Talbots catalog for spring sticks with the traditional approach.

For young girls rhinestones are getting more attention this season, according to Grace Anderson of Kids Ahoy in Hanover.

"If it's not meant to be a durable item — if it's a birthday present or other special outfit — some parents tend to go along with it," Anderson said. She said the girls who wear 4 to 6X are fascinated by the glittering clothes.

Pastels are popular for boys this season, Anderson added. "Pink, green, pale yellow and madras are all in. At the moment, we have some wonderful toddler outfits in madras."

She said the nautical look for boys and girls is the rage.

Purple is one of the biggest colors, with neons being shown especially for the older children.

"The brighter the better this year," Anderson said.

For boys, the jungle look is quite fashionable.

Christine Saulnier of Little Bits in Duxbury favors classical styles for children.

Little Bits shows sizes up to 6X for girls and 7 for boys in new clothes with a related consignment shop offering all sizes of high quality almost new clothes.

"The matching look is popular, headbands, socks, sneakers all go together this year," Saulnier said.

"There are some very pretty laces — lace petticoats that are meant to show below the dress. For the little ones there are bright, cheerful colors."

She said she finds parents want good quality clothes that will be durable.

She offers credit towards merchandise for her consignment customers.

I wish I had a consignment shop in the neighborhood when I parted with all my daughter's outgrown Polly Flinders dresses. It was hard to let go of that time in our lives.

Pretty, frilly things always seemed fashionable to me. This year I'd fit right into the in style.

Bright colors are in

By Jeanine Weaver

Boys styles and colors couldn't br brighter!

There's neon yellow, lime, orange and pink in everything from shorts to baseball caps.

Our spring jacket business has been great mainly due to the demand for bright colors.

Although Gates in North Scituate has been in business for over 75 years, the boys 4 to 7 department is a new venture with similar styles and labels to what is offered in the 8 to 20 sizes with names like Ocean Pacific, Cotter, J.G. Hook and Levi.

This season the fabrics include suplex, jersey and soft washed cottons. Jerseys are over-sized while popular shorts tend to mimic boxer short styles with elastic waists.

A new pant picking up in popularity is the skids. It's a very casual pant that looks and fits like hospital pants or men's pajama bottoms. Skids come in checks, madras and Mexican prints — very comfy.

What the older boys wear filters down quickly to the younger ones.

Dog obedience classes

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for beginner and intermediate dog training classes to be taught by Laurie Cleveland.

Classes will be held Wednesday evenings, at the GAR Hall, Scituate, beginning April 25.

Beginner classes will be from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., and the intermediate/advanced class will be from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m., both on Wednesday evenings.

The fee for the eight week program will be $30. Make your checks payable to the town of Cohasset and bring them to the first class, April 25.

Participating dogs should be a minimum of three months of age. The purpose of beginner classes will be to teach novice pet owners basic obedience and responsible pet ownership.

Subjects to be covered are proper use of voice corrections, stay commands, getting the dog to come, heel, etc.

Helpful hints on ownership and responsibility also will be included. The training will include those exercises beneficial to the pet owner as well as to those thinking about eventually showing their dogs in obedience. The intermediate/advanced class is designed for dogs that have completed the recreation department beginner class.

For the classes, owners are required to have their dogs equipped with a humane choke chain. The proper size of the chain is determined by measuring the dog's neck and adding four inches. Absolutely no spike collars allowed.

The department also suggests that the handlers wear comfortable shoes and clothes for these sessions.

For all classes, the fee is $30 per dog for the eight-week, one-hour-per-week program.

To register, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791. Classes are limited in size. Non-residents will be accepted on a space-available basis.

"I saw some progress out there," he said. "Noah Hill looked good pitching in the sixth and will probably get the start in our next game (against Duxbury)," he said. "(Senior) Mike Rollandeli really had a fine game behind the plate. He must have thrown out three or four runners trying to steal.

"Also our freshman in the infield, John Maynard at third, Peter Fahey at short and Joe Andrade at second really handled themselves well in the field. And our outfield handled everything with no glitches."

McDermott is hopeful that the Skippers bats will come alive as the season progresses.

"I think the hitting will come around when we see more live pitching and the warm weather comes," he said. "With more at bats the kids will get more comfortable and then we can get some runs on the board."

The Skippers will take on Duxbury to finish this week. Then after the school vacation, the Skippers begin their league schedule.

"I've been looking at our schedule in the small division and some teams look loaded," McDermott said. "I hope we can turn things around."

with a single and a home run.

Freshman Alison Ludlow added a single and a triple.

Juniors Maureen Long and Kerri Miele and freshman Jen Knowles all added basehits to the cause.

Despite the loss, Gill has faith in his losing pitcher Leung.

"She's young but she has a lot of potential," he said. "I think she will find a groove. I'm committed to giving her a full shot at pitcher. She is our future and I have faith that she will turn things around."

As for the fielding, which contributed some unearned runs for the Skippers, Gill said it will certainly improve.

"The weather has not been kind for us especially with our fielding," he said. "But the mistakes we made are mistakes that can be corrected in practice."

The Skippers face Duxbury to finish up the week. Then after the school vacation, begin their league schedule.

"We have some tough games coming up," Gill said. "But I'd like to think we can compete with anybody in our league and have some fun at the same time. I'm encouraged with what I saw in our first game,especially with our hitting. From there we can continue to build."

Soccer, despite snow

By Carol Riley
Special to the Mariner

An unwelcome blanket of wet snow on Saturday forced cancellation of most Coastal Youth Soccer League games.

A few, however, were rescheduled to Sunday with the following mixed results:

Girls under 19-1 lost a tough game to Plymouth 8-1. Cohasset's lone goal was scored by Kara Manion. Coach Paul Barry said that Kristen Martin played great defense.

The Girls under 19-2 division, coached by Bob Beggan, scored a big 7-1 win over Kingston, with all players doing an outstanding job.

Boys under 16-1 team, coached by John Murphy, lost 5-1 to Plymouth. Despite the score, goalkeeper Chip Anderson made many saves.

Girls under 16-1 team lost to a combined Pembroke/Duxbury team 4-0, with Jennifer Anstead playing great defense and Shona Hislop strong at forward.

Jennifer Troy of Hingham, playing for Cohasset, played well at midfield, according to coach, Jack O'Brien.

Girls under 14-1 squad, coached by Tom Killea, lost 3-0 to Hanover, despite outstanding defense by Sara Atherton and Marnie De Michele. Sara Kirk was strong in goal.

This team is beginning to show good offensive attacks with breakaways led by: Megan Staunton, Cilla Goff, Vickie Maynard and Becky Golden.

Disneyworld trip is reward for students

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

This year some very special people who attend Scituate high school will be getting a very special graduation gift. It is a gift they have earned in every sense of the word.

While high school graduation is an accomplishment for any student, Mark Adams and Donald Cahalin of Scituate and Danny Patrolia of Cohasset faced obstacles that most students will never experience. All three have severe handicapping conditions.

They will be celebrating their accomplishments with a three-day trip to Disneyworld. Their classroom teacher Mark Swift, Louise Bates, who is the vocational coordinator for the special education program in Scituate, and Alice Thibodeau, a nurse-practitioner, will accompany them.

The young men, their teachers and families have raised the funds for the trip through a variety of means. Redeeming cans and bottles is the biggest money-getter.

"Stop & Shop has been very good. They allowed us to put a cannister out to collect the yellow register slips people get when they return cans and bottles," said Bates.

The bottles and cans can also be dropped off at the high school.

Bates and teacher Kathy Hughes estimate that it will take 14,000 bottles and cans to finance the trip. They're still short of their goal.

Other ways the students have been raising money is through a contract to put out a church mailing, penny drives and selling goodies that they make in their classroom kitchen.

The favorite goodie is a towering creation known affectionately as "Death by Chocolate". Although the recipe is a secret, it has been described as layers of chocolate mousse, chocolate meringue, crushed Heath bars and a host of other ingredients to sate even the piggiest of chocoholics.

For those who aren't into chocolate, the chefs can whip up a glazed strawberry cheesecake upon request.

Another popular method of getting quick money is disposing of tickets to sporting events and concerts that people aren't able to use. The teachers announce the availability of the tickets in the morning over the high school loudspeaker and take bids. By lunch time, the project is richer as a happy fan hauls off the tickets.

Straight cash donations are also welcome. All monies are deposited in the Special Education Activities Fund. Any "excess" in the trip fund will be used for next year's trip when seven students are scheduled to go.

The trip to Disneyworld won't be the first trip that the special education department has planned.

Louise Bates, Danny Patrolia, Mark Swift, and Mark Adams are planning a special graduation trip to Disneyworld. Alice Thibodeau and Donald Cahalin will also make the trip.

The department sponsored its first graduation trip four years ago. The students went to Washington, D.C.

There have been two subsequent trips to Disneyworld. Those trips involved 12 and 9 students, respectively. Each trip requires a one-on-one chaperone. Often a nurse must go in order to handle medications and medical complications.

Although the trip will be exhausting, Mark and Danny are clearly excited about going.

If you ask Mark about the trip, his eyes sparkle and he says "Yeah."

If you would like to contribute to the fund drive for the trip, contact Louise Bates at 545-3300 for more information.

Easter at LDS church

The Easter service at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will celebrate the atonement of Jesus Christ with two anthems: "God so Loved the World," and a sacred English song, "All in An April Morning."

Bishop Dan Garrison has requested speakers, Lee and Linda Bird of Quincy and David Edmunds, 22, of Duxbury, recently returned missionary from Fiji, to speak on "Overcoming spiritual death through the glorious atonement of the Savior."

Other musical numbers will be provided by Michele Jodrey of Quincy and by Russell Fletcher of Milton, both members of the congregation.

The service will begin at 9 a.m. at the chapel at 379 Gardner St., Hingham.

Jews remember great escape

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

As day gave way to night on April 9, Jews all over the world gathered with family and friends to celebrate the first seder, or ceremonial dinner, of Passover. The holiday continues until sundown on April 17.

Passover is one of the most important holidays in the Jewish calendar. Through the rituals and readings that are part of the seder, Jews identify with the bitterness of their forebears' slavery in Egypt and the struggle for freedom.

It is also a holiday where the observances are home-based rather than in the synagogue.

Although the historical events took place some 4,000 years ago, custom demands that Jews say the celebration is in remembrance of "what the Lord did for me when I was a slave in Egypt" rather than what was done for their ancestors.

By reliving the past, the Bible says, "You shall not oppress a stranger, for you know the feelings of the stranger, having yourselves been strangers in the land of Egypt."

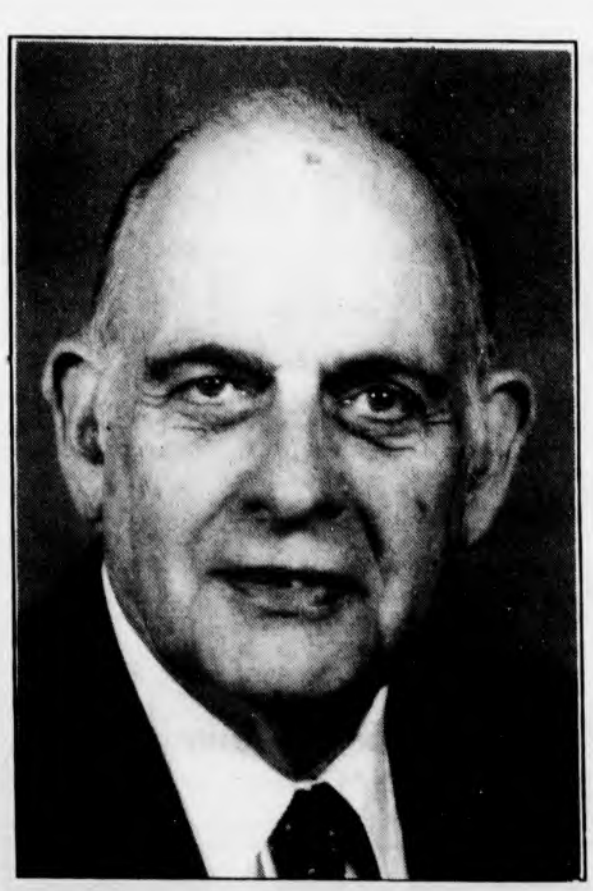
Not only is the past relived through the festive meal, but observant Jews are called to observe the holiday through special diets and housekeeping routines.

During the eight days of Passover, observant Jews will not eat leavened bread or foods that can ferment, such as cabbage, corn, peas and beans. Those foods are banished from the home.

This is done in memory of the haste in which the Jews had to leave Egypt. It is said that there was no time to let the bread rise before fleeing from the pharaoh. Therefore, the Jews baked their bread unleavened.

Because nothing should be used that has been "tainted" by leavened foods, special dishes and utensils are used throughout the holiday season and food that is "kosher for Passover" is purchased.

At the same time that Jews are called upon to remember the bitterness of slavery and the sweetness of their freedom, so too must they remember that others still suffer. An essential component of Passover celebrations is the commandment to feed the hungry and care for the unfortunate.



Some families set a place at their holiday table to represent the people who are suffering, whether it is from a lack of physical freedom, or hunger, or fear, or prejudice. The prayer is that they, too, will be freed to savor the sweetness of freedom .

Sara Katersky, Nitzi Keating and Abbie Reis get into the Passover spirit at Temple Sha'Aray Shalom's model seder on April 5. Sara is reading from the Haggadah, or Passover story. The seder also featured a seder plate containing foods symbolic of the Jew's struggle for freedom from slavery in Egypt. On the plate are a lamb bone in memory of the special Passover sacrifice, a roasted egg symbolizing regular holiday offerings that were made in the temple, greens to signify this is also a festival of spring, bitter herbs as a reminder of the bitterness of slavery and charoset (a mixture of apples, nuts, honey and wine) which is sweet to the taste, but looks like the mortar used by the slaves who built the pharaoh's monuments. Charoset reminds Jews that all life is a mixture of the bitter and the sweet.

Voters choose new selectman, bury overrides

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Cohasset voters went to the polls in near record numbers April 14 and left after voting in a new selectman and rejecting six of seven override articles.

Former Chairman Burt Pratt was defeated for re-election, as Martha Gjesteby and former advisory committee Chairman Jane Goedecke carved out victories for the two seats on the board of selectmen. With Goedecke's election, the board has its first-ever female majority.

Goedecke drew the largest number of votes with 1,694 residents voting for her while Gjesteby received 1,384 votes. Pratt trailed with 1,216 votes.

Pratt, who has served the town in various capacities for more than 40 years, was gracious in defeat.

"I congratulate Martha Gjesteby in successfully defending her seat on the board and Jane Goedecke for her impressive victory as challenger," he said. "Difficult decisions lie ahead and I wish the entire board well as they search for solutions to today's vexing problems."

Pratt said he was leaving the board of selectmen, but not his record of service to his community.

"As for myself," he said, "I have many interests in the community and will remain active. Anyone who expects me to fade away like the proverbial old soldier will be disappointed."

Other election victories found William Baird (1,299 votes) handily defeating competitors John McNabb Jr. (635) and Hugh Morgan (446) for another term on the board of health.

In the remaining contested race, incumbent library trustees Sheila Evans (1,724) and Doris McNulty (1,705) were joined by 82-year-old newcomer Lucille McLoughlin (1283) for the three

Laugelle announces he is the subject of a state ethics probe

In a surprise announcement, Selectman Rocco Laugelle confirmed he is the subject of a conflict of interest investigation by the state ethics commission.

Laugelle told fellow selectmen that he does not know the particulars of the accusation, but wants residents to know that he is cooperating fully in the investigation.

Laugelle was unavailable for further comment.

According to Selectman Diana Kornet, Laugelle has always been diligent in avoiding votes on any matter in which he might have a conflict of interest.

"The state ethics board has to investigate whenever anyone makes a complaint," Kornet explained.

Laugelle also scotched rumors circulating around town that he plans to resign from the board of selectmen. He announced at the April 17 meeting that he plans to run for re-election next year.

Town departments scuffling for the scraps

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

By a narrow margin of eight votes, Cohasset voters rejected an override of Proposition 2 1/2 that would have added $120,000 to the town's operating budget.

The vote came as a surprise to many of the override's supporters.

"I was disappointed that the $120,000 override didn't go through," advisory committee Chairman Ray Kasperowicz said. "I think we did a good job for taxpayers and people who need town services. I thought voters would respond."

Confident that the town would support at least one more override-- especially given the modest amount being sought, school officials and members of the Parent School Organization did not mobilize a pro-override campaign this year according to PSO president Patricia Baird. Last year, the PSO was instrumental in getting a $203,000 override passed.

With 1,262 voters opposed and only 1,254 favoring the permanent override of Proposition 2-1/2, voters at the April 23 town meeting session face the need to make $120,000 in cuts or tap more of the town's free cash to make up the difference.

If voters go along with the most recent contingency plan drafted by the advisory committee, $30,500 will be lopped out of the school budget.

According to plans drafted when the school system expected a $60,000 reduction in its budget if the override failed, the following cuts are under consideration:

- a part-time physical education teacher at the high school;
- the library secretary at the high school;
- a special needs aide; and
- a math lab aide.

Additional savings could be realized by:

- reducing the elementary schooi music teacher from full-time to half-time; and
- reducing the elementary school art teacher from Eastern Edison files a rate-hike request

Eastern Edison Co. has filed with the Massachusetts Department of Public Utilities (DPU) a request for an increase in the amount it charges customers for electricity.

Eastern Edison attributed the proposed increase to new rates filed with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) by Eastern's wholesale supplier of electricity, Montaup Electric Co. Eastern includes its wholesale costs when calculating the energy portion of customer bills.

If approved, the additional charge would increase the monthly bill of an Eastern Edison residential customer using 500 kilowatt-hours of electricity per month by $2.47, or 4.8 percent, from $51.25 to $53.71.

Eastern Edison requested that its increase be effective when it is charged on Montaup's new rates.

Montaup requested that FERC make its rates effective when the Seabrook, N.H., nuclear power plant enters commercial service, expected by mid-May.

More than one-third of the requested wholesale rate increase is for funds to finance conservation programs Eastern Edison administers on behalf of Montaup for retail customers.

Eastern Edison plans to seek DPU approval to pass through to its customers a $6.6 million refund it received for costs incurred during the April 1986 - October 2989 outage of Boston Edison's Pilgrim nuclear generating station.

Eastern Edison Co. provides electric service to more than 170,000 customers in the Brockton and Fall River areas. It is one of three retail electric utilities of Eastern Utilities Associates (EUA), an investor-owned holding company. Montaup is EUA's wholesale generation and transmission company.

FOR AN IDEA OF HOW DIRTY YOUR ORIENTAL RUG IS, RUB THIS AND LOOK AT YOUR FINGER.

Oriental rugs are constantly picking up various types of soil. Some are greasy and some are gritty. But they all can eat away at your treasured possession.

For your Oriental rug to retain its beauty and value, it should be cleaned at least once every three to five years.

At Grillo Oriental Rug Cleaning, we carefully examine each rug, then give it the most suitable treatment. Sometimes that means gentle machine-washing, other times it means our 'Art-Safe' hand-washing. And our exclusive equipment and methodology enable us to remove the deep-set grit that others miss.

Furthermore, unlike harsh commercial cleaning, our individualized, museum-quality care is always safe, always effective.

For more information, or to have your rug picked up, call (617) 871-6500. Outside this area code, call 1-800-649-7707.

positions on the board. Sigrid Carey received 991 votes.

All other candidates were uncontested.

Top vote-getter in the election was highway superintendent Harold Litchfield. Litchfield, who received 2,195 votes out of a possible 2,620, will celebrate his 30th anniversary as highway superintendent on November 11.

According to town clerk Frances Marks, the voter tally was boosted by a record number of absentee ballots.

Although 328 voters requested absentee ballots for the election that was scheduled at the beginning of school vacation week, only 199 ballots were actually returned and certified. Marks said a "normal" election draws approximately 130 absentee ballots.

The remaining items on the ballot were two nonbinding questions dealing with state aid for local communities.

Cohasset voters overwhelming agreed that no cuts should be made in local aid and that 40 percent of any new state tax revenue should be earmarked for local aid.

More than 55 percent of the town's 4,750 registered voters turned out to defeat override articles totalling $1.9 million. The only override to pass was an $85,000 article for repairs to Osgood School's aging heating system and decrepit bathrooms.

"The vote indicates voters are pulling any switch they can find to say 'no', they don't want to spend any more money," advisory committee Chairman Ray Kasperowicz said. "The only exception is that people generally are willing to protect Osgood School as a facility."

The defeated override articles included:

- $120,000 for the town operating budget;
- $16,850 to buy an all-purpose lawn maintenance vehicle;
- $70,000 to replace the town ambulance;
- $396,000 to renovate the police-fire station;
- $480,000 to close and cap the Cedar Street landfill; and
- $110,000 to expand the town cemetery.

According to newly re-elected Selectman Martha Gjesteby, the town can afford to wait a year on some of the items, but others must be acted on soon.

"We have to cap the dump," she said. Capping an abandoned dump site is mandated by state law.

Gjesteby also said it is essential to move forward with plans to renovate the police-fire station.

Selectman Diana Kornet agreed.

"People are going to the ballot not realizing state law requires us to do some of these things," she said. If the town fails to cap the landfill voluntarily, "we could incur more costs through fines and increased costs when the state orders us to do it."

Selectmen are meeting to see if it is possible to reduce the price tag on the dump and police-fire station projects before raising them at town meeting April 23. One strategy would have some of the work handled by the town highway department.

Many town officials and residents expect town meeting to be long and noisy as voters grapple with money issues.

New copy deadline

Within the next few weeks, the Cohasset Mariner will be going to fully computerized pagination. New technology is great, but it means a change in the rules.

From here on out, anything submitted for publication must be in by mail, rail or drop-box by 12 p.m. (HIGH NOON) on Mondays. We can not guarantee publication of anything submitted after that time.

All submittals must be typed and include a name and phone number for verification.

two days per week to one day.

On the town side, the advisory committee recommended the town eliminate $40,000 from the street paving account, $10,000 from a proposed sidewalk building project, $5,000 from the board of health's engineering budget, a second police cruiser for a savings of $14,500 and a $20,000 paint job for town hall.

According to Kasperowicz, making the budget cuts necessitated by the override defeats will take some mental and philosophical toughness.

"I don't think there is any toughness in this town," Kasperowicz said.

Town officials expect to be heavily lobbied by special interest groups.

"I would not say it would be school versus town so much as department against department," Selectman Diana Kornet said. "Departments are already making nasty comments and little backbiting statements about each other."

Kasperowicz and selectmen Kornet and Martha Gjesteby expect non-union employees will lobby for an increased cost-of-living raise.

Kornet said with inflation running at 5.4 percent in the Boston area, "people are losing ground, not to mention not being paid for a job well done."

Kasperowicz said he had heard rumors around town that non-union town employees were thinking about unionizing. He couldn't confirm the rumors, but was not surprised.

"I think non-union employees in getting two or three percent increases may be getting unfair treatment in comparison with other groups," he said.

Kasperowicz lays the blame for that on the piecemeal way in which contract negotiations are conducted. He believes the town should establish a uniform percentage for all employee groups and hold firm.

"As long as you have the money you can give it," he said. "We don't have it."

Whatever happens, the advisory committee opposes tapping into any more free cash to fund the operating budget.

"We can't jeopardize the remaining free cash," Kasperowicz said. "We may need it later."

One step up, two steps back for Skippers

By David McKee
Mariner staff

It has been one step up and two steps back for the Cohasset High School baseball team so far this year.

After suffering a 9-1 loss on opening day, the Skippers dropped their second game of the year to Duxbury 10-2 to fall to 0-2 on the young season.

"Even though we lost, I'm encouraged with how we played," coach Ted McDermott said. "We showed progress from our first game and were right in this game until the sixth when they put it away."

The game was indeed close early on.

After a Duxbury homer in the first inning made it 1-0, the Skippers grabbed a short-lived 2-1 lead in the second inning.

In that inning senior Michael Ellinger led off with a single. Senior Curt Ludlow followed with a walk and senior pitcher Noah Hill sacrificed both of them over to second and third base.

A wild pitch brought in the first Skipper run to make it 1-1.

The second run came across on a sacrifice fly by junior Matt Berger.

Suddenly the Skippers were in the lead for the first time this year.

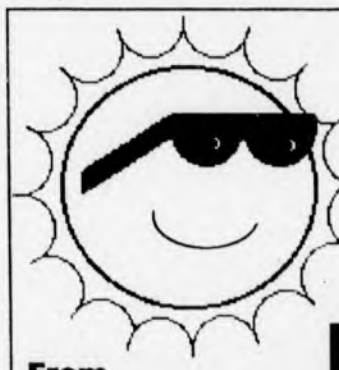
In their second, the Duxbury Green Dragons rained on the Skipper parade as they scored four runs to take a 5-2 lead.

The door was opened for the Dragons in the second by two Skipper errors and a walk, which led to one run. A three-run homer accounted for the other scores.

Skipper pitcher Hill, in his first varsity start, kept Duxbury off the board through the third, fourth and fifth innings. However, the Clipper offense had trouble getting going after the big second inning.

The game was still close entering the final two innings, but in the sixth the Dragons got to Hill for six hits and five runs to increase their lead to 10-2.

Trailing by eight runs, the Skippers had one last chance in the seventh but the lead was too large a burden to overcome. The Skippers went on for their second loss.



"I'm part to blame for that big inning," McDermott said of the five-run sixth. "Noah was cruising through five innings and had only thrown 63 pitches. I thought I could get a few more pitches from him, but they got to him in the sixth and put the game out of reach. It's just that when a kid is throwing that well, you want to stay with him and not bring someone cold from the bench. Especially when it is cold out."

Despite the big five-run inning that put the game out of reach, McDermott was pleased with the pitching of Hill, who was making his first varsity start.

"He was not overpowering but he threw strikes and until that last inning, had only given up two hits

WEED CONTROL

Nature has a solution.
Cows are great at nibbling weeds. And fresh milk is delicious. But not everyone is lucky enough to know a cow.

The Lawn Company has a more practical solution.
You'll be surprised at how healthy your lawn will look and how little it will cost. Our lawn program is scientifically designed to produce grass so lush and so thick that weeds are forced out.
We started more than ten years ago, right here in Southeastern Massachusetts. So we know the problems particular to this area.

We know when to treat your lawn for weeds and when it's just plain hungry for nutrients. And when there's no such thing as too much service.
Call us today for a free, no-obligation analysis of your lawn, trees and shrubbery. Find out how easy it is to have a Lawn Company Lawn.

First Baptist Church congregation welcomes new pastor

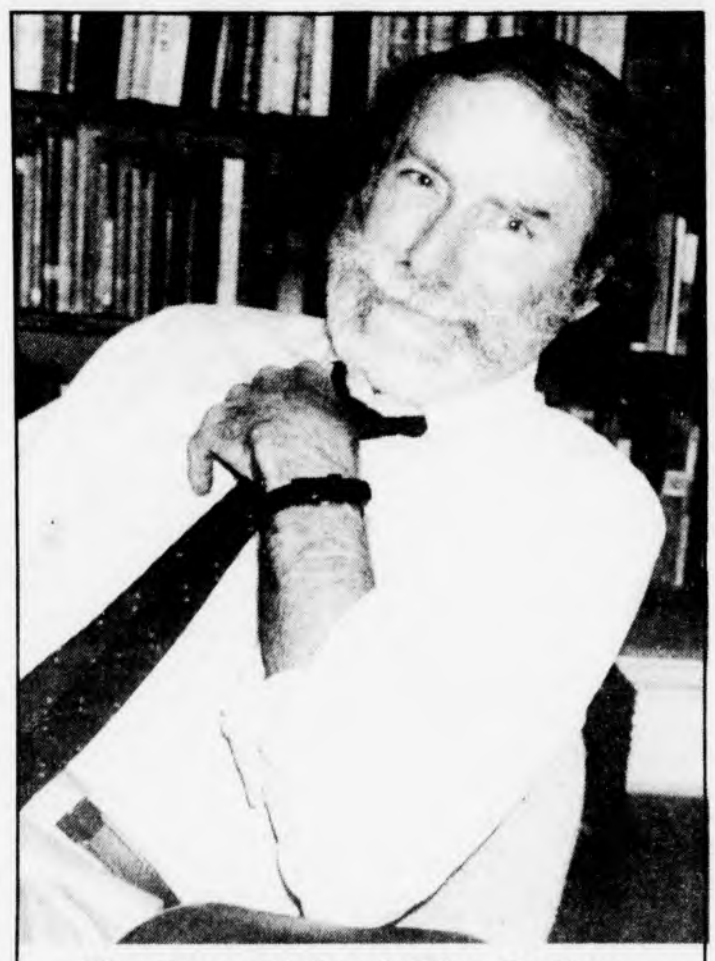
By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Sooner or later in everyone's life there comes a time for putting down roots. For the Rev. Richard Wise Dutton, the time is now and the place is Scituate.

Dutton arrived in Scituate in mid-March to take his place as pastor at the cozy, white wood frame First Baptist Church on Country Way. The church had been without a minister for the previous 18 months.

He also can be found in a wood-panelled study lined with books that range from tomes on pietism to the wit and wisdom of Snoopy to a how-to book on hot tubs and spas.

The decor is definitely eclectic— stuffed loons hold sway with a Mad magazine coffee mug, a computer and a stained-glass chalice. The telephone is always announcing its existence as people call to share their lives with Dutton, if only over the telephone wires.



Dutton's flock may be small, but it is definitely farflung. The 185 members of his church are scattered from Cohasset to Marshfield and beyond. Dutton definitely will get to know his way around the South Shore.

It's an experience he relishes.

"It's more of an older congregation, but there are four or five young couples with babies and 10 to 12 junior high school students," he said. He sees the multi-generational congregation as offering wonderful possibilities for an exciting ministry.

"The church's future is built around small group experiences," Dutton said. By coming together in these small groups, members are able to experience fellowship, develop a strong religious feeling and reach out to the larger community.

"These groups are not therapy, but a place to celebrate life and share solutions when there are problems," he said.

The Rev. Richard Wise Dutton

Reaching out to the larger community is important to Dutton. He hopes the little church will work hand-in-hand with town officials and civic organizations on social issues.

"I'd like us work with battered wives and affordable housing," Dutton said. "There is a rhythm to the faith. You have to journey both outward as well as inward."

Opening the church doors to the community is one way Dutton plans to promote community involvement and make his little congregation grow.

The church already opens its doors to Alcoholics Anonymous meetings, scout troops, and community organizations. Dutton believes the church building can be even more accessible.

One goal is to widen the circle of friendship by reaching out to Jewish, black and international groups.

"We can stimulate our faith when we learn from others," Dutton said. One of his hopes is to establish sister church relationship with churches in other countries like Hungary, Zaire, Poland and El Salvador.

Dutton brings a rich heritage and varied experiences to his new church. His father and both grandfathers were Baptist ministers. He says he felt the call to become a minister very strongly when he was in high school.

Dutton's first church was in rural Virginia. He was all of 24 and single, and a Yankee. Five days after he began, he was called to perform his first funeral. Starting out could have been scary, but he had his father to call on and found the older folks of his congregation encouraged, supported and forgave him as he learned to be a minister.

Many of the relationships he formed in that first church 20 years or so ago are enduring and sustaining.

Ministering has not always meant standing up in front of a congregation.

At one point, he felt called to become a drug rehabilitation counselor.

"It was very satisfying," Dutton said. In addition to counseling, he did education and prevention work.

Elizabeth Warren wants to keep Cohasset from going to the dogs

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

In September, Elizabeth Warren had to euthanize the cat that had been her companion for 13 years.

Warren and her cat might have had more years to share if it hadn't been for the dog who came onto Warren's property and broke the cat's spine.

Hoping to spare others the same sort of grief she endured, Warren got behind a movement to make pet owners more responsible for their wayward animals.

Warren and her supporters want town meeting to amend the by-laws to make dog owners more responsible for the conduct of their pets.

According to the animal control department report for 1989, 54 citations were issued to dog owners who violated the dog control law. The animal control officer also reported 22 dogs were struck and killed by autos.

The by-laws were amended Oct. 10, 1989, establishing that "No dog shall be permitted to run upon public or private property without the express permission of the owner, occupant or custodian of such property." The by-law also established a schedule of fines for violations.

The new by-law places the burden on the owner, stating "any owner of keeper of a dog who shall permit such dog to be in any street or public place without either being effectively restrained . . . or who shall permit such dog to run upon property of another without express permission of the owner or occupant of such property, may be punished by a fine of $25."

Warren said the change is necessary because under the the current by-law the victim bears the burden of informing the dog officer the animal lacks permission to be on the property.

According to Warren, the animal study committee supports the change.

Warren concedes the new by-law may be as toothless as the old since Cohasset only employs the animal control officer for eight hours per week.

"You can pass the by-law and it won't be able to be effective because the dog officer won't have the hours to chase the dogs that are loose," Warren said. "Unless the selectmen can get him more hours, he can't enforce the laws."

Warren hopes that the fees and fines brought in by active enforcement will support additional hours.

She knows some people oppose her article. She thinks they forget that Cohasset isn't the sleepy little community of yesteryear.

"When there were just a few people and a few dogs 40 or 50 years ago it wasn't a problem. But the town has grown so much," Warren said.

"It makes for safer streets. I would feel terrible if I hit a dog. And maybe a few cats will live longer."

Parish greets new pastor

develop more positive and healthy lives was so rewarding that Dutton later specialized in crisis intervention ministry.

In this case, rather than ministering to individuals in crisis he was sent to work with churches in crisis or transition.

It could be a church that experienced a schism between members, fired a minister or lost a long-time minister through death or retirement.

The crisis intervention program of the American Baptist churches sends a minister-at-large to the congregation on an interim basis.

"I would be assigned to a church with needs for reconciliation," Dutton said. "Together we would work on healing or design new goals."

After assisting the congregation through their time of transition, Dutton would move on leaving a permanent minister in his place.

After doing this for the past four years, Dutton decided he wanted a church of his own.

Dutton's style of ministering is not traditional. He doesn't see himself on stage with the congregation in the audience and God whispering stage directions.

"I see the congregation on stage, God in the audience and myself whispering stage directions," he said.

At the same time, he sees his role as one of listening, encouraging, supporting and serving.

"The pastor is like a coach or an enabler," Dutton said.

He sees his role as being within the New Testament tradition of church as a servant of society.

"The pastor works within the church to criticize, correct and heal the secular society" is how Dutton describes his function.

Pierson to host candidates

The four Democratic contenders for the State Senate seat being vacated by Sen. William Golden will be guests on "Pierson to Person" April 19 from 8 to 10 p.m. on Cable Television Channel 53.

Marshfield School Committee member John P. Creed, State Rep. Robert B. Ambler, State Rep. William J. Flynn, and Weymouth Selectman Brian T. MacDonald will appear on a two hour special edition of the program. Host Wigmore A. Pierson will moderate the debate on issues facing the district and Commonwealth.

The economy, new taxes, environmental issues, education, abortion, transportation and Proposition 2-1/2 are the principle topics of debate.

"Pierson to Person" airs weekly each Thursday night, beginning at 8 p.m. on Channels 53 and 3 in Cohasset.

❑ Congratulations go to the Snowdale family this week! On March 22 David Snowdale was born to Linda and Alan, and David joins his brother Michael, who is five years old.

Nancy Snowdale is a proud grandmother, as is Mary Herzog Jell, who is here from Washington State to help take care of the latest member of her family. Grandfather to David is George Herzog, formerly of Cohasset who is now settled in New Hampshire. Best of luck to all of vou, and enjoy that baby!!

❑ The final skating competition of the year took place a few weeks ago, it was the Lower Cape Competition.

Once again the Cohasset contingent did themselves proud, what a talented group of girls they are!

Lauren Wood finished second in footwork VI and VII (l6-20 age group), second in freestyle VI, first in comedy, and first in precision team.

Kara Protulis finished first in comedy, third in footwork VII (13-15 age group), and first in precision.

Kim Ward was fourth in freestyle V (13-15 age group), and first in precision; and Michelle Ward finished first in freestyle III (9-12 age group), fourth in interpretation III and first in precision.

Congratulations go to all of you girls, once again you did an outstanding job!

The sad news is that that was Lauren Wood's last event as a high school skater, from now on she will be skating college competitions! Lauren is bound for UNH, where we know she will do a grand job. The rest of the girls mentioned above will have to get a new press agent....Lauren's dad, Peter, has been serving the role admirably for several years.

Paul will be a busy guy this vacation, his first game as an AAU Junior Olympic member will be held April 22 at Medway, and the team will go throughout the State. Let us know how your team does Paul, and you too, of course!

Gil has been awarded first prize in the three dimensional category at the South Shore Art Center all-new England juried show. The show will run through April 26; go in and take a look at it.

❑ Scott Fone was in town for the road race that was put on by the Rotary Club, and was pleased with his time...Scott has been doing a lot of running, and will enter a race similar to the Boston Marathon that will be in Maine (where he and his wife, Nanette, have purchased a new home). Keep up the good work, Scott.

❑ Once again we thank Wig Pierson for his coverage of the town election that was held last Saturday.

Interesting and informative, and he really makes you aware of what is going on in our town. Congratulations to all of the winners (there were no losers really, everyone should be applauded for caring enough about our town to run for office).

❑ Happy birthday to our son, Troy, who will be 23 April 19!

❑ We sure hope that Danny Patrolia has a super time when he goes with his classmates to Disneyworld as a graduation present.

Danny has worked hard to earn this honor, and we sure hope that he takes a lot of pictures so that we can all see the great time that he has.

❑ Sunday, April 22nd, is a day that no one in the Pompeo family will forget. That is the day that Roger and Ann's oldest daughter, Jeannine, is getting married. We wish Tom and Jeannine health and happiness, and a long and wonderful life together.

❑ Congratulations go to Lisa Swain, who has joined Pilgrim Health Care as a provider relations representative. She is responsible for physician recruitment and orientation as well as the ongoing support and service of Pilgrim Health Care's affiliated providers in the Brockton area.

❑ We salute Gerhard Birmann, the first male to become a member of the Community Garden Club.

We'll bet that other men will do the same, there are so many that love gardening and do an admirable job...

(See page 9)

How much money is planted in your yard ?

Count it up. A couple of flowering shrubs, a hedge and a maple tree from the nursery could amount to as much as $600. You've probably made a considerable investment, in plants alone. A living investment that needs attention to grow.

Take this little quiz, to find out if your landscaping investment is increasing or decreasing in value:

- ☐ Are any of your bushes yellowish?
- ☐ Do any of your trees or shrubs have dead or dying branches?
- ☐ Did your flowering shrubs fail to bloom as well as expected ?
- ☐ Are insects nibbling holes in the leaves ?
- ☐ Are the leaves and branches sparse or stunted ?

If you answered yes to any of these, call us for a free , no-obligation survey and price quote. Our ornamental tree and shrub inspection, pest control and fertilization programs are designed to promote healthy and attractive plants. And healthy landscaping means a healthy increase in your property's value.

❑ So many children had a super time last Saturday with the Easter Bunny! He was at Deer Hill School, and gave out candy and balloons and so much fun!

Hats off to the chamber of commerce for providing such a fun day.

❑ That's the news from here. Please call me with your latest event. That's what makes around town happen!

• Congratulations go to Robert Jordan, who was recently named honorary trustee of the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary (he had previously served as president and member of the infirmary's board of trustees since 1971).

Jordan is retired now, after serving as vice president of The New England Mutual Life Insurance Co. and he is a member of numerous boards...ask a busy person, as the saying goes!

• Once again, it's time to thank Wig Pierson for his coverage of the town meeting held last Saturday. It is grand to be able to watch the whole thing live if you are unable to get up there to take part.

Be sure to tune in this Saturday night to get the results of the town election, it promises to be a great evening.

• Congratulations go to Edith Sainteloi for wining the

A day for us all

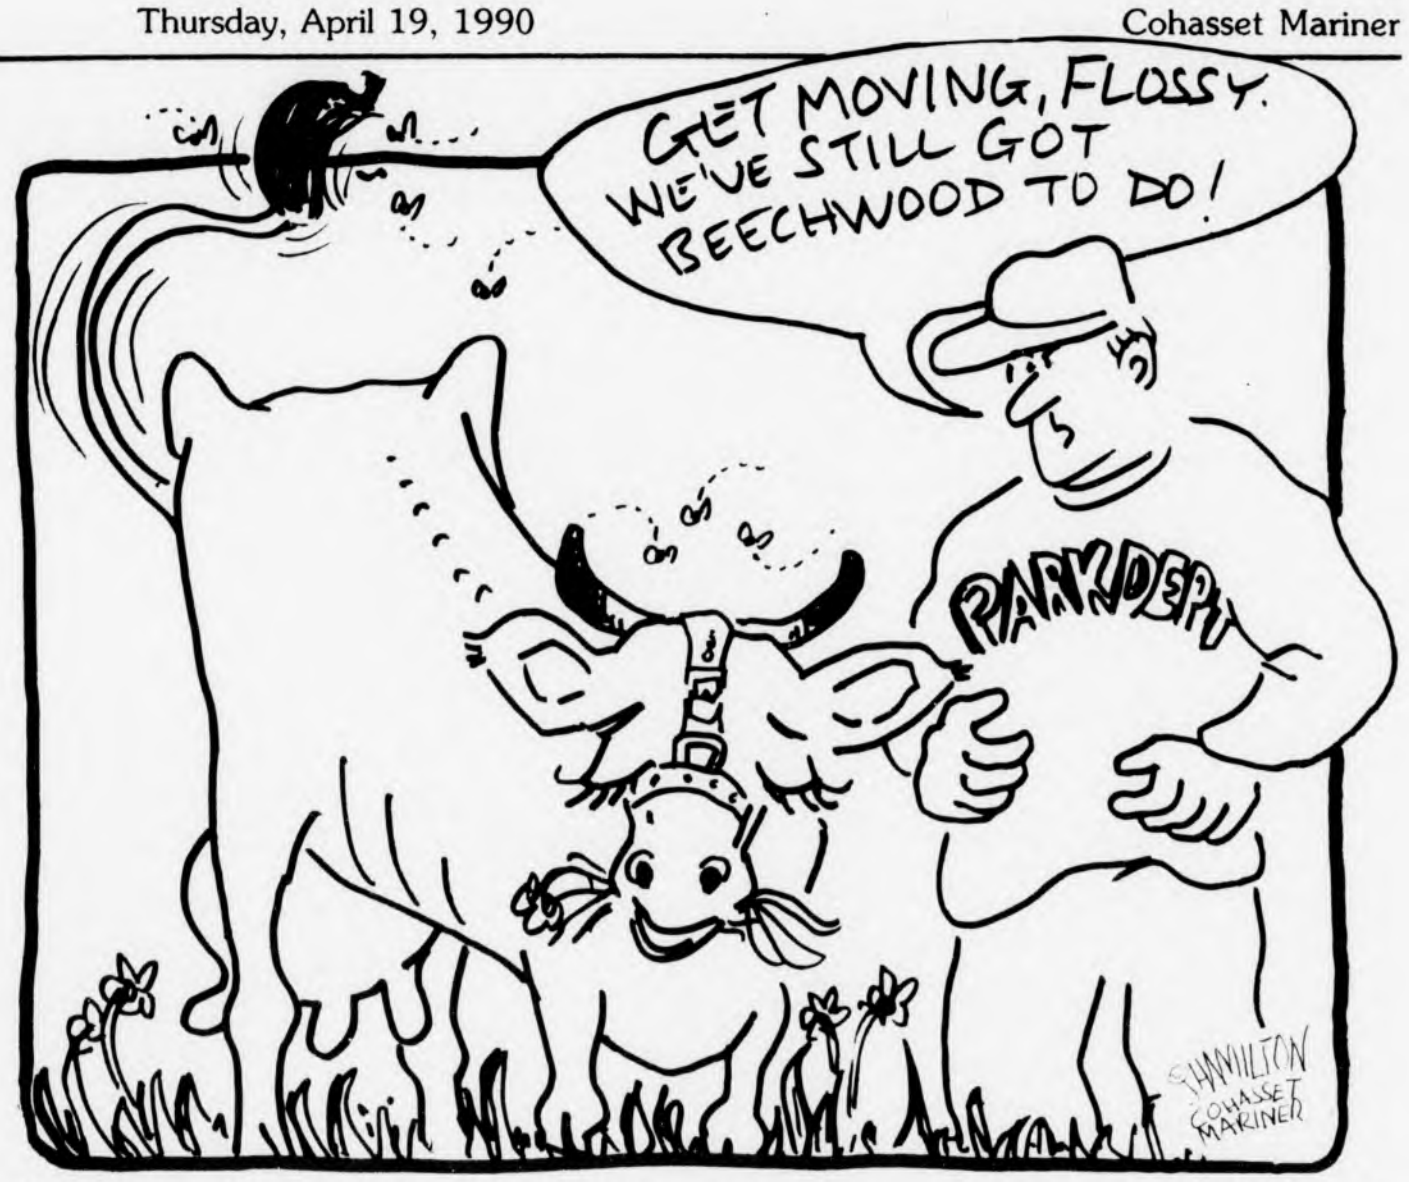
Now that the election is over and the decision on the Prop. 2-1/2 override has been rendered, it's time to get on to more important business.

Amid the hubbub of preparations for the continuation of town meeting April 23, we should take time to remember a very special day, Earth Day 1990.

This Sunday, April 22, marks the 20th anniversary of a nationwide demonstration in which thousands participated.

That demonstration sparked the creation of the Environmental Protection Agency, the Clean Air and Clean Water acts, and an unrelenting public focus on preserving and protecting the environment.

It was a good start.



Now, the entire world is planning to celebrate the 20th anniversary of the first Earth Day, and to kick off the decade of the environment.

It is encouraging to see that that spirit is alive and well in Cohasset. Sharon Becker and the health board are to be commended for their efforts to raise our consciousness about the preciousness of our planet--to get us thinking globally, but acting locally.

We also should praise those who are responsible for the Village Renaissance project. Soon, Cohasset will be spiffier than ever.

And that will be in no small part because of the

(See page 12)

Voters rejected the tree, park and cemetery department's proposed purchase of a $16,850 all-purpose vehicle that would trim and fertilize town properties.

Help launch the decade of the environment April 22

By Sharon Becker
Special to the Mariner

Help launch the "decade of the environment" this Sunday, April 22, and join in part or all of Cohasset's observance.

2 p.m.—Gather around the pond on the common, to the accompaniment of the carillon, for a symbolic tribute to the Earth.

2:15 p.m.—March to the flagpole for a tree-planting (because trees are such an important part of nature's balance, Earth Day 1990 proposes the planting of one billion trees worldwide). Dedication of the tree, donated by the Cohasset Garden Club, will include music.

2:30 p.m.—At the assignment table, choose an area of town targeted for clean-up. Zone captains will supply bags—one for recyclables and one for trash. There will be an opportunity to purchase a canvas "Cohasset Cares" tote bag—an excellent substitute for a plastic bag while shopping.

4 p.m.—Gather at the Cedar Street Recycling/Transfer Facility for a short closing ceremony and receive a free Cohasset Earth Day T-shirt, paid for by Cohasset Rotary Club.

Worldwide, Earth Day 1990 hopes to promote biological diversity, human health and regenerative agriculture by such specific accomplishments as:

a worldwide ban on chlorofluorocarbons;

reducing carbon dioxide emissions;

preserving old-growth forests;

a ban on packaging that is neither recyclable nor biodegradable and the implementation of strong, effective recycling programs in every community;

a swift transition to renewable energy resources;

a comprehensive hazardous waste minimization program, emphasizing source reduction; heightened protection for endangered species and habitats;

and a new sense of responsibility for the protection of the planet by individuals, communities and nations.

Let's hope Earth Day pledges insprie us through the year

To the Editor:

The extensive promotion and support of Earth Day on April 22 by the Mariner is very commendable. I hope that the participation of many organizations and persons on that day will help to dispel some negative attitudes recently expressed about Earth Day.

A Newsweek poll by the Gallop organization shows that the public still doesn't care too much about it. Of the 600 people surveyed, fully 73 percent said they have no plans whatsoever to participate in any

Letters

Earth Day observances and only 13 percent said the day would play a major role in solving environmental problems.

One reason for the general skepticism may be that Americans clearly think that the observance is only a public relations gambit.

Here is a monumental challenge to Earth Day promoters. One of its strongest supporters is the Environmental Defense Fund. Its executive director, Fred Krupp, notes in their latest newsletter, "On April 22, 100 million people in the 120 countries are expected to take part in Earth Day. Twenty years ago Earth Day was largely confined to the United States. This year it will be celebrated in Frankfurt, Prague, London, Tokyo, New Delhi, Santiago, Nairobi, Leningrad and thousands of other places..."

Mr. Krupp goes on to say, "What is Earth Day exactly? In a sense it's the first truly worldwide holiday, a day to celebrate the mutual interdependence of all species of the fertile globe we share. It's a mustering of forces too. A day of action. Earth Day will be the ultimate expression of the maxim, "Think globally; act locally.

"This message of April 22 will not be lost on the world's mayors, governors, legislators, and presidents. Environmentalism is a tide no elected official can swim against. It is the rallying cry of a vast and growing grass-roots constituency cutting across culture, nationality and language. It is the issue of the future."

Let's hope that our Earth Day pledges this year will inspire us to work throughout this year and every year to combat the destructive effects of cutting down the rain forests, soil erosion, loss of wetlands, dirty water, dirty air, acid rain and global warming.

Sincerely yours,
Chester W. Smith

Commissioners seek watershed purchase

To the Editor:

The Cohasset Board of Water Commissioners has sought for five years to purchase 37 acres of land adjacent to Lily Pond for the purpose of watershed protection.

An agreement with the owner, Mr. Edward Britt, has been reached for our purchase of the land in the amount of $1.9 million. The owner presented an appraisal of $3 million and the town presented one for $2 million. After lengthy discussions, Mr. Britt agreed to the board's offer of $1.9 million.

To those who question the price, a number of alternatives were discussed, including the purchase of portions only. It is one package and this is the agreed price.

We do this, for we feel that development of these lots is inevitable at sometime. This may well be our last chance to acquire this land. The price in the future certainly won't be less.

The merits of this acquisition have been supported by the Department of Environmental Protection (formerly DEQE), the the Massachusetts Audubon Society and various town boards including, the Board of Selectmen, the Board of Health, the Recreation Commission and the Conservation Commission.

We have also the support of the Conservation Trust which is willing to provide a financial commitment to the project. DEP has stated that considering the additional cost of water treatment, due to potential runoff,the town's acquisition of the land is clearly justified.

When all the facts are presented to the town meeting for a vote and a commitment, we ask people to cast that vote looking towards the future with water resource protection as their goal.

Earth, bags, and a bunny...

My mailbag has been very full this week of all the community's ideas and requests.

As always, I'll try to get them in as space permits. Please keep passing them along; that's how we will all learn and grow to be more environmentally conscious citizens on this planet.

I got a nice letter from the Easter Bunny. I thought I'd pass it along:

Dear Friends,

Thanks to all of you who made my job go a lot smoother this year by not using chemicals all over your lawn.

As you know, delivering candy to all of you is no small task. Sometimes I get thirsty, and I eat your grass.

When you use chemicals on your lawn, you cause neurological problems as well as cancer not only in me, but to many of the little ones that I deliver to each year.

For those of you who are still using chemicals all over your outdoors, remember that there is a whole world out here who works hard to share this earth.

Birds, rabbits, raccoons, skunks, insects—we're all out here, but we never see you; we just see those long trucks that poison our homes, us and your children.

So, thanks for thinking before spraying, and enjoy the candy kids!

Love, the E.B.

Tip of the week: Grocery bags—paper bags are made of virgin paper. You can use them at least three times to hold groceries before you use them to hold your newspapers for recycling.

After shopping, simply place the paper bags back in your car ready for the next shopping expedition.

Plastic bags do not biodegrade in a landfill, and burning them emits toxic furans. The best tip is not to accept them at all; however, Star Market is now accepting plastic grocery bags for recycling.

There is a bright blue barrel located at the front of their stores for this purpose.

Priscilla Long, who brought us this week's tip on paper bags, will be at the front of Stop & Shop for Earth Day weekend, April 21 and 22 to hand out flyers and tips about shopping with reusable bags as well as selling 50 Simple Ways to Save the Earth.

If you can staff the table for an hour, please give her a call at: 383-1426.

CARE
to Recycle Everything

Trouble-shooting at the RTF: Bimetal cans (also called steel/tin cans) now are being collected in the black bin next to the aluminum bin at the RTF. Please do not throw large metal objects in here, they go down the hill by the appliances.

Plastic collection is up, and that's very exciting. Please put only topless containers in the cartons inside the transfer building.

We are having problems with people throwing in plastic bags. Even though the plastic shopping bags are made of polyethelene, they are soft and cannot be ground by our grinder.

Ask the manager at Stop & Shop to start recycling them as they are now doing at Star Market.

Business notes . . .

Janice Crowley lauded

At a recent company-wide meeting, Janice Crowley of Hunneman & Company, Realtors/Better Homes & Gardens' Cohasset office was honored for her pace-setting performance throughout 1989.

"With well over $4 million in sales for the year, Janice ranks among the top 10 associates in the company," president Bill Kiley noted. "Given Janice's service minded approach to brokerage, I am not surprised she has done so well. In today's competitive business environment, Janice stands out as an exceptional agent who quite simply works very hard at bringing buyers and sellers together."

Claire Watts also of Hunneman's Cohasset office, was honored by the company for her exceptional brokerage achievement, too.

"Claire participated in transactions with a total value in excess of $3 million," Vice President Judy Parsons of Hunneman's Cohasset office noted "Claire has ended up with a phenomenal year during a time period that quite frankly has been very challenging to many agents."

Business after hours

The South Shore Chamber of Commerce will hold a business after hours network session Thursday, April 19 at Pilgrim Health Care, 10 Accord Executive Park, Norwell, from 5 to 6:30 p.m.

Reservations are $5 for members and $10 for non-members. Please call 479-1111 for reservations.

A day for all of us . . .

efforts of a group of students at the high school called the Cohasset Volunteer Service, which is pitching in to help beautify the town.

It is especially encouraging that today's youth are taking such an interest in the environment; it will be their fight to win or lose.

So how about you, what are you doing to make a difference? Why not drop by Cohasset Common on Sunday and pitch in? Be a part of history!

Incidentally, at the Mariner we are trying to do our part. We now use some recycled newsprint, and are looking to use more.

Murray fundraiser set for April 29

The committee to re-elect Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) will hold a fund-raising brunch, Sunday, April 29 at 11:30 a.m. at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham.

Brunch attendees will have the opportunity to meet and discuss important issues with Rep. Murray.

Murray has served in The House of Representatives for seven terms (14 years). She has served on the committees on counties, human services and elderly affairs, local affairs and taxation.

She is presently the ranking republican member of the committee on counties and the committee on local affairs.

She also has been elected by the Republican House members as a Republican member of the House ethics committee.

The Third Plymouth District legislator has consistently supported increased local aid for the cities and towns. Rep. Murray also has said she will not vote to increase taxes until the state employes earning $60,000 to $100,000 plus are cut from the budget or at least half of those removed and the other half have their salaries lowered.

She has sponsored "sunset" legislation for several years. The wording in the so-called "cutting budget of 1989" contained her sunset bill. "Sunset" calls for a thorough investigation of each department every five years for the commonwealth to ascertain duplication, efficiency and overlapping.

Many statewide candidates have indicated they will attend the 1990 Murray annual brunch.

Tickets for the brunch are $25 per person and can be purchased from the following people. In Cohasset, Lillian Murray, chairwoman, 367-5950; Ray and Pat Buckley, co-chair, 383-0340; Anne Curley, 383-0041; Maria Plante, 383-9263; Jean Syrmopoulos 383-9071; Al Odermatt, 383-1283; Paul Verrochi, 383-0300; Glenn Pratt, 383-0048.

In Hingham tickets are available form San Amonte, 749-1011; R. Donald Thompson, 749-4812; Greg Hall, 749-3405; Jean Doherty, 749-2982; and Helen Brady, 749-1262.

Chiropractors

CONTRIBUTING FACTORS

One might expect that a chiropractor would direct most efforts toward the painful shoulder of a patient with shoulder bursitis. These efforts, however, do not necessarily stop there. The chiropractor's next efforts may very well be intended for the musculature around the shoulder. Through the use of gentle mobilization techniqiues, the area of the shoulder blade and collarbone may be loosened so that the shoulder may assume its normal range of motion. The chiropractor may also direct his or her efforts to areas of the spine that may be contributing to the problem due to the impingement of nerves. Owing to a sort of domino relationship, the chiropractor may even look for secondary distortions that arise from the original problem. In short, completeness is the hallmark of a chiropractor's professional attention.

Chiropractic is a natural and drugless approach to providing a pathway for the body's natural healing processing to take place. It provides clear instructions to all extremities and organs so that a total state of well-being may take place and that you may once again enjoy a comfortable lifestyle. Jewelry tips

By Dale P. Southworth
Special to the Mariner

A young woman recently walked into the office of a dermatologist with a troublesome problem.

Her earlobes had developed a red, itchy rash. The discomfort had begun several months before and seemed to come and go mysteriously. Lately the rash returned to stay. A similar rash appeared on her wrists.

The source of this woman's misery was found in her earrings. The alloys that went into making the fashionable earrings she wore contained a small amount of nickel – enough to cause an allergic reaction known as contact dermatitis. The increasing reaction to the nickel in her earrings triggered a similar response to the nickel content in her watch band and bracelets.

None of this is life-threatening. It's merely uncomfortable and embarassing. After several weeks of treatment, the rash was gone.

The problem of contact dermatitis is serious and growing. It is estimated that six out of every 100 American women share the allergy.

The solution is to wear completely stainless steel earrings.

Some hypoallergenic earrings may have only stainless steel posts.

To be completely safe, look for truly non-allergenic earrings, manufactured completely of surgical stainless steel. These earrings may still have gold or silver plating or epoxies. But all parts of the earring that touch the earlobe should be stainless steel.

(Dale P. Southworth is vice president of Roman Research of Pembroke, a manufacturer of non-allergenic earrings.)

Earrings were once used as a protection

By Sandye
Special to the Mariner

Earrings were once worn to guard the ears from negativity and disease.

Later they became a symbol for slavery, for slaves wore earrings marking their status.

Piercing the ears to allow the wearing of earrings is an ancient practice.

Most parts of the body have been pierced for various magical and religious reasons throughout the ages.

Ears may have been among the first, along with the nose – which is still pierced in India for protective as well as cosmetic reasons.

Folklore still surrounds this practice.

Pierced earrings are often recommended to strengthen weak eyes – if set with emeralds they are particularly effective.

Gold earrings are often worn by those wishing to cure headaches. Some say the way to cure headaches is to wear one gold and one silver earring.

Estate tour May 6

The Cohasset Historical Society's Sunday, May 6, house and estate tour of the shoreline estate once known as "Hominy Point" and now called the Bellarmine House will be held from 2 to 5 p.m.

The cost for a reservation to see this unusual 19th century estate will be $5 per person for members of the historical society, $6 for non-members.

Reservations may be made by sending a check to the Society, 14 Summer Street, Cohasset 02025. On the afternoon of the event, parking will be available in the vicinity of Howard Gleason Road, site of the estate.

The Bellarmine House today is owned by Boston College, and for many years has served as a location for seminars, retreats and relaxation for faculty and students of the college.

The house itself, built in 1880 for Dr. John Bryant of Boston and Cohasset, was designed by the eminent architect Henry Hobson Richardson whose architectural works rank among the finest and best known of their time.

Richardson, a Harvard graduate and adopted Bostonian, designed numerous public and private buildings, and many large estate houses in a style made famous by himself and emulated by other late 19th century American architests.

In Cohasset, there are two other buildings designed in the "Richardsonian" style; the Jerusalem Road estate house known as Stoneleigh and the Pope Memorial Church, now the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church on the same road, near West Corner.

On the day of the tour, the grounds of Bellarmine House will be open and tour-takers may bring cameras. There will be volunteer guides from the historical society to answer questions and to assist visitors. For more information, call the historical society at 383-6930.

Band rehearsals begin

The Satuit Band will begin rehearsals Wednesday evening, April 25 at 7:30 p.m. at the Harbor Methodist Church, 55 First Parish Road near Scituate Harbor.

All wind, brass, and percussion players will be welcome at the first rehearsal. No audition is required.

The band will be under the direction of A. Douglas Wauchope. For more information, call George Duffey at (617) 545-4178.

Safe boating course open

The United States Coast Guard Auxiliary, Flotilla 1208, and the Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor a spring, six-session, safe boating course, offering certification by both the Coast Guard and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The course will be offered to both youths and adults; however, certification in this course is mandatory for 16-year-olds and under, who wish to operate a craft powered by 25-horsepower engine or more.

U.S.C.G.A., Flotilla 1208 instructors will teach the six-session course, scheduled to begin Tuesday evening, May 1, at Cohasset High School. (audio-visual room).

The class will meet each Tuesday and Thursday evening, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., from May 1 through Tuesday, May 22.

To register, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791 as soon as possible, as class will be limited in size and participants will be enrolled on a first-call basis.

There will be a $15 per person fee for this program; that covers the cost of the text book and class materials. Checks for payment must be made out to: U.S.C.G.A. Flotilla 1208.

While the class is designed for children/youths and adults, it is suggested that children aged 12 and under be accompanied by a participating adult.

Certification cards will be issued, and both the Coast Guard and state recognize the safe boating certificate. Further, for those who may be interested, certification for this course will allow you a discount on your boat insurance premium of 5 to 10 percent, depending upon your insurance carrier.

As soon as brochures and application forms are available, the Cohasset Recreation Department will begin accepting registrations for the 1990 summer soccer camps.

This year, Cohasset will host a variety of summer camp programs through two soccer camps: South Shore Soccer Camp, under the direction of Jon Anderson and Larry Shultz, and V.I.P. Soccer Camp, under the direction of Dave Pike and Ross Irwin.

V.I.P. will offer an ABC camp specifically for ages 4 and 5 that will meet 1-1/2 hours daily, Monday through Friday, Aug. 20 through 24, from 8 a.m. through 9:30 a.m. The cost for this program for both girls and boys is $40 and family discounts are available.

Also, V.I.P. will conduct half-day camp program for ages 6- and 7-year-olds that will meet Monday through Friday, Aug. 20, through 24 from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., and the cost for this boys and girls camp is $70, with family discounts available.

South Shore Soccer Camp will conduct full-day camp for boys 8 through 18 during the week of Aug. 6, and a girls only full-day camp during the week of Aug. 13. Both boys and girls, full-day camps, will meet Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. through 4 p.m., and the cost is $139, with family discounts available.

Camps can be tailored to individual needs; therefore, any participant over the age of 8, who wishes a half-day camp experience, can be accommodated, and conversely, should a 7-year-old qualify for, and desire a full-day camp, arrangements can be made at the time of registration.

Brochures for both South Shore and V.I.P. will be available at the window outside the Cohasset Recreation Department office in the entry way of the new town hall addition.

To register, simply complete the information on the application in the brochure of the camp you are registering with, and mail the completed and signed application along with a check of deposit, to:

and one earned run," McDermott said. "And even those hits in the sixth weren't tattooed. I'm very encouraged with how well he threw. He's a good athlete and showed that he can handle himself on the mound."

McDermott was also pleased with the offensive production of the Skippers, who had six hits on the day. In their first game the Skipper managed only one hit, a home run by Ellinger.

Six different players had hits for the Skippers.

Senior Mike Rollandeli and Ludlow had doubles to lead the way.

Ellinger, sophomore Ryan Cibelli, Hill and freshman Peter Fahey all had singles.

"We hit the ball well," McDermott said. "We are starting to get production from our three, four and five hitters and that will be beneficial down the road."

He said that the Skipper defense still needs some work.

"We made some miscues in the second inning that hurt," he said. "But with a young team like ours that is just part of the learning process. We will be patient and learn as the season goes on. At least we will have something to work on in practice."

He did, however, single out the defensive play of centerfielder Cibelli and catcher Rollandeli over the first two games.

"Both Ryan and Mike have really done a nice job for us out in the field," he said. "They are making all the tough plays."

With vacation, the Skippers do not play until next Tuesday when they take on Hull.

"I hope because of the break we do not lose what we gained from our last two games," McDermott said. "But I think we will show the most improvement when the weather improves."

Cohasset shines on Earth Day

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

On a Sunday afternoon truly fit for a celebration, hundreds of Cohasset residents turned out to pay tribute to Mother Earth.

At 2 p.m., they gathered, young and old, around the duck pond to hear words of hope and inspiration from the local clergy.

The Rev. Ed Atkinson of First Parish, who served as master of ceremonies, opened with story about the connection of man and planet.

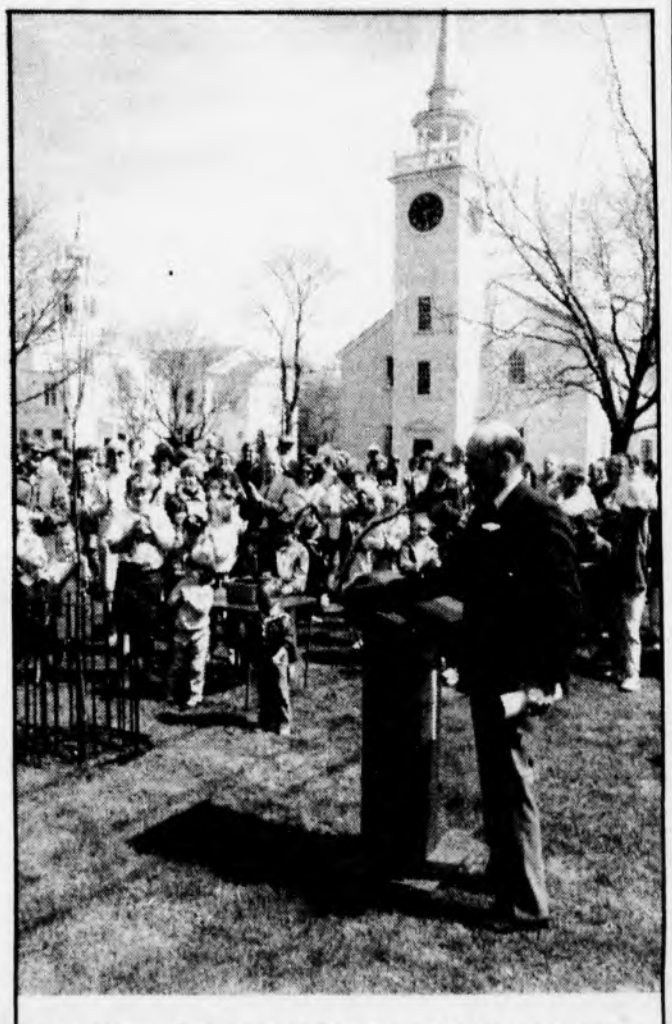
The story began with a lesson about how the pond was formed by a glacier more than 10,000 years ago.

"It might be said, if you will allow this preacher a little poetic license, that this pond was not fashioned by human hands, it was shaped by the hand of God.

"And here in this tiny pond formed by the hand of God, the glory of the heavens is reflected; blue sky and bright sun by day, shimmering moonbeams and stars by night," he said. "Here droplets of water pause in their endless pilgrammage from ocean to ocean, droplets that may once have flowed in the Nile or the Danube or the Ganges or the Yangtze.

"Free your imagination for a moment," he implored. "Ages ago, these waters may have floated the infant Moses hidden away in a basket or trickled through the hands of John as he baptized the faithful. These waters may have been drunk by a king or washed the feet of a saint. They may have flowed in tears shed at the crucifixion or in the sweat on the brow of a slave laboring to make bricks for the Pharoah's palace.

"Here beside these waters collected in a bowl shaped by the hand of God, reflecting the heavens, we pause today to deepen our consciousness of the web of all creationwithin which we live and move and have our being "



Shuma Chahravarty, assistant minister of the Vedanta Centre, read a poem by Nobel laureate Rabindrenath Tagore:

My heart sings at the wonder of my place in this world of light and life; at the feel in my pulse of the rhythm of creation cadenced by the swing of the endless time.

I feel the tenderness of the grass in my forest walk, the wayside flowers startle me: that the gifts of the infinite are strewn in the dust wakens my song in wonder.

I have seen, have heard, have lived; in the depth of the known and have felt the truth that exceeds all knowledge which fills my heart with wonder and I sing.

The Rev. Edward Atkinson of First Parish led a tree-dedication ceremony on Cohasset Common in celebration of Earth Day.

With th ehelp of Thomas Traherne, a 17th century anglican priest and poet, The Rev. Clifford Cutler of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church taught those congregated at the pond how to treasure the world:

"Your enjoyment of the world is never right," he said, "'til you so esteem it that everything in it is your treasure.

"You never enjoy the world aright 'til you see how a grain of sand exhibiteth the wisdom and power of God," he said.

"Your enjoyment of the world is never right 'til every

After overrides sunk

Advisors lecture voters about the budget dilemma

Cohasset started the second session of town meeting with a lecture about hard choices to be made this year and next because of the failure to pass the operating budget override.

The first step, according to advisory committee Chairman Ray Kasperowicz, was to come up with $120,000 worth of cuts to offset the failed override article.

Kasperowicz introduced the latest plan of the advisory committee that called for:

- eliminating the second police cruiser at a savings of $14,500;
- reducing the board of health's engineering budget to $20,000 for a savings of $5,000;
- eliminating $30,500 from the school budget;
- eliminating $40,000 in street paving projects;
- eliminating $10,000 for constructing sidewalks along Forest Avenue; and
- eliminating $20,000 for painting the original section of town hall "although we hated to do it."

Kasperowicz warned the town could not avoid a significant override request next year unless it changes the way it is organized and negotiates union contracts.

"You have to make some hard decisions," he said. "The time has run out and we're almost to the wall."

Hard decisions weren't high on the agenda of several residents.

Fire Capt. Robert Silvia complained that the fire department had taken unfair knocks this year.

Rather than dividing the cost of the fire department by the number of residents, he suggested the town ought to divide the budget by the property valuation.

Silvia came up with a figure of $1.07 per $1,000 of valuation. Assuming the average house is worth $350,000, he said, the cost of the fire department works out to $375 per house.

"The advisory committee has the feeling that fire protection costs too much," Silvia said. "Maybe it's time to bring in experts to determine how much Cohasset should be spending."

For Chris Duggan of King Street, skimping on maintenance of school buildings was a big mistake.

Duggan said he had no children in the school system but occasionally takes his daughter to the Osgood playground.

"The conditions of the school are deplorable," he said. "The school used to be the pride of the South Shore. Today it's a shambles."

Duggan said in a recent tour he counted 33 bro-

Music Circus owners acquire Cape Cod Melody Tent

By Laurie Kaiser
Mariner staff

The owners of the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset have bought the Cape Cod Melody Tent in Hyannis, considered to be on the decline for some time, for an undisclosed sum.

Edward R. Kasses, executive producer at South Shore Music Circus, wouldn't disclose the purchase price, saying it depends on how much money the Melody Tent makes. He called the sale a "convoluted deal."

Kasses said he expects the tent theater to bring in $250,000 to $600,000 this year, after expenses, which is comparable to the net revenues of the South Shore Music Circus. In a good year, Kasses said, the Music Circus makes $600,000 and, in a bad year, $50,000 to $100,000.

At a press conference in Hyannis Tuesday (April 24), Kasses said South Shore Playhouse Associates, the not-for-profit foundation which operates the South Shore Music Circus, plans to make the Melody Tent a "sister theater," featuring many of the same entertainers as the Cohasset venue at the same ticket prices.

Melody Tent goers can expect a 20 percent to 25 percent drop in ticket prices to the average Music Circus ticket price of $20 to $30, Kasses said.

South Shore Playhouse Associates is planning a $300,000 renovation of the 41-year-old Melody Tent before the place opens in July for the summer. The Melody Tent and the Music Circus, a year younger than the Melody Tent, are the only two tent theaters on the East Coast.

South Shore Playhouse Associates bought the Melody Tent from Bill Carmen of Newton, Cape Cod and Boca Raton, Fla., who owned the entertainment venue for 11 years.

The renovation of the Melody Tent is concurrent with the expansion of the administration building at the South Shore Music Circus to accommodate computerization of ticket sales.

About 100 seats will be added to the Cape Cod Melody Tent, bringing total seating to 2,300 — the same capacity as the South Shore Music Circus.

Because of South Shore Playhouse Associates' not-for-profit status, the net income from the tent theaters is channeled into a trust fund which makes grants to arts, educational and recreational organizations. The addition of the Melody Tent is expected to add to the trust-fund coffers, making more money available to these organizations.

Last year, South Shore Playhouse Associates gave more than $175,000 to organizations throughout greater Boston and the South Shore, said Bruce Cameron, president of the board of trustees. Thirty-seven organizations — including the South Shore Conservatory in Hingham, the South Shore Arts Center in Cohasset and the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell — were recipients of money from South Shore Playhouse Associates.

The entertainment line-up for the two tent theaters has traditionally been middle of the road. No drastic changes are expected, Kasses said. He may try a few rock-and-roll shows, he said, "but, frankly, we're concerned about noise levels. If you want that sort of thing, go to Great Woods."

Kasses refused to divulge the entertainment line-up at the Melody Tent, though he did say he has

Cohasset's week

Little League Day

Get out your cameras! Saturday, April 28, is Little League Day in Cohasset.

The annual parade will start promptly at 8:15 a.m. from the parking lot at the Red Lion Inn and proceed up North Main Street to Barnes Little League Field.

All registered Little League players are invited to join their teammates and march in uniform in the parade.

After the Opening Day ceremony, the first game of the season will be played. This game will feature the Red Sox vs the Mets, last year's champions and runnerups.

Saturday evening, an Adults Dance will be held at the Community Center from 8 p.m. 'til midnight. A disc jockey, door prizes, a raffle, hors d'oeuvres, and a cash bar will all add to the fun.

Tickets are $10 per person and may be purchased from any of the coaches or by calling 383-1592 or 383-1290.

Safe drive road rally

Explorer Post 28 of Cohasset will conduct its 20th Old Colony Council Safe Driver Road Rally May 6, from noon to 4:30 p.m. at the South Shore Music Circus lot in Cohasset.

This event has been very popular over the years in testing a driver and his navigator in the ability to follow a course of some 50 miles at a safe speed on a timed basis (Timed at less than posted speed limits on route).

Judges are stationed at unannounced check points along the course to verify time and safe driving.

The driver must be Massachusetts licensed and vehicle must pass state inspection.

The navigator must be 14 years old or older. At least one participant must be a registered Explorer BSA (not necessarily from Post 28) to qualify for a trophy.

A gymkana is conducted after the rally to determine safe drivers. Such events as parking, backing, driving blindfolded and musical chairs are included.

Entrants who are not Explorers are invited to participate, but cannot qualify for trophy awards.

For further information regarding this event and any other Explorer or Boy Scout events should contact Jerry Kazanjian, district executive, Old Mills District, Old Colony Council, at 617 828-8360.

Waste forum May 1

Cohasset residents will have an opportunity to hear and be heard on the subject of the hazardous waste incinerator planned for Braintree.

Cohasset Executive Secretary Greg Doyon announced that a public forum to discuss the controversial incinerator planned by Clean Harbors, Inc. will be held in Cohasset.

Doyon has established firm guidelines to keep the meeting orderly. The chairmen of the boards of health and selectmen will co-moderate the meeting.

Both Clean Harbors and the anti-incinerator group, Coalition for a Safe Environment, will make 15 minute presentations.

Following the formal presentations, residents will have the opportunity to speak or ask questions. According to Doyon, all questions must be submitted in writing to the moderators.

The Clean Harbors proposal to build the facility in the Fore River Basin area of Braintree is being vigorously opposed by a variety of groups on the South Shore.

Major concerns center on the environmental and medical risks of transporting hazardous waste into a densely populated area and processing it in rotary kiln incinerator.

According to reports, hazardous waste will be shipped by rail and truck from Canada to New Jersey and from Chicago to the Braintree site for burning.

The forum will be held May 1 at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium in town hall.

Early release day

April 26 will be an early release day in the Cohasset public schools.

There will be no afternoon kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

SCHOOL	BUSES DEPART
Junior/Senior High School	noon
Deer Hill School	12:40 p.m.
Joseph Osgood School	12:50 p.m.

Lunch will be served in the elementary schools and food service will be available at the junior/senior high school.

This early release day has been approved by the Cohasset School Committee to allow the staff to review curriculum and to prepare for accreditation.

Harold Litchfield and his crew keep Cohasset rolling

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Harold Litchfield hates snow.

It hasn't always been that way. He loved it as a kid. And as a young man he would wait up all night to go plowing. But in the last 15 years or so, it's lost its allure.

That may be because in the nearly 30 winters he's been on the job, he has plowed and sanded every inch of Cohasset's roads more times than most people would count.

In the early days, the department went even farther.

"When I came on board in 1960, we plowed every driveway in town," Litchfield said. "Everybody wanted their driveways done even before the roads were plowed."

That came to an end around 1962 or 1963, but the highway department still has the responsibility to plow, patch, sand and maintain all 11 miles of private ways.

"Lots of towns don't do that," he said.

The winter of 1989-1990 was particularly difficult.

"This winter we went out 42 times," Litchfield said.

In contrast, last year the department was only called out 17 times, and had to plow only twice.

"The little piddly storms are the worst," he said. It doesn't look like it's amounting to anything, the snow starts and stops. As soon as the men get home, the police call them out again.

The Friday after Thanksgiving was a perfect example. The department went out plowing and sanding and finished up at 2 p.m. and went home. Within minutes there were two separate accidents 200 feet apart on Jerusalem Road.

"At 2:15 we were back out."

Protecting the water and soil from excess salt makes it harder to keep the roadways safe, he said.

"I used to mix sand and salt together in a ratio of three to two. Now we have to watch the sodium in the water," Litchfield said. Now he mixes one part salt to four parts sand.

"It works terrible," he complained.

Some areas he can't use any salt on. That makes King Street and everything off it the worst spot in town in the winter.

"We can't use salt on Bates Lane either," he said. "It goes right into the watershed."

Plowing and sanding are just a tiny bit of what the highway department does.

Harold Litchfield

Lately the department is out picking up all the sand that was spread during the winter and cleaning up debris.

"It should take about six weeks," Litchfield said. "We'll be done by the second week in May."

The highway department is also responsible for fences, signs, tidal gates and all 1,100 storm drains. They help pull the floats for the harbor department, fix the schools' catch basins, maintain Sandy Beach parking lot and work closely with the wire department and the tree, park and cemetery department.

In their spare time, they repaired the meetinghouse pond. There's some talk around town that they'll be asked to do the work capping the old landfill.

According to Litchfield, his men are now joking that they'll be asked to shingle the fire station, too.

Litchfield quickly credits the men who work with him for the quality of the work the highway department. He has four permanent men on his staff.

Tony Sestito, his working foreman, has been with him for 20 years.

"He's elegant," Litchfield said. "I'd be lost without him."

Litchfield is proud of his long sweep of service to the town. On Nov. 11, he will have served fully 30 years and will have done everything.

"I literally laid the pipe and built the basins on 75 percent of the roads in town," he said. "I served my apprenticeship."

He was just elected to his fourth term as highway surveyor with the largest number of votes cast in the entire election. He's still bothered by the number of blanks cast.

"Blanks," he mutters. "Jesus, don't I hate 'em."

He'd rather be voted up or down than get a blank.

He's heard the stories that he gets whatever he wants from town government.

"I tell the advisory committee that I never come up and ask them for anything I don't need."

Asking for money isn't his favorite part of the job.

"I don't mind hard work. I can handle that," he said. "I don't like getting the budget together.

"And getting it cut so you can't do the job right."

Not getting a job done right probably bothers him

Town meeting approves $396,000 station renovation

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Police officers and firefighters no longer have to worry about the station falling down around their ears after a squeaker of a vote at town meeting.

Because loans require approval from two-thirds of the voters, the 102 to 47 vote gave them a narrow three-vote margin.

The vote came after voters rejected an advisory committee proposal to spend $100,000 to do the bare minimum in renovations at the police/fire station. Voters rejected the amendment 83 to 67 against.

Voters rejected a Proposition 2-1/2 debt exclusion override on April 14 that would have authorized the town to raise taxes to make loan payments on the $396,000 renovation out of tax revenues. Under the current vote, payments estimated at $24,000 to $48,000 will have to come out of the town's operating budget beginning in fiscal 1992.

The amendment signalled a change in the advisory committee's position from favoring the article to proposing that the work be done in stages.

"We have waited long enough for some basic rehab work and believe $100,000 would cover at least the new roof, sills, gutters and female lavatory," advisory committee member William Lean said. "We think we can delay some other aspects."

Robert Jackson of the capital budget committee supported the advisory committee position.

"It is definitely worth doing, but it is easier to raise $100,000 than $396,000," Jackson said. "We must respect the wishes of the taxpayers."

Prior to town meeting the capital budget committee also favored full-funding of the renovation project.

Muriel Silvia of Arrowood Street called on residents to reject the piecemeal approach saying it would cost the town more in the long run.

Diana Kornet objected on behalf of the selectmen.

"This project has gone from $1.1 million to $700,000 to $396,000. We think it is now essential to proceed. It's time to bite the bullet and maintain the building," Kornet said. "We must have a proper building for the men and women to work in."

Renovation work is necessary because the roof leaks, the cells are inadequate, the windows, sills and gutters are rotting, there are no lavatory facilities for women or handicapped individuals and the police station has no safety barrier.

According to David Chase of the police/fire station renovation committee, the project will address those problems, upgrade the heating, air-conditioning and plumbing systems, cover interior paint and flooring and some exterior brick repair work.

Litchfield keeps Cohasset rolling...

the most. It galls him to see town buildings and roads disintegrating from lack of maintenance.

He has little patience for people who want to cut the budget but still expect the same level of services.

"Those people will still call and expect to be plowed out first or have their storm drains cleared of leaves," he said.

His biggest concern are the aging bridges under his care. He had studies and engineering reports prepared for replacing the bridge and culvert on Doane Street. Everything was set and then the state took back the funds.

All he can do is try to keep things patched up and wait for times to change and money to be freed up.

If there's one thing Litchfield can't imagine, it's retirement.

"I've worked all my life. Even if I hit the lottery I wouldn't know what to do without a job."

One thing is clear. No matter what the future brings, the future is in Cohasset.

"I've lived all my 55 years right here," he said. "I've lived between 181 and 171 Beechwood Street all those years."

His daughters and the grandson named after him are an important part of his life. His grandson is following in "Poppa's" footsteps. At four, Harold Jaime Litchfield knows all about construction vehicles.

On the rare occasions when Harold Litchfield can get away from the streets of Cohasset, he escapes north to a vacation place in the White Mountains of New Hampshire.

He doesn't spend his vacation time hunting, fishing, hiking or skiing.

If you ask him what he did on his most recent weekend escape, he laughs. It would seem daft in a lesser man, but by 6 a.m. Harold Litchfield was out in his car checking out roads.

How much money is planted in your yard ?

Count it up. A couple of flowering shrubs, a hedge and a maple tree from the nursery could amount to as much as $600. You've probably made a considerable investment, in plants alone. A living investment that needs attention to grow.

Take this little quiz, to find out if your landscaping investment is increasing or decreasing in value:

- ☐ Are any of your bushes yellowish?
- ☐ Do any of your trees or shrubs have dead or dying branches?
- ☐ Did your flowering shrubs fail to bloom as well as expected ?
- ☐ Are insects nibbling holes in the leaves ?
- ☐ Are the leaves and branches sparse or stunted ?

If you answered yes to any of these, call us for a free , no-obligation survey and price quote. Our ornamental tree and shrub inspection, pest control and fertilization programs are designed to promote healthy and attractive plants. And healthy landscaping means a healthy increase in your property's value.

Employees compromise on raise

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Although they asked for five percent, non-union employees left town meeting with a compromise pay-raise package of three percent.

The personnel committee held firm for the two percent they had recommended going into the meeting.

Committee Chairman Barbara Moore told town meeting that some members of the committee felt that a wage freeze was in order given the state of the Massachusetts economy.

Moore pointed out that 32 of the 53 non-union employees were in line for a step raise of 4.5 and 6 percent. Others have reached their maximum pay.

Moore ran down a list of other benefits and salary boosters including merit increases, vacation pay, sick leave, personal leave, paid holidays and other fringes to justify holding pay raises at two percent rather than the three percent suggested by the advisory committee and selectmen.

"It is not something that is pleasant," she said. "It is hard. But in terms of what is happening in our town budget, we can not recommend it."

According to Moore, each percentage increase costs the town $10,000.

Agnes McCann of Doane Street argued that failure to keep pace with inflation was counter-productive.

"Our step increases and longevity pay are designed to attract and retain quality employees," she said. "They still have to bear increases in the cost of living."

Water department Superintendent Joe Hamilton, speaking for the employees, said that the inflation rate is 5.4 percent. He asked for a pay raise of five percent to help off-set inflation.

Health department secretary Carol Oteri-Puffer argued that while unionized clerical workers saw their pay increase 20 percent over the past three years, non-union employees lagged behind with an increase of 12 percent over the same period.

"We have bills to pay as you do," she said. "We understand what is happening in Massachusetts. We're affected by it, too."

Moore continued to hold firm for the two percent raise.

"I, too, was a widow with two children and I was under a wage freeze," she recollected. "Somehow we do get by.

"The question we have to ask ourselves . . . is where and when are we going to step back and hold the line."

Library trustee Sheila Evans disagreed with Moore's argument and called for a five percent raise.

"Truthfully, we are saving our taxpayers' money at the cost of fair raises for our employees," she said. "If we held the line on union raises, then it would be fair."

Ultimately, the five percent raise was defeated 108 to 122. The advisory committee amendment calling for a three percent increase passed on a voice vote. The raises will increase the budget by $38,068.

Town meeting voted an identical increase for the town clerk, treasurer-collector and highway surveyor. Those raises impact the budget by $4,368.

In other action, town meeting unanimously approved two resolutions.

The first resolution, proposed by Kasperowicz, thanked newly-elected Selectman Jane Goedecke for her for her four-and-one- half years of service on the advisory committee. Goedecke shepherded the town through most of the post-Proposition 2-1/2 era.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle presided over an enthusiastically received resolution honoring outgoing selectman Burtram Pratt for his three years service on the board of selectman and 40 years of community service.

Chiropractic for Health

by Dr. Debra M. Tranberg & Dr. Susan Emmer
Chiropractors

THE SYMPTONS OF RECOVERY

Many patients experience relatively swift relief of the sysmptoms for which they turn to chiropractic. By the time of the first or second adjustment, a patient may begin to feel much better as the memory of his symptoms begins to fade. However, there may come a time between the third and fifth adjustment when the same patient may feel that he is losing ground. Muscle soreness and tenderness in the spinal joints may appear. These are not symptoms of a relapse into poor health, however. They are symptoms of recovery. They signal a period of self-correction in which the vertebrae are becoming accustomed to their new, and natural, positions. As adjustments correct years of irritation, soft tissue may rebel until bones are eased into their right places.

If you are one who has been enduring pain and discomfort with the misconception that there is no attainable relief, it is time for you to set up an appointment. Let us assess your situation and show you how chiropractic can help. Call DR. DEBRA M. TRANBERG, SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, 80 Front St., Scituate, 545-7388, and DR. SUSAN EMMER, CHIROPRACTIC & FAMILY WELLNESS CARE, 87 Sohier St., Cohasset, 383-1330. By appointment. Workers comp. cases and most insurance plans accepted.

P.S. Upset stomach and excessive urination may also be sysmptoms of recovery.

Cohasset residents do the Earth proud...

morning you awake in heaven; see yourself in your father's palace; and look upon the skies, the earth and the air as celestial joys: having such a reverend esteem of all, as if you were among the angels.

"You never enjoy the world aright," he said, "'til the sea itself floweth in your veins, 'til you are clothed with the heavens and crowned with the stars: and perceive yourself to be the sole heir of the whole world, and more so, because people are in itwho are everyone sole heirs as well as you.

"'Til you can sing and rejoice and delight in God, as misers do in gold, and kings in sceptres, you never enjoy the world."

To Ed Wood's bagpipe strains, the crowd proceeded to an opposite corner of the common, where the Cohasset Garden Club had planted a tree.

Club member Barbara Power explained that the young Liberty Elm would be resistant to Dutch Elm Disease. And each of those in attendance had the opportunity to pour on a handful of peat to nurture it.

From there, residents scattered to sites throughout town for clean-up duty.

The Cohasset Strutters strutted down to Veterans Memorial Park, home of the famed rosa rugosa, and proceeded to pick up scads of cigarette cartons, paper cups, plates, chip bags beer bottles and nip bottles.

Virginia Anderson explained that group members often picks up little bits of rubbish here and there as they strut about town.

Up at Government Island, Peter Whittemore, Rick Donzie, Bill Hodgeson, Doug Orr and Kate Ruiterwere busy sweeping up shards of glass from broken beer bottles.

"This is just a beautiful spot to come to and check out the sunset," Whittemore said, "and the broken glass has always amazed me, so my friends and I decided to clean it up.I hope if people see it cleaner, that will make a difference and we won't have as many bottles next year."

Courtney Schultz and Karla Kennedy, eighth graders at Cohasset Junior High, had been studying up on Earth Day at school and decided to put their lessons to practice down at Cohasset Harbor. There, they collected a huge load of beer bottles.

"It's where we live, so we should have it clean," Schultz explained. "If we clean it now, maybe people will keep it clean."

At 4 p.m., those who had been at the pond, arrived at the Recycling and Transfer Facility laden with bags of rubbish and recyclables.

Arthur Lehr, chairman of the recycling committee, lauded the crowd for its efforts and encouraged them to keep the spirit alive by recycling as much as they can.

In February and March, recycling saved the town $5,221 in waste disposal costs, he said.

The Rev. Atkinson then led the crowd in a song, "We've Got the Whole World in our Hands," as they passed along an inflated globe.

Coordinator Sharon Becker rewarded the Earth Day participants with Cohasset Cares T-shirts provided by the Cohasset Rotary Club.Celebrating Earth Day, she concluded, was "a good idea."

ken windows, 131 boarded-up windows, 56 windows with the wrong type of glass, no paint on the window sashes, cracked blacktop and missing gutters and downspouts.

"These conditions exist in all the buildings," he said. "We need to maintain what we have now and make provisions to upgrade what we have next year."

School committee Chairman Barbara Bliss assured Duggan the school committee was addressing the problems through a five year maintenance plan. She noted that the sole successful override article was an $85,000 debt exclusion for repairs at Osgood.

Superintendent of Schools Stephen Hart also pointed out that windows in the gymnasium area were intentionally boarded up and the gutters and downspouts were intentionally removed when the roof was replaced because they were unnecessary.

Voters were in a slightly more generous mood than at town election. Articles that passed included $2,000 for mosquito control at Straits Pond, $10,000 for expansion of Beechwood Cemetery to be offset by the sale of grave lots and $3,000 to reconstruct the intersection of King and Beechwood Streets.

Town meeting ratified decisions to indefinitely postpone articles authorizing the painting of town hall and purchase of Eastern Edison Maintenance Garage buildings.

Also postponed were articles dealing with collective bargaining contracts and unpaid bills from previous years. Those items will be taken up when negotiations are completed.

Town meeting was slated to reconvene April 25 with 31 articles to be decided, including:

- $20,000 to paint town hall.
- $40,000 to pave Elm Street.
- $10,000 to construct sidewalks on Forest Avenue.

Coleman's show hosts special broadcast

The popular nightly radio program featuring inspirational prose, poetry and anecdotes, usually broadcast from WPLM in Plymouth will happen live from Thayer Academy on Friday, May 11 at 8 p.m.

Cohasset's Ken Coleman, widely known as the radio voice of the Boston Red Sox for 20 years, National Football League play-by-play announcer, Dana Farber Cancer Institute trustee and Jimmy Fund consultant, has been broadcasting the five-minute "Ken's Corner" seven nights a week for more than 20 years.

The author of four sports-related books, film narrations and record albums, "The Impossible Dream," Coleman headed his career in another direction with "Ken's Corner."

"Basically, the program comes from poetry, essays and thoughts that have held a lot of meaning for me," Coleman explained. "From the response we get from listeners, it holds meaning for them too."

"For the program at Thayer, we're planning about an hour and a half one-manshow, featuring selections like "The House by the Side of the Road," by Sam Walter Foss; "If," by Rudyard Kipling and pieces by Emerson, Thoreau, Stevenson.

"We're also planning to include other requested pieces, like Angelo Patri's "All Three Loved Best." "And, there'll also be a few surprises," Coleman said.

Music and also Production will be provided by Harrison Rabels of Boston College, who has worked on Thayer productions with Fine and Performing Arts Head Donna Milani Luther, Director of That New Theatre (TNT) of Norwell.

Tickets for "Kens Corner" at Thayer Academy are $10 and are available at the following:

County school having teacher troubles

The Norfolk County Agricultural High School Federation of Teachers Local 2335 MFT, AFT, AFL-CIO has been working without a contract since Sept. 1, 1989.

Negotiations have continued steadily throughout the year with no progress. The union is currently in state mediation.

On April 13, all non-tenured teachers received layoff notices effective the close of their present school year, while all tenured teachers were notified that their number of days worked would be reduced in the 1990-1991 school year.

If the schedule at the Music Circus is any indication, the line-up may include Randy Travis, Willie Nelson, Bob Newhart, Kenny Rogers, Loretta Lynn and Crystal Gayle, Anne Murray and Jay Leno, who are all set to appear this summer in Cohasset. Phyllis Tankel, who is handling publicity for South Shore Playhouse Associates, said Kasses is trying to get some "real blockbusters" for his first season at the Melody Tent.

The season is from July through September.

Clean-up meeting for historic areas planned

The Village Renaissance, a grass roots organization begun to stimulate interest in the historic village and harbor areas of Cohasset, will meet Tuesday, May 1, at noon at the South Shore Art Center.

Persons interested in becoming involved with Cohasset Center's Village Renaissance should attend the brown bag lunch meeting.

Since the last meeting, members of the group have begun nine projects relating to cleaning up and focusing attention on the area.

"We are very pleased with the response to far," said Beth Christoffel, one of the project's managers. "It's very exciting to see so many individuals from different sectors of the community combining forces to help with this project."

On Saturday, April 28, Cohasset Junior/Senior High School students are planning to help clean up the village area as part of Cohasset's Earth Month commemorations.

The tree, park and cemetery department will provide a truck for the trash to be put into and will take care of disposing of it, while the highway department will make available the trash bags for the collection.

One visible project already completed are the white diagonal lines, signifying pedestrian walkways, now in the village and harbor areas.

The suggestion came from a town resident earlier this year in hopes that it would help slow traffic down and make crossings safer in the congested and dangerous areas.

Village Renaissance representatives talked to Harold Litchfield of the highway department, who arranged for the diagonal work to be done during the town's planned striping this spring.

"Everyone who has any ideas or comments regarding the Village Renaissance is welcome to participate! We appreciate the input we've had so far and urge anyone interested to come to the meeting or call one of us," Christoffel said.

Jackie Dormitzer, Ann Whelan and Phil Smith also are working on the group's steering committee.

"If someone has an idea and can't make the meeting, they can drop off a note at Smith Place or mail it to The Village Renaissance, P.O. Box 902, Cohasset, MA 02025-0001," Christoffel said.

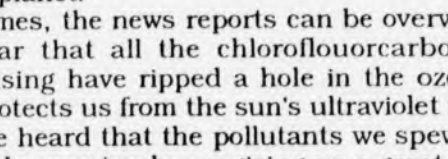
We can do it

If we learned one thing Sunday, April 22, it is that each and every one of us can make a difference when it comes to protecting and preserving our fragile planet.

At times, the news reports can be overwhelming. We hear that all the chloroflouorcarbons we've been using have ripped a hole in the ozone layer that protects us from the sun's ultraviolet radiation.

We've heard that the pollutants we spew into the atmosphere not only are giving us a greater chance of coming down with cancer, they are killing our lakes and trees.



That smog also is building up in the atmosphere and contributing to global warming. If the poles melt, Cohasset will be under water!

But last Sunday, your neighbors got out and proved that everyone can make a difference, and proved that they care enough to get involved.

How about you, what can you do? A friend of mine just lent me the book 50 Simple Things You Can Do To Save The Earth; here are some of the book's suggestions:

Write to the post office and have them stop sending you junk mail; snip your six-pack rings so they won't pose a danger to wildlife; use a clean detergent; aerate your faucet; recycle your tires, plastics, paper, aluminum cans and motor oil; stop using pesticides; compost; or plant a tree.

These are just a few ways we all can help to make a difference.

Debt exclusion for cemetery expansion was rejected by voters on the override ballot. Chairman Glenn Pratt told selectmen that the proposed $30,000 annual debt service would be more than covered by the sale of grave lots.

Earth Day Committee and townspeople commended

To the Editor:

Earth Day certainly had a very profound effect on many residents of Cohasset and it was manifested in the numbers of individuals who participated.

The Earth Day Committee I am sure was most gratified at the support which the townspeople showed by their participation in Earth Day festivities.

The energy invested in the planning of Cohasset's Earth Day activities showed, the turnout was terrific.

Sharon Becker and the other members of the Earth Day Committee are to be commended in mobilizing the community. What I found most exciting was participation spanned all age groups.

Families and individuals chose to make a difference by cleaning up areas of Cohasset that have been neglected or defiled due to a lack of respect for the environment in which we live.

This community has a great many individuals who care and it really showed, those involved and the individuals who participated deserve the respect of all the residents of Cohasset.

It is possible to make a difference, you only have to give yourself the opportunity to do so. It's most important that we all involve ourselves in keeping Cohasset serene and beautiful, so that all of us and future generations can continue to enjoy all of the natural wonders that make Cohasset one of the most scenic and significant towns on the South Shore.

I have been awakened to my responsibility as a resident of this planet just by living here. I would like to see more people open their hearts and minds to the possibilities of change and try to make a difference; it just takes a moment to make up your mind, and then act on it.

Cohasset is way ahead of other communities in its goal of recycling, thanks to Arthur Lehr and the Recycling Committee. The Recycling Committee, Dr. Godzik, along with the board of health are to be commended for enlarging the scope of the recycling program in Cohasset.

Joe Laugelle and his staff at the Recycling/Transfer Station deserve our respect, as they provide a significant service by assisting all of us in a most assuredly distasteful task; that of handling the discarded remnants of daily living on this planet.

I am very proud to have been involved with the Recycling Committee and hope that many others will consider becoming involved, as community support is essential.

We all must show respect for our environment by recycling, reusing and reducing as much as we can.

As a young Girl Scout I was taught to always leave the area I used better than I found it, it is a good principle to live by.

Yours sincerely,
Karen M. Kissane

Letters

'Thanks' for your contrubition

To the Editor:

Cohasset cares! Many parents saw to it that their children's first Earth Day was spent learning about litter and recycling, tree planting and revering the Earth.

The response to Cohasset's Earth Day observance was overwhelming; indeed, the free T-shirts ran out far before the supply of hard workers. Our sincere apologies!

But thanks to the very generous contribution of the Rotary Club, nearly 200 Cohasset Cares T-shirts were given out.

Special thanks to the Rev. Ed Atkinson for organizing a beautiful service on the common; to Barbara Power and the Cohasset Garden Club for Cohasset's own Liberty Elm tree; to Ron Goodwin for all his contributions; and to two of the hardest working and most devoted recyclers around — Arthur Lehr and Merle Brown.

A cleaner Cohasset testifies to our concern, and the recycling bins were brimming after the clean-up.

Thank you to all who participated, and especially to the clergy, parents, scouts and all others responsible for Earth Day's success.

Goedecke thanks supporters

To the Editor:

I wish to thank all the voters who supported me in my reelection for a second term on the board of selectmen.

Also, congratulations to Jane Goedecke for her hard-fought campaign which was successful, and to Burt Pratt thank you for the three years of contribution to the town as selectman.

I pledge to continue to urge open government and discussion so we can make the best decisions for the future of Cohasset.

CVS babysitting service appreciated

To the Editor:

We would very much appreciate the opportunity to thank, through your publication, the close to 50 junior and senior high school students who volunteered to babysit for residents interested in attending town meeting last Monday evening.

Both the student council and Community Volunteer Service members compiled the names of boys and girls who were willing to donate their time to enable parents of younger children to attend the meeting.

Not every volunteer was needed, but it certainly was nice to be able to provide a sitter for parents who requested one.

Although those who volunteered can't yet vote, it is gratifying to see teens take an interest and a part in the democratic process, as well as in town affairs.

If these students had not made themselves available, a number of residents would not have been able to attend town meeting.

Thank you.

Cohasset recycling news . . .

By Alix White
Special to the Mariner

This week in honor of Earth Day 1990, I asked what many of the people who serve us in our town government intend to do in their own lives and in the community. Here are their contributions:

Selectwoman Martha Gjesteby: "I will use more recyclable resources and less non-recyclable ones. I wish that the town did not accept plastic bags for trash at the landfill."

Sharon Becker, board of health: "My Earth Day pledge is that I'll become more active for the Earth, starting with a look into the principles of the New England Green Alliance."

Bill Baird, board of health: "I would like to include solar heating in my home. I would like to see the Cedar Street landfill capped, and recycling increase.

For our community, I wish for the chairman of the watershed protection commission to come forward." (Please call Bill Baird if you would serve in that capacity.)

Michael Sullivan, board of health: "I pledge to pick up litter at the landfill by the condominiums. It's a shame they have to look at all that litter."

Cliff Cutler, rector St. Stephen's Church: "The spirit of Earth Day is one of making connections between ourselves, our Earth, the creatures of the Earth, and the Creator.

I pledge to make time for quiet so that these connections are not lost in the busy-ness of each day's demands.

I pledge to be an instrument of God's will for the mending of Creation. I pledge to look at the stranger and know that that person too is a child of God . . . to be more aware of Creation — the rolling waves of the sea, the grain of sand, the flowers in the garden — to be surprised by its beauty and mindful of its vulnerability.

Finally, I pledge to act in a way that is in covenant with these connections, seeking God's forgiveness when I fall short, reconnecting myself to God's will to mend.

Thank you for your thoughts and sharing your pledges with your community.

Trouble-shooting at the RTF: Plastic. All plastic containers are recyclable (reasonably clean); however, no bags, flower pots with dirt etc. Please tell your friends and neighbors, and please remind them that bags are now being recycled at Star Markets.

Aluminum. We no longer accept aluminum foil or baking tins for recycling — the dealers do not want them.

Note: We recycled 108 tons in February and March for a savings of $5,221.07. Let's keep this growing! Great work.

Cohasset students take the reins of state for a day

Melissa Christoffel and Robin Haynes of Cohasset High School April 6 joined state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray of the 3rd Plymouth District, the 43rd annual student government day.

"Student government day," Murray said, "is a program designed to encourage students to learn directly, through participation about the structure of state government, to encourage active citizen participation and to assist in their developing and understanding about the rights and responsibilities that we share in a democracy. "This is an informative program about state government which ends with students participating in the role of elected or appointed officials to run the state government for a day," Murray added.

On the day the elected students assembled at the State House in Boston, they conducted proceedings in the same manner as the General Court.

The method of election was school-wide and limited to members of the junior and senior class.

The students submitted proposals for legislation to be researched and debated on student government day. Of the submitted proposals, six were selected for debate.

The following legislation was selected:

An act to require public school students to pass with proficiency a semester course of world geography and culture.

The course would serve to promote world citizenship, a greater understanding of various cultures and to combat ignorance of world and national geography. It would also serve to eliminate racial hatred and prejudice by allowing students to become familiar with other cultures.

An act to prosecute a minor as an adult under specific circumstances.

A minor who commits a crime prior to the age of 18, and goes to trial for the crime after the age of 18, shall be required to be tried as an adult.

An act to provide free state college tuition to academically gifted students.

Students must maintain a cumulative 3.5 average upon graduation. The tuition and room and board will be paid for by the state government for the first four years. If the student transfers to a private or out of state college, he/she will not receive the funds.

Melissa Christoffel and Robin Haynes of C.H.S. flank Nancy O'Toole, legislative aide to Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray

An act to prohibit the sale and distribution of alcoholic beverages at public events.

Any substance that has any alcoholic contents whatsoever with the exception of any substance produced for medicinal use shall be banned at any event in which admittance is free or charged, and is open to the general public, not limited to any specific group (examples: sporting events/games, concerts, theater). Exemptions from this law would include bars, taverns, pubs.

An act to: to allow the legal termination of life supported by artificial means.

Be it enacted that an individual may determine his/her own right to die if they are sustained solely by artificial means and if they state such in an authorized will.

An act to require 100 percent qualified voter attendance at annual election.

Election day shall be declared a state holiday, where every citizen qualified to vote in Massachusetts state elections is required to do so.

If a person is unavailable on election day, that person will be required to fill in an absentee ballot. An undecided box shall be added to the ballots for those who wish not to choose a candidate.

On student government day students performed in the roles of their counterparts.

The activities included committee hearings on the selected legislation and then debated them in the House and Senate sessions, executive council and cabinet meetings, and each student department head acted as a chief executive for the day.

PSO annual meeting

The Cohasset PSO will hold its annual spring meeting and election of officers Thursday, May 10 at 7:30 p.m. in the Cohasset High School cafeteria.

Following a brief business meeting, a panel consisting of a school administrator, two teachers and a school psychologist will discuss the topic "Exploring Grouping Practices K-12; Are We on the Right Track?"

This forum will examine how ability grouping/tracking affects the learning and social-emotional development of students.

A question-and-answer period will follow. The PSO encourages all interested in the educational future of Cohasset children to attend.

Cohasset man has 'sandwich' recipe for peace

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Microscience, Inc. in Accord Park is in the "glorious sandwich" business, says company president and founder Antoni Z. Drybanski, a Cohasset resident.

And although the industrial park in Norwell where Microscience is based may seem like a very tiny corner of the planet — the modern semi-conductor chip, a complex sandwich of thin layers of material — has made it possible for man to go to the moon and beyond.

Microscience develops and manufactures advanced thin film research and production systems — the heart of microchip making — for electronic and mechanical engineering.

Cohasset's Toni Drybanski (center), president of Microscience, Inc., meets with the senior staff of the Institute of Microelectronics in the U.S.S.R. Academy of Science.

NOT MARKING TIME

But Microscience, which has a customer list of 'Fortune 500' companies like IBM, Kodak, and Bell Labs to name a few, isn't marking time.

Drybanski and Oleg Popov, Ph.D., a vice president of the firm, recently returned from a trip to Russia where they established friendly contacts with some Soviet scientists.

After meeting several Soviets during an 'electronic trade' show in West Germany last September, Drybanski and Popov were invited to the U.S.S.R. Academy of Science in Chernogolovka, a city about 40 miles from Moscow.

Microscience operates an International Trading Division for the sale of high technology products from overseas suppliers.

And although its list of corporate executives include Drybanski, Popov, and Charles K. Lok, who are natives of England, Russia, and Hong Kong respectively, and George Ferrio, a native American—the potential Russian market is unchartered territory.

FIRST U.S. VISITORS

"We were the first U.S. visitors to go there," says Drybanski. Chernogolovka is in the Moscow missile defense perimeter, a protective area surrounding the Russian capital which, until recently, has been strictly 'classified' — off limits to foreigners.

Drybanski is hoping to trade Soviet scientific expertise for American technological know how.

Popov, a senior physicist, who holds an M.S. degree from the Moscow Institute of Power and a Ph.D. from the University of Moscow, is able to give insight into how the Russians have been taught to think for the past 70 years.

"We were taught that private property is bad," he explains. "The government made people think it is better to work for knowledge itself. Profit is not good."

So Popov explains, Russia has many scientists who have made interesting discoveries — but they have not been able to transfer their discoveries into technological products or advancements.

That is where American expertise could come in, he says.

"The Function of Pain"

Pain is important to your well-being. It is nature's early warning signal. A message relayed through your nervous system that tells you when something is wrong. As such, pain is merely a symptom and not the cause of most health problems. Therefore, the sensible approach to health is not to merely turn off the pain (or treat the symptom.) But rather to find the causes and correct them.

line, making communication within Russian borders difficult — and outside the country, virtually impossible.

So making the effort to establish contacts on a personal - press the flesh - basis will pay off in the long term.

"We had a real exchange, they were very open," says Drybanski.

"It's important to have those high-level contacts and to nuture those contacts," he says. "We don't see an immediate pay off.

"But for an investment of air fare — we are ready to get on airplanes and look for business around the world."

THE RUSSIANS ARE COMING

Plans are in the works for the Russian scientists to visit Microscience in Norwell later this month.

Microscience officials and the Russian scientists will work in the Norwell laboratory for about four-to-six weeks in a mini-development program.

"We'll apply some of their expertise." Drybanski adds Microscience and the Russians will share their joint research in scientific and professional journals.

Drybanski says the electronic industry cannot be taken lightly.

He says, expertise in electronics will give those that seek it — the competitive edge.

"Japan has become a major economic power because the Japanese know electronics drive everything," says Drybanski, who adds that electronics are the "centerpiece" of a modern economy.

U.S. FALLING BEHIND

And it's time the United States got with the program.

"There's a danger we could fall behind in pure statistical terms — the top five producers of (micro) chips in the world are all Japanese now.

"The United States is no longer the principal vendor in a multi-polar world," he says. "The message is that we are part of a world economy. We cannot operate independently — the rest of the world has a slice of our market."

Russia is lacking the infrastructure to make it competitive, Drybanski notes.

"It's an opportunity we see that they need to bring their capabilities up to date."

Shine Program news

The Shine program has arranged for two speakers this month to talk about the many changes going on in the insurance industry.

On May 2, at 3 North Main Street, Bob O'Beck, Blue Cross/Blue Shield representative, will speak at 10 a.m. He will offer an update on the changes in Medex rates, the new Medex Basic supplement, and be available to answer questions.

On May 6, at 10 a.m., Kathy Glenzel, a health policy analyst at the Executive Office of Elder Affairs, will speak on Medicare changes since the repeal of the catastrophic care bill.

She will discuss what is in effect for 1990 under Medicare and what was left in place under the repeal of the catastrophic care bill.

She will discuss and answer your questions about supplements and HMOs.

In the wake of the Medex rate increases, the council has received many phone calls from insurance salesmen representing companies who sell supplemental insurance policies. In light of this, the council offers these thoughts: there are three basic types of supplements and insurance companies offering competing policies.

Some companies underwrite, some require waiting periods for pre-existing conditions and some require you do the paper work yourself.

There are many new options available to seniors and you should choose one supplemental plan that best suits your individual needs. If you are considering changing policies, review them all carefully. If you have questions about a particular policy, call the Council on Aging office, 383-9112, and speak with a Shine volunteer.

Fine men's shoes are classically Wright

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Traditional men's shoes supplied by E.T. Wright. (H. Sahl staff photo)

One office in the old E.T. Wright shoe factory in Rockland is decorated with walls of shoe samples set on wooden shelves behind glass.

The walls display the company's classic sense of styling.

"The important thing is comfort," said Paul Eidlin of Pembroke, Wright's marketing director as he explained that men will indeed pay for a combination of comfort and style.

Shoes made by E.T. Wright are not cheap — even at the factory outlet in Rockland, despite the deep discounts offered for irregulars and discontinued styles. Retailed through either the company's own catalog or stores like Taymore's the shoes sell from $90 to $180.

The company was founded 114 years ago when Rockland was deep in the heart of shoe-country. The old factory is still the company headquarters but now shoemakers in New Bedford, Altoona, Penn., and even Italy have entered the overall picture.

From the start, E.T. Wright shoes were sold through department stores and men's shoe stores.

About 10 years ago, the company began selling by catalog. As shoe stores stopped carrying a full range of shoe sizes, the company provided its own answer for men with unusual foot sizes. Most of the styles range from size 7 to 14, in widths from AA to EEE.

In the lower priced shoes, there are some rubber soles. But the body of the shoe is leather.

"European calfskin is softer than American," Eidlin said. "We've always used European calfskin in our shoes."

He talked about the steel shank that's used in even the softer shoes and the bump known as the Arch Preserver. The bump in the sole of the shoe is designed to give additional comfort.

"What your mother always told you is true. These are the kinds of shoes that give support," Eidlin said, pointing to his own simple dress shoes.

He said loafers — which E.T. Wright makes and sells very well — appeal to what men what in terms of style but just don't give the support that the more classic tie-shoes provide.

While the company sticks to what it does best — classic men's shoes — there is a line of New Balance athletic shoes in the catalog and in the factory outlet.

As he talked about today's merchandise, Eidlin pulled out a shoe box with a pair of 70 year old shoes made by E.T. Wright. Aside from being out-of-date — since high button men's shoes have gone the way of bell-bottomed pants — the shoes were in amazingly good condition.

"We still focus of quality," Eidlin said. He called the type of construction "machine-assisted manufacturing."

Most of the shoes are in dark colors.

Black shoes are the most popular, according to Eidlin. Burgundy-colored shoes take second place. But Eidlin said brown is starting to make a comeback.

Tan, off-white, white and blue shoes are also available.

A traditional sort of dress shoe is still the number one seller. But loafers with tassels and walking shoes are high up there in terms of sales.

"In the past few years, the whole industry has been revolutionized by the athletic shoe people," Eidlin said.

"As lifestyle in general has become more casual, the demand for dress shoes has fallen."

He said that change in lifestyle has led E.T. Wright to expand its line into more casual styles.

"We're still offering quality, fit and comfort. But we're offering it to a different customer."

Whole world comes together fashionably

By Laurie Kaiser
Mariner staff

The world is coming together, and fashion is following the trend. We have World Beat in music and an ethnic influence in spring and fall fashions.

"It started from the designer level down and from the street up," says Robyn Waters, fashion director for Jordan Marsh.

Teens started the trend by wearing woven scarfs from Pakistan and India and ethnic jewelry with their jeans and Ts. These accessories are generally inexpensive and readily available. Pier 1 Imports has long been a source of these adornments, but now the major department stores are carrying them.

Curious accessories play a major role in creating the ethnic look. Earrings will be large, conversation pieces. The shoulder duster, long drop earrings, and the chandelier, which dangles and jingles, are musts this season. Matte gold, brushed gold, bronze, verdigris, faux ivory, amber are big in jewelry. Wood, seashells and sea glass (glass softened and polished by the ocean) are also in.

"Anything natural is really wonderful," Waters says.

Though it has been readily apparent in apparel for juniors, the ethnic influence hasn't been as strong in women's clothing — until this season. The designers are using it liberally — Oscar de la Renta offers this season a popcorn silk top and pajama pants in orange with a long puckered silk and linen gauze cardigan in red. When worn with strands of earthtone beads and wooden earrings and perhaps a burnished gold bracelet or two, the ethnic look is complete. Romeo Gigli designed a draped bustier top in pistachio velour to be worn with a classic trouser pant in silk cotton brocade of hunter green with burgundy, which is typical of opulent evening wear.

Kim Woodhouse, spokeswoman for Lord and Taylor, says batik patterns from Bali, ikat prints from Africa, China embroderies, Indian border patterns are all elements of this fashion mood.

"Shape and color will be the most dramatic thing in creating the overall look," Woodhouse says.

Spice colors and earthtones are big for spring and fall. Burnt orange is a major color for spring. Saffron, gold, apple green and "poison" green, eggplant, russets, reds and purple predominate. Coral, bright pink and turquoise are also in.

"If you think of the colors of a Gaugin painting, that's the palette," says Waters. Fall colors will simply be richer versions of the spring colors, "the shades of a Persian carpet.

Things are softening up for spring. As W magazine says, it's the season of "slouch chic." Unconstructed jackets, silk blouses and island-inspired sarong skirts are all part of the picture.

Lisa Yarussi models Filene's own gold-tone matching earrings and necklace. Accessories are on the heavy side this season.
(H. Sahl staff photo)

Waters says the sarong is a "must-have" for the spring wardrobe. Silk, washable silk and rayon are preferred fabrics.

Rita Mucera, fashion-promotion coordinator for Filene's, says spring signals a new attitude — women can be feminine. Constructed looks with shoulder pads are passé.

"Spring is going to bring a beautiful new softness," Muscera says.

This means flowing, constructed clothes in neutrals, pastels and some brights. The big fabrics are linen, cotton, gabardine, silk and rayon.

Length is as you like it: long and fluid or short and slim.

"Don't worry about length," says Mucera. "Don't everyone lose any sleep over it. Designers have showered us with a myriad of choices."

The ethnic look can be translated into office wear.

"A sarong skirt can be very professional when paired with a classic, conservative jacket," says Woodhouse.

The jacket is de rigueur. Mucera says it has become a woman's "security blanket."

Look for the return of the Nehru jacket. The safari looks are still in. But Mucera says the trend is toward Colonial Africa, a khaki jacket paired with a lace blouse, for example, reminiscent of "Out of Africa."

Flats dominate footwear, but heels certainly aren't out of the picture. To go along with the "bare" look of spring and summer are cutout shoes and sandals in earthtones and metallics.

For evening, opulence is key. Metallic embroidery adorns a lot of evening wear.

"The big buzz word in the market for fall is Byzantine," Waters says.

As we move into fall, the fabrics become more luxurious: velvet, velour, lamé, chenille, wool flannel, cashmere, silk, matelasse, mohair. Embroidery, brocade and jewel trims adorn the soft silhouettes. Fringe detail will be carried from spring into fall. And Oriental, Western, harlequin and Russian influences will be seen in a lot of women's clothing.

The early signs of fall from the current fashion shows in Paris and Milan indicate that odd and fussy are out and sporty or rich and luxurious are in.

Kids clothes reach new heights

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Kids' clothes -- for toddlers through preteens — is a business growing like Topsy on the South Shore.

And if Topsy shopped around the South Shore, she'd find increasing attention to fashion.

Snazzy kids' clothes are hot.; plain old jeans are not.

Stores with classic and high-fashion outfits for children are crowded with customers who want to buy. Despite declining numbers of children in the age range and increasing competition, kids' clothing shops are doing better than ever.

Hingham-based Talbots put out its first kids' clothing catalog last summer. The new spring line reflects the kind of clothes the store is famous for — preppie, classic styles.

A year ago Talbots included several items for young girls in its Christmas catalog. One was a little girl's nightgown that matched one offered in women's sizes. Another was a velvet party dress, also matching one available for women.

The response was incredible, according to Monet LeMon, Talbot's public relations director.

"We offer the classics, the best quality at the best value," LeMon said. "The clothes won't wear out. They aren't trendy. We know our customers and try to offer what the customers ask for. We operate an extensive customer service department. Customers kept asking us when we were going to open a kids' line."

The kids' catalog was mailed to the 2.5 million Talbots catalog customers last summer.

LeMon said she thinks catalog shopping is ideal for busy families "Especially when you find both parents working, shopping just takes too much time. The children can sit down with the catalog with their parents and enjoy making the choices."

Prices in the catalog are on the high side. There are attractive pine green jodhpurs in pinwale corduroy in sizes 4 to 6X for $30. Or a boys' double-breasted trench coat (dry clean only) for $132. The lined coat comes in sizes 4 to 12.

Or there's a pretty floral dress in sizes 7 to 14 in a blend of cotton and polyester for $98. The dress comes in black with a white dotted lace collar and satin sash. In little girls' sizes, the same dress is $84.

LeMon said the initial response indicates people will pay the prices.

One sales clerk at a children's clothing shop said she did not believe people would buy much at the catalog prices. But LeMon said orders are coming in for whole outfits.

Coordinated outfits are hot this year in the children's market.

Carole Baron of Carolann's in Hingham Square recently talked about the change in children's fashions. She and her husband, Marty, own the infants' and children's clothing store.

"Children are extremely fashion-conscious today," Baron said.

"In the '70s, kids just wore dungarees, plain dungarees. That was the style. Now you have children who want high style and parents are delighted. They want their children to look nice."

Carolann's offers discounted merchandise in both classic and fashion-forward styles. Boys and girls from infants to size 14 are fitted, and some boys' size 16 are included. The shop opened four years ago with girls' size 7 to 14 clothes. The location was smaller then, but business was good. The new shop — not far from the original location — is five times as large and a few toys have been added to the large line of children's clothing.

"We're not funky because our customers aren't," Baron said as she handed an attractive sweatshirt to a young customer to try on. "Denim is still big. There's a lot done with it. It isn't plain."

Barrettes adorned with ribbons matched many outfits. A whole line of girls' clothes was dotted with tiny red hearts — hair ribbons, socks, turtle necks, suspenders.

The boys' clothes, too, are highly coordinated.

"Coordination is in," Baron said. "People want the styling, the quality. People just want to see their children looking good."

At Little Bits in Duxbury, there's a different way of handling the concern about cost as the consignment portion of the shop offers an alternative to full-priced clothing.

But the main concern of customers iat Little Bits is classic styling and quality.

Kids Ahoy in Pembroke on Route 139 is showing some glittering outfits for young girls this season.

Purple is popular.

Brights are selling very well. Pastels are also in fashion — both for girls and boys.

For boys jungle outfits are hot this season, as are bright colors.

Designer markets reality in swimsuits

"Believe in yourself" has been multi-millionaire designer Carol Wior's motto from the beginning of her career.

Wior started making dresses in a garage in Arcadia, California at age 23 with a total savings of $77. Confident she had a marketable idea, Wior converted a milk truck into a delivery van and personally distributed her dresses. Within three years, her business blossomed into the multimillion dollar Luci Pellini line of dresses.

A merging of her business with husband Bernard Wior's robe and loungewear companies has led to The Wior Corporation's combined total of more than $65 million in volume business.

A dedicated businesswoman with a "hands-on" approach, Carol Wior later designed a successful Marilyn Monroe line of dresses. As the creator and licensee of the Monroe line, she toured the country with a Marilyn Monroe look-a-like model. She staged in-store fashion shows which gained wide media attention with sales reaching several million dollars.

Ever the entrepreneur, Carol launched a line of ladies panties and nightshirts all designed with a miniature computer chip stitched in the corner. Upon pressing the chip, a favorite tune is heard such as "Love Me Tender" or "Let Me Call You Sweetheart."

Carol Wior

But it is Wior's creation of the "Slimsuit" that has revolutionized the entire swimwear industry. Nothing has caused more excitement among customers and knowledgeable industry watchers from coast-to-coast since the introduction of the bikini.

The phenomenal "Slimsuit" sales have boosted Carol Wior into national prominence. Sales figures for the 1990 swimwear line are projected to top the $30 million mark.

As a businesswoman and entrepreneur, Wior is one of only 4 percent of women in the U.S. to invent a product and obtain a patent from the U.S. Government. It took her a year and a half to do so, but the rewards for the wait have been worthwhile.

The "Slimsuit" guarantees an inch or more off the waist and stomach of the average or full-figured woman. It is sold with a tape measure so customers can see the "measurable difference."

"You'll lose an inch and gain the glamor," states Carol of her patented swimsuit which has a special inner lining throughout and hidden underwires in the bra to enhance a woman's figure.

Since the introduction of the "Slimsuit" four years ago and working with thousands of customers during in-store fashion shows and fit clinics, Wior states, "I found that most women had nice figures, but their swimsuits just didn't do them justice."

She even conducted a swimsuit survey asking over 60,000 women to fill out a questionnaire describing what they wanted in her "Slimsuit."

"I feel fortunate to be able to work with my customers because they are always honest," notes Carol. "Their input is invaluable and I incorporate their ideas into the design of the 'Slimsuit.'"

Fashions made in the USA comeback big

It came into its own in the 1920s as women got the vote, bobbed their hair and hiked their hemlines — and it's been going strong ever since.

That's more evident than ever this spring, as "Made in U.S.A." fashions take us all down memory lane with styles that echo favorites from the past 70 years.

U.S. apparel manufacturers are paying tribute to the past with more than just fringed flapper dresses for the evening. There are waist-fitted, strong-shouldered suits and jumpsuits reminiscent of the 40s and Rosie the Riveter. Also back are the full-skirted shirtdresses echoing those of TV's madcap Lucy, and the sultry halter dresses immortalized by Marilyn Monroe.

The lasting influence of the 60s and 70s is with us in today's diversity of hemlines, pant styles and active sportswear looks. And the red-white-and-blue motifs popular during the celebrations of Lady Liberty's 100th birthday and Constitution's Bicentennial look ship-shape in all-American nautical styles for this first spring of the new decade.

"Some of the best fashion trends enjoyed by women over the years are back — but better than before," said Debbye Turner, Miss America 1990 and the national emissary for the quality and design excellence of clothing made here in the U.S.A.

"Today's U.S.-made fabrics have made these clothes easier to care for, more comfortable and more versatile than ever — perfect for the busy schedules and lifestyles of women in the 1990s."

Pirates pummel the Skippers

By David McKee
Mariner staff

The Cohasset High School baseball team had one of those days against Hull.

The Hull Pirates raided the Skippers 24-5 to hand them their third loss on the year.

"I'm a sore sport and don't like to lose," coach Ted MacDermott said. "But we have to be patient with this team. This year will be a constant learning process and that begins with me. I really hope the kids can bounce back from this loss and build from it. We have to stay upbeat and positive and think of the big picture and that is developing players for down the road."

The game was a blow out from the start.

The Pirates jumped all over Skipper starter senior Noah Hill, who had pitched superbly against Duxbury in his last start.

In Hill's four innings of work, he surrendered 18 runs.

"He was getting the ball over but they were hitting it," MacDermott said. "Hull is one of the stronger offensive clubs in the South Shore Small League and they showed that out there. They hammered the ball out there."

Freshman Joe Andre relieved Hill and pitched the final two innings. He allowed six runs, but struck four along the way.

"I was encouraged with how Joe pitched," MacDermott said. "He came into a tough situation and threw well. But even though Noah was hit pretty well, he kept his sense of humor about it. He was smiling on the outside, but it must have hurt inside."

Hull ended up collecting 21 hits on the day.

"Hull didn't rub it in or anything," MacDermott said. "They emptied their bench, but you can't tell your kids to hold back."

As for the Skipper offense, they did manage to score five runs and collected a season high ten hits.

"We have gone from one hit, to five hits, to ten hits in our three games," MacDermott said. "So the kids are hitting better and that will be a plus for us as the season unwinds."

The Skippers got their first run in the second inning as junior Matt Berger singled in senior Curt Ludlow who led off the inning with a single.

The Skippers scored two more in the fourth. In that inning Hill scored on an error from a ball hit by freshman Peter Fahey.

Freshman John Maynard followed with a single that scored Berger, who had earlier walked.

The final two Skipper runs were scored in the seventh on RBI singles by Ludlow and Hill.

Three Skippers led the way offensively as Hill, Berger and freshman Nate Fiorrie each had two hits.

"We didn't have a great game at Hull," MacDermott said. "We just took a good old-fashioned beating. But I was pleased that we cut down on some of the mental errors we made against Duxbury. With a young team like ours, you expect mistakes, both mental and physical. A lot of these kids could be down on the JV's, but because of the numbers situation, they are being tossed into the fire.

In addition to the tough loss against Hull, the Skippers lost Mike Ellinger to an ankle injury over vacation.

"He will be out at least a week and maybe more," MacDermott said. "There's a possibility of bone chips, but we are still waiting for word from the doctor. But with our lack of experience we cannot afford to lose a player like Mike. Not only was he our most experienced pitcher, but he swung a good bat. He connected for a homer in our first game."

Due to the injury, MacDermott will be juggling his

Drains Run Slow?

You'll never have a slow running, or clogged drain again! The secret? Clean drains don't run slow.

Slow drains, or periodic clogs, are SIGNALS that a thick layer of GOOK is choking your pipes. Grease, hair, and other waste stick to your pipes, with every use. This gook deposits along the entire length of the pipe. It chokes your pipes gradually, as it gets thicker and thicker.

Conventional drain openers can't fix slow drains. They react chemically on the surface of the gook. To be effective, they must remain in contact with the waste. Even a small tunnel through the gook lets them flow out to the sewer, leaving the gook behind.

In the past, the only way to remove this build-up was to rooter your pipes. An expensive, temporary measure.

Now, with just a few minutes each month, you can easily clean out your pipes... and KEEP them clean with Plumb Clean. Its totally unique formula clings, and penetrates deep into the gook. That is what allows it to liquefy even years of build-up. Plumb Clean will clean the entire length of your pipes. It will make your drains run like new, when used as directed. This penetrating action is so revolutionary, we stand behind Plumb Clean with a money-back guarantee!

Saves Money. A 1 lb. container of Plumb Clean holds up to 41 drain treatments. Even if drain openers could fix slow drains, it would take over 10 quart bottles to get the same number of treatments. Plumb Clean costs about 35¢ per treatment. We don't know of anything that cleans drains for less.

Safe Too. Conventional drain openers are dangerous chemicals. They can injure eyes on contact. They can release deadly vapors, in some situations. Some may damage your fixtures. Plumb Clean will not burn skin, or eyes. It will not release harmful fumes. When used as directed, it is 100% safe for people, and of course, all plumbing.

So, if your drains are giving you a SIGNAL, act now. Get safe, guaranteed Plumb Clean today!

Choral arts performs

Acclaimed organist David Carrier will accompany the Harbour Choral Arts Society in a performance of Maurice Durufle's "Requiem," at 8 p.m. on Saturday, April 28 at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Cohasset.

A spring motif will be featured on the rest of the evening's program. The 50-member community Chorus under the direction of Ken Clinton, choral director at Hanover High School, will perform "The Spring Time of the Year," by R. Vaughan Williams, "Now is the Month of Maying," and "My Garden," both composed by Carol Nicholeris, a member of the Harbour Choral Arts Society tenor section, and "A Prayer for Spring" a poem by Robert Frost with music composed by Clinton.

Currently completing their third year, members of the Harbour Choral Arts Society have delighted audiences with memorable performances of such challenging choral works as Brahms "German Requiem" and Thompson's "Frostiana." The group has been working or the haunting Durufle composition since January and members are looking forward to performing the piece which features one of the most beautiful and difficult organ scores in the modern music repertory.

Tickets for previous concerts have consistently sold briskly. Those wishing to attend the concert are advised to reserve tickets by calling 878-6331. Prices are $5 for adults and $4 for students and senior citizens. Tickets will also be available at Hanover High School beginning April 23.

A dance group from Cohasset High School and the Deer Hill School recently performed at the South Shore Conservatory in Hingham.

Golden Tape awards May 1

Continental Cablevision will recognize the commitment and expertise of the community television volunteers on the South Shore at the sixth Annual Golden Tape Awards, to be held Tuesday, May 1, at the Barker Tavern in Scituate.

The awards ceremony will be presented live on Continental Channel 53, which can be seen in six area communities: Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Scituate. The telecast begins at 7:30 p.m.

Golden Tape Awards will be handed out in several categories, including best series, best documentary, best director, best municipal affairs program, and the much coveted producer of the year.

In addition to the 14 judged categories, special awards will also be presented by the local programming directors to particularly dedicated volunteers and production crews.

Among the programs nominated are such established favorites as "Newsbeat 53," "After Hours," "Detwiler's Journal," "Pierson to Person," "In the Wings," "Senior Spectrum," and "The Parents Club," as well as many other series and special presentations.

Lazy eye clinic, May 2

Under the auspices of the Cohasset Social Service League, trained volunteers will carry out a town-wide screening for amblyopia (lazy eye) on Wednesday morning, May 2, at 9 a.m.

All 3- and 4-year-olds not presently enrolled in nursery school should be tested that day.

Children in nursery school will be tested at school. This screening, which is free, will be done at Trueblood Hall of the First Parish House 23 North Main St.

If you have any questions, call the Social Service League at 383-0771.

Boating course begins

The U.S. Coast Guard Academy-Flotilla 1208, and Cohasset Recreation Department safe boating course will begin Tuesday, May 1, at 7:30 p.m., at Cohasset High School's, A-V Room.

Only a few openings remain for the May 1 class, and anyone who is interested in registering should call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791 immediately.

The six-lesson course, taught by members of Flotilla 1208, will be completed in three weeks, meeting Tuesday and Thursday evenings, from May 1 through May 17.

The program is open to both youths and adults, and is essential by Massachusetts Law, for youths under age 16 who plan to operate a craft of 25 horsepower or more.

The fee for this program is $15, which defrays the cost of the class text book and course materials supplied by the United States Coast Guard Auxiliary.

Club compiles history

As part of its recognition of the 30th anniversary of its founding, the Cohasset Sailing Club is compiling a history of highlights from its past.

Club members, past and present, are being solicited for written documents, memorabilia, photographs, and other material to help in this effort.

The anniversary will be celebrated this summer.

Ray Kasperowicz and Katherine Stanton have begun assembling a committee of interested sailing club members to help decide on the format for the history.

Some of the options are a brochure, a series of scrapbooks, and/or permanent display at the club.

Already donated are several old photographs, news clippings, souvenirs, and file documents from the club's early days.

Both current and former members are urged to take an hour or so to scour their attics, file drawers, and photo albums for donations to this endeavor, particularly things from the 1960's and 1970's.

The committee has set a tentative deadline of May 1 for donations, so that work can begin in earnest on the club's history.

Lee Erew took a blue ribbon at the Cohasset Garden Club's flower show Tuesday at St. Stephen's.

Additional committee members are being sought, and those interested can call Kasperowicz or Stanton for more details.

Youth soccer players light up the fields of Cohasset

By Carol Riley
Special to the Mariner

In Coastal Youth Soccer League action, the following mixed results for Cohasset teams are reported covering the past two weekends:

Girls Under-16-1 lost a tough game to Plymouth 4-0 on Sunday. Playing strong at halfback were Jessica Pyfrom and Colby Lawrence. Coach, Jack O'Brien noted that Jessica MacDonald played a great game at fullback.

Boys under-14-1 team tied Pembroke 3-3 with goals by: Jeremiah Stevenson; Eric Henry, assisted by Charlie Endris; and Drew Pozatek, assisted by Eric Henry, who played a generally outstanding game.

Strong on defense was Dave Nothnagle, who has one of the strongest shots on this superior team. Looking good in goal were Ben Redfield and Tim Brister.

Boys Under-14-2 squad lost a close away game to Plymouth 2-0 on Sunday. Playing very well were: Kennie Leahy, Pat Reynolds, Greg Schultz, Dean Volungis, with Chris McKenna, as always, strong in goal.

Girls Under-14-2 scored a 7-0 blowout over Pembroke with four goals by Melinda Johansen; one each by Erin Murphy, Megan Rhodes, and Dawn Meehan.

Jessica Snow was strong on defense, as were Jessica Connor and Molly Hamill at midfield.

Last Saturday, this fine team lost a close one to Plymouth in the rain 2-1. The lone goal was scored by Melinda Johansen. Superb defense by Steffie Lubitz, Andrea Mercurio and Corrina McMackin and many effective stops by goaltender, Emily D'Urso made this a thriller.

Boys Under-12-1 last week whipped Pembroke 4-1, with goals by: Greg Neal on an assist from Jason Murphy; Dylan Walsh from Greg Neal; Dylan Walsh again on an assist from Conor Mangan; and Brett MacQuarrie on an assist from Robbie Buckley. Cohasset came on strong after being down 0-1 at the half.

On Saturday this fine team lost a 7-0 mud bath to the Duxbury All-Stars.

Although Cohasset was down 7-0 at the half, the second half was a shut out. Phenomenal in goal was Kevin McKenna.

Girls Under 12-1 team had an early Easter present despite the fact that they only had 13 players.

Tammy Maitland scored three goals and Danielle Nohe scored one. Assists were from Megan McNamara, Nicole Peterson, Amie Theriault and Ashley Brister. The final score was 4-3, a well-deserved victory for these "Skipettes."

On April 21, this team suffered a tough loss to Middleboro, final score: 1-0.

There was superb goaltending by Caroline DeLima. Midfielders Megan McNamara, Chloe Chittick, Andrea Freemand and Nicole Peterson gave strong support in both offense and defense.

On Sunday this team tied a very strong Plymouth 3-3, with two goals scored by Danielle Nohe and one by Ashley Brister. Laura Slotnick was outstanding in fullback position. With a tie against Plymouth, the "Skippettes" felt victorious.

Girls Under 10-1 on April 14, lost 1-0 to Pembroke. There was outstanding front line performance by Kristen Reynolds, Megan Conley and especially Alyssa McNamara.

Alison Kinchla's first half goal tending was very good.

On April 19, this strong team won a close one over Duxbury 1-0. Alyssa McNamara scored her first goal of the season. Good offensive play by Sally Hamill, Sarah Nohe and Janet Hoyler helped bring in the win.

On Sunday, Sacred Heart beat Cohasset 1-0. Outstanding goaltending by Alison Kinchla and Maggie Goedecke kept this game close. Alison Hawks, Jane Flaherty and Courtney Brown each made big defensive plays.

The Coastal Youth Soccer League is hoping for drier fields and sunny skies for this coming weekend's contests.

line-up even more.

Sophomore catcher Mike Rollandeli will now see some action on the mound and Fiorrie will move behind the plate to cover for him.

"We are playing a new numbers game and we don't have the depth to begin with," MacDermott said.

The Skippers face Norwell later this week and then get fully into their league schedule.

Soccer camps sign-up

The Cohasset Recreation Department, along with South Shore Soccer Camp and V.I.P. Soccer Camps, are offering a multi-program, summer soccer camp for area children, aged 4 through 18.

A number of options are available to children this year, and include a full-day camp program, a half-day and a 1-1/2 hour-per-day camp program, as well as separate girls and boys camps for ages 8 and over.

Brochures, complete with application forms are available at the window of the recreation department office, first floor, new addition of Cohasset Town Hall, or you may call the office for further details at 383-6791. Children should register now for these summer camp programs.

Town borrows full $1.9 million to buy Lily Pond land

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

During the April 25 session of town meeting, less than 100 Cohasset residents committed the town to borrowing $1.9 million.

The money will be spent on 37 acres of land abutting Lily Pond to protect the reservoir from pollution.

By an easy margin of 97 to 15, voters agreed to buy the land. Later they agreed to raise water rates to help pay the debt.

The new rates are expected to cause a $72 increase in the average household water bill, according to water commission Chairman Ron Goodwin.

Wayne Sawchuk, speaking for the advisory committee, decried that only 100 or so voters would decide a purchase of this magnitude. He called on viewers of the live-action cable show to come down to the high school and vote, but had no takers.

Sawchuk contended the land was overpriced by $1 million. By spending that kind of money on the Lily Pond land, he said, the commission would be unable to pursue other projects, such as cleanup of Peppermint Brook or installation of a pipe from the Aaron River reservoir to the water treatment plant.

"How much more (land around the pond) will we have to buy in order to be safe, Ron?" resident Herbert Towle challenged Goodwin.

"No more," Goodwin replied. "We have a watershed protection district now. The plans for this development were presented before that so they would be grandfathered."

Goodwin also defended the appraisal of the property. Hingham-based appraiser Richard Partridge assessed the property's value at $1.9 in contrast to owner Edward Britt's figure of $3

Britt agreed to the figure of $1.9 million in negotiations with the water commission, making this a "friendly" taking by eminent domain.

Goodwin warned the town has a history of passing up deals, only to regret it later.

"We could have had the land that is now Cohasset Heights Landfill for $40,000. We could have bought the Cox Estate for $800,000."

Dr. Edward Wood backed up Goodwin.

"Twenty-four dollars was considered an enormous sum for the isle of Manhattan at one time. I suggest we hold onto our wonderful water supply."

According to Goodwin, the private Cohasset Con-

SOUTH LOOK

Mr. Buckley goes to Washington

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Joe Buckley answered an ad and now he's going to Washington, D.C.

The ad he answered invited him to apply for the Congressional senior intern program. Buckley was one of four interns chosen from the Tenth District to spend a week getting an inside look at the people, processes and policy issues.

Buckley will participate in an intensive series of seminars, briefings and workshops. The interns also spend some time working in the Washington office of Rep. Gerry Studds.

Buckley said he applied for the internship because in the past few years his involvement in human services for older Americans gradually increased.

It all started rather simply.

After 45 years working in steel fabricating, the last 20 as C.E.O., Buckley retired.

Retirement was boring. He loves gardening and walking and is a self-described "beach bum", but that wasn't enough to fill his days. Buckley volunteered to drive the senior van once a month.

Buckley and the van take older folks on shopping trips, lunch trips, to the hairdresser.

Most of his riders are ladies in their 70s and 80s. The ladies that go on the shopping trips are mostly the same folks and he's gotten to know them well.

"They're real terrific people," he said. They've changed his attitudes about aging.

At 60-something, Buckley doesn't consider himself a senior citizen. He goes along with the 89-year-old lady who doesn't think she needs nursing home insurance because, she says, "I won't live long enough to need it."

The bus riders are on their way to aerobics classes, craft classes and gourmet cooking classes.

Interestingly enough, he notes, men filled most of the gourmet cooking class slots. It is one of the few activities that drew many men.

While driving people to their medical appointments, Buckley discovered many seniors are totally befuddled by health insurance. When the Cohasset

Studds coming to town

In Hingham, U.S. Rep. Gerry E. Studds (D-MA) will hold his thousandth meeting since he began his town-by-town visits in 1973.

During the weekend of May 5 and 6, Studds also will host an exhibition of the entries submitted to his congressional art competition, and a reception for the participating student artists and their families.

On Saturday, May 5, Studds will hold meetings from 1 to 2 p.m. at the Scituate Library; and from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. at the Old Town Hall in Duxbury.

From 4 to 4:30 p.m., he will present awards to the 10th District winners of the congressional art competition at the North River Arts Society, G.A.R. Hall on Old Main Street in Marshfield. The reception begins at 2:30 p.m.

On Sunday, May 6, Studds will hold meetings from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. at the town hall in Cohasset; from 2 to 3 p.m. at the town hall in Hull; and from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. in Barnes Auditorium at the Hingham Town Hall.

Murray seeks re-election

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) announced last week that she will seek re-election to the Massachusetts House of Representatives.

Murray is seeking her eighth term to the House.

She said she has been successful in recent years in obtaining harbor dredging money for Cohasset, Hingham and Hull, in securing funding for a new gate at Strait's Pond, and in obtaining other state grants for the three communities.

Rep. Murray has served the three towns for twelve years. Prior to redistricting in the third Plymouth District, she represented Cohasset and Scituate for two years.

During her announcement at her annual brunch in Hingham Rep. Murray restated her stand against any tax increase "until real cuts are made." She said she wants to see cuts in the higher salaried personnel, many of whom, she believes are "not necessary."

Murray filed the "Sunset" bill which calls for a re-evaluation of every state department every five years.

"Departments which are obsolete or overlapping should be abolished," Murray said.

"One of my reasons for running for state representative 14 years ago was to attempt to down size state government. The time has arrived when others in the legislature agree with me," she said.

MHFA funds available

The Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency (MHFA), in cooperation with the Executive Office of Communities and Development, is making available $25 million for residents to buy their first homes. The low rate 8.45 percent is fixed for 30 years."

The money is available through the agency's traditional general lending program. The mortgages are available on a first-come, first-served basis to borrowers who meet the agency's general eligibility guidelines including credit and home-acquisition cost requirements.

Borrowers may apply for the money through participating lenders. To apply for any of the mortgage funds, borrowers must have an executed purchase and sale or an accepted offer to purchase agreement on an eligible property.

The money is made possible by the federally-authorized Mortgage Revenue Bond (MRB) program. Since 1979, through the use of MRBs, the Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency has paid mortgages for more than 20,000 low-and moderate-income households across the state.

According to state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray said "This 8 45 percent mortgage money will help to make home ownership more affordable for about 250 first-time homebuyers statewide.

For brochures about the agency's various programs and a list of participating lenders, consumers should call MHFA's office of single family programs at (617) 451-2766 or Rep. Landers State House office at (617) 722-2400.

Gardners elect officers

At a recent meeting of the Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset, Alicia Seavy, retiring president, extended thanks to the officers, chairmen of the committees and members for their cooperation and efforts in making the past year a successful one.

Officers for the coming year are: President, Martha Hurtig; Vice President, Jean Syrmopolis; Treasurer, Dot Ahearn; Recording Secretary, Aylsa Goodrich; Corresponding Secretary, Dot Lincoln.

"It is imperative that people take this opportunity to be heard."

The final vote by the siting council on the adequacy of the Clean Harbors proposal is scheduled for May 24.

Curtis Committee sponsors alzheimers telethon

A telethon sponsored by the Curtis Home Committee of Cohasset to benefit the Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore, Inc. (ADSGSS, Inc.) will take place Wednesday, May 9, from 7 to 11 p.m.

The event will be televised on Continental Cablevision's Channel 53, and is intended to further the group's efforts toward respite care and other outreach programs for area Alzheimer's families.

Money raised through the telethon will be targeted to developing a respite care facility and/or interim respite care arrangements for Alzheimer's victims in conjunction with the Curtis Home Committee, and to help defray expenses incurred in promoting the plan for an Alzheimer's care center on the Curtis Estate property.

Although Channel 53's viewing audience is limited to the six towns of Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, and Scituate, publicity and support for the telethon has extended throughout the South Shore to the 22 communities served by ADSGSS: Abington, Braintree, Cohasset, Duxbury, Halifax, Hanover, Hanson, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Kingston, Marshfield, Milton, Norwell, Pembroke, Quincy, Plympton, Randolph, Rockland, Scituate, Weymouth and Whitman.

The committee is receiving donations from businesses and individuals, and local entertainers and community leaders have volunteered their help and related fund raising efforts.

Community leaders expected to attend and lend their support to the telethon include state Sen. Bill Golden, state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, Christy Mihos, Bill Flynn, local selectmen and others.

Jo Ann Mitchell, president of ADSGSS, Inc., will host a series of panel discussions that will include state and regional representatives of the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP), South Shore Elder Services, Inc., local councils on aging, and medical and social service experts.

Co-hosts will include: Wigmore Pierson of "Cohasset Talks: Pierson to Person;" John Noonan, chairman of the Quincy Council on Aging; and Virginia Tierney, state director of the AARP and a member of the board of directors of ADSGSS, Inc.

While the telethon aims to educate the public about the nature and extent of Alzheimer's Disease and the need to fund increased respite care services, the evening also promises to offer fun and entertainment. All-star entertainers include well-known vocalists Rebecca Parris, Jodi Capeless, and Blanche Clark, and a group from the South Shore Men of Harmony.

South Shore businesses are contributing a wide variety of gifts and services to assist Alzheimer's sufferers and their families or to be used as raffle items during the telethon.

An early listing includes: a NYNEX mobile telephone, 20 handbags embossed with the ADSGSS, Inc. logo donated by Goodwin Graphics of Cohasset, three Watch All pest service contracts, a kitchen clock donated by King Jewelers, a Visions cooking pot donated by Cohasset Hardware Company, two tickets to the South Shore Music Circus, carrying bags from the Weymouth Savings Bank, a shrub from Cohasset Landscape, a Goebel figurine from Carousel Antiques, decorator material from Philip H. Smith of Smith Place, a stress ball from Classic Colonial Drug Store, Italian pottery bowl from Fleming's of Cohasset Village, a Vidal Sasson hair dryer from Brooks Drug Store of North Scituate, a gift basket from Brianna Wedding Creations, an athletic suit donated by Zildjian, a Cohasset Art Center class for one adult or one child, and a Cohasset Cookbook donated by Country House Antiques, Cohasset.

Gift certificates have been donated to the telethon for: a pair of Etonic golf shoes, dinner at the Red Lion Inn, Finians, Mill Wharf, and Pier 44 restaurants; Continental Cablevision, Salt Marsh Bed and Breakfast, Trask Tackle, Cohasset Liquors wine selection, Party, Inc. party selections, Buttonwood Bookstore, Noble's Camera Shops, Shaw's Supermarkets, Sun Shack, Peridot, Children's Shop, Sea 'N Cheese, Johnny Appleseed's, Cohasset News Company, The Red Balloon, Hernan's Salon Hair Style, Kit & Kaboodle, Dependable Cleaners of Cohasset, Jay's Hair Salon of North Scituate, Fashion Fabrics of North Scituate, Levoy Florist Shop of North Scituate and Strawberry Parfait of Cohasset.

Human Services Options, Inc., of Quincy has donated two eight-hour respite care certificates. The Scituate Music Center is donating equipment and services to support the evening's entertainment.

Cash donations have been received from the Quincy Savings Bank, South Weymouth Savings Bank, Dial-A-Sale, Castall, Inc., JJ's Dairy Hut, Stylist of Cohasset, Papa Gino's of Cohasset, Pat's Hair Styling for Men, Burnside and Sons, Light House Dry Cleaners, Anderson Fuel of North Scituate, F. W. Woolworth of Cohasset, and Colpitts Travel Center of Cohasset.

During the telethon, volunteers will phone from their homes requesting donations. The organization is looking for additional phone volunteers. Anyone interested should call Joe McElroy, telethon coordinator, at (617) 383-0505. Tax deductible donations of either money or raffle prizes will be publicized during the telethon unless anonymity is requested. You may make donations during the telethon by phoning (617) 545-0643/0584/4907/4908, or by mailing them to: ADSGSS, Inc., in care of Sandra Kent, Treasurer, 1030 Main Street, Hingham, MA 02043.

council on aging developed a health information service called S.H.I.N.E., short for Serving Health Information Needs of the Elderly, he volunteered to become an information specialist.

"It just sort of seemed natural for me," Buckley said. "I've always been involved with health insurance. It was part of my job duties."

Volunteering for the center got Buckley interested in how the needs and concerns of older Americans can be met and how policy is developed. Then he happened across an advertisement for University of Massachusetts-Boston's gerontology program. He signed up.

The day he started classes, Buckley was offered a part-time job. He took it.

He spends one day a week in Boston, mostly doing bookkeeping.

"I have to keep doing something," he explained. "It's nice to get dressed up, get into town and meet young people.

house," he joked.

The house that Buckley and his wife of 45 years, Margaret (more affectionately known as "Mig"), share is located on Linden Drive. They came to Cohasset in 1954. Buckley jokes that they came from Canton because they needed another bedroom.

The house is in the 110 acre subdivision his father developed off Jerusalem Road.

They raised three sons and a daughter in the house. When everyone is home for a visit there aren't enough bedrooms to go around with five granddaughters and a grandson to dote on.

Buckley has spent time cultivating his own gardens—— currently his garage is crammed with flower and vegetable flats he spent the winter raising. He also has a variety of bird feeders that several fat little squirrels raid on a regular basis.

"Oh well," he said resignedly, "they've got to eat, too."

Keeping up with such a busy life means keeping fit. In good weather, Buckley walks three to five miles a day. When the weather turns grim, he retires to the gym he set up in the cellar.

Buckley finishes his two gerontology courses just before going off to Washington. Classes resume in September.

One course focuses on the legislative process. Members of the class followed the progress of a bill through the legislative process. Buckley chose a bill dealing with equal access to nursing homes.

Buckley described the course as providing a behind-the-scenes understanding of how government works.

"We have to interview our own legislators and go to hearings," he said.

The second course is a class on research.

The class developed a questionnaire for senior citizens on how they feel about what is happening at the state house. Course participants are conducting a random telephone survey, hoping to have 450 completed interviews to draw their data from.

Telephone surveys aren't easy, Buckley concluded. Out of 144 calls made one day, he succeeded in getting three interviews.

Buckley said the preliminary results are interesting.

"For the most part, seniors are interested in what's going on," he said.

"They don't want everything for nothing. Their attitude is that you've got to pay for yourself."

Looking forward to the senior intern program, Buckley hopes that the seminars will cover health policy. It's an area he has a special interest in, particularly long term and catastrophic illness care.

Cohasset's Joe Buckley is going to Washington, D.C. to serve as a senior intern for the U.S. Congress.

Buckley thinks the feds botched the catastrophic care program.

"I personally think the people who were involved in developing the plan knew how to sell it," he said.

The plan required that only the wealthier people getting the mandatory coverage would foot the bill. In some cases, that boosted Medicare premiums to as much as $800 a year.

"Many people have pensions that include health insurance. They didn't think they needed new coverage," Buckley explained. "They felt they were being asked to pay more for the same level of coverage."

Buckley thinks the catastrophic care bill can't be resurrected.

"I think we have to start over with something new," he said. "If you take all the money individuals and companies spent on health insurance, Medicare and Medicaid, you could come up with something much better."

Buckley believes the U.S. needs to provide better health care for all its citizens.

"Maybe Canada's plan isn't perfect, but at least it's a start," he said.

The desire to find a better way of providing health care is just one of the issues driving Buckley from the groves of academe to the halls of government.

Buckley doesn't know where these new-found interests and involvements will lead him. Wherever he's bound, he's enjoying the trip.

Solid waste coalition must meet June 1 deadline

By Marilyn Jackson
Mariner staff

The South Shore Coalition and its solid waste consultant, Tellus Institute of Boston, are under the gun to complete the first phase of its study before July 1.

The coalition was awarded a $175,000 state grant in 1988 to develop a model for handling solid waste on a regional level, but only a fraction of the funds were made available—months later, in January 1990 — because of the state's fiscal crisis.

At a meeting last week, Paul Scott, Scituate's town engineer and chairman of the coalition's solid waste subcommittee, said the consultant's draft of the first phase of the project had been completed.

The consultants were asked to survey the existing solid waste management practices in the 10-member towns of the coalition, analyze the quantity and composition of each town's solid waste and consider alternatives to the present handling of solid waste.

Different components of the trash "would be landfilled differently," according to James Goldstein of Tellus Institute.

The more controversial aspect of the study, second phase of the project, is to identify potential sites for solid waste facilities and develop organizational and management alternatives for the implementations of a regional solid waste plan.

With the soaring costs there is no way for communities to handle the solid waste problem except by a regional solution, said Jack Whippen, a member of Marshfield's public works board.

"This is a complex issue. One of the things we learned, since we started in 1986, is that easy solutions ultimately end up in failure, then there is diminished public acceptance," he said.

"A sense of balance of benefits and costs must be met by all participants," said Whippen.

While some communities are handling their solid waste problems differently, for example using SEMASS, nothing is totally irreversible, he continued.

"But we will have to have recycling to achieve control of costs," he said.

Scott said there should be a cost benefit to a regional approach.

"The solution will take money, but if everyone works together, there will be an economic benefit to the community," he said.

Jean Christensen, executive director of the coalition, said the subcommittee has been looking at long-range solutions, for the next 20 years, she said.

"Our hope is that the state will come up with the money"to continue to phase 2, said Scott.

"Another concern we are wrestling with is how many communities have to accept the draft" of the phase 1 study before proceeding with phase 2, he said.

"There is a growing crisis in solid waste management,' said Goldstein.

"That crisis is more obvious with the closing of landfills and the disposal costs increasing rapidly."

"Nimbyism, the not-in-my-back-yard attitude, often was justified," said John Pepi of the state's bureau of solid waste management of the Department of Environmental Protection.

"The proposals were not well thought out," said Pepi.

With the completion of this study, there should be no "nimbyism."

Each member of the coalition has been asked to publicize the draft of the solid waste study and win acceptance so that the consultants can proceed to phase 2.

Eventually, the coalition expects to present a proposal to town meeting to form a regional entity which would deal with solid waste management.

"We are a while away from asking for money," said Christensen.

How much money is planted in your yard ?

Count it up. A couple of flowering shrubs, a hedge and a maple tree from the nursery could amount to as much as $600. You've probably made a considerable investment, in plants alone. A living investment that needs attention to grow.

Take this little quiz, to find out if your landscaping investment is increasing or decreasing in value:

- ☐ Are any of your bushes yellowish?
- ☐ Do any of your trees or shrubs have dead or dying branches?
- ☐ Did your flowering shrubs fail to bloom as well as expected ?
- ☐ Are insects nibbling holes in the leaves ?
- ☐ Are the leaves and branches sparse or stunted ?

If you answered yes to any of these, call us for a free , no-obligation survey and price quote. Our ornamental tree and shrub inspection, pest control and fertilization programs are designed to promote healthy and attractive plants. And healthy landscaping means a healthy increase in your property's value.

FOR AN IDEA OF HOW DIRTY YOUR ORIENTAL RUG IS, RUB THIS AND LOOK AT YOUR FINGER.

Oriental rugs are constantly picking up various types of soil. Some are greasy and some are gritty. But they all can eat away at your treasured possession.

For your Oriental rug to retain its beauty and value, it should be cleaned at least once every three to five years.

At Grillo Oriental Rug Cleaning, we carefully examine each rug, then give it the most suitable treatment. Sometimes that means gentle machine-washing, other times it means our 'Art-Safe' hand-washing. And our exclusive equipment and methodology enable us to remove the deep-set grit that others miss.

Furthermore, unlike harsh commercial cleaning, our individualized, museum-quality care is always safe, always effective.

Town borrows big bucks...

servation Trust has pledged $200,000 over four years to offset the cost of purchasing the land.

The trust has raised money for the purchase of other properties in the past, including Bassings Beach.

Goodwin said the commission plans to approach other groups and foundations and apply for government grants to further reduce the burden on the water rates.

In addition to Goodwin, members of the board of selectmen, health board and conservation commission spoke in favor of the acquisition. Protecting the water supply from pollution was the major theme they stressed.

Not everyone was in favor of buying the land and some questioned the purchase price.

The capital budget and advisory committees opposed the purchase on financial grounds.

Goodwin contended immediate action to protect Lily Pond was essential.

"Right now Cohasset has a good plant and a good water supply," Goodwin said in a recent interview. "Buying the property now will protect that investment.

"Not only will it protect the quality of the water, it will also protect the amount of water."

Goodwin explained that Lily Pond is threatened by the nutrient load in the reservoir. The more nutrients that go into the water, the faster algae and other plant life grow. Ultimately the growth will choke out the water.

"That's a natural process," he said, "but it accelerates and builds on itself."

Nutrient load can be increased by lawn fertilizers and other organic materials entering the pond and from other organic materials

The process is called eutrophication-- from the Greek for "good nutrition." In the case of lakes, ponds and reservoirs, the goodness is doubtful. Local examples of eutrophied water resources include Straits Pond and Little Harbor.

According to Goodwin, the reservoir is already in trouble. Following a 1970 study, the state department of environmental quality and engineering (now called the department of environmental protection) gave the reservoir an unsatisfactory rating based on pollution problems it found.

First, houses already built along the pond raised fears of contamination from lawn fertilizer run-off, septic system failure and oil and gas pollution.

Secondly, houses in the veteran's project neighborhood have constant problems with septic system failure. Goodwin said the failures are caused by percolation problems because the soil in the area is all clay. When the systems fail, the septage flows into Peppermint Brook which empties into Lily Pond.

The state did not order any corrections at that time because the town was actively planning to install a sewer system in the area. The sewer system was to go on line within a year or two.

The sewer system was never built and the septic systems in the veteran's project are still failing.

Goodwin saw greater risks if the 11-lot subdivision was built on the 37 acres abutting Lily Pond.

According to Goodwin, the subdivision plan called for conventional septic systems located in a common area.

"There's a good chance they won't work like a proper septic system," Goodwin said.

Unlike the systems in the veteran's project, if these systems fail there is no buffer like Peppermint Brook that will dilute the raw sewage before it enters the reservoir. The systems will drain directly in front of the intake valve.

Goodwin also challenged the belief that Cohasset could have waited or that an upgraded water treatment plant could have removed any risks. He pointed to the experiences of Scituate and Hingham.

Scituate has a $4 million water treatment plant improvement project underway.

"They're spending $4 million to improve their water and they won't get a drop more water out of it," he said. "It's all being done just to meet the tougher water quality standards."

If that isn't scary enough, Goodwin said, Hingham is planning on building a filtration plant to treat their water at a cost of $6 million.

"It's cheaper to find another source," he said.

Some argue that Cohasset has another source: the Aaron River reservoir.

Unfortunately, Goodwin said, three-quarters of that reservoir are outside town boundaries so it's impossible to adequately protect the water quality. In fact, the reservoir is already being contaminated by leachate runoff from an old Scituate landfill that was capped 10 or 12 years ago.

"You can see the leachate runoff form the landfill," Goodwin said.

Protecting the Lily Pond was the only answer, he believed.

"It's now and forever," Goodwin said, "a one-shot deal."

Chiropractic for Health
by Dr. Debra M. Tranberg & Dr. Susan Emmer
Chiropractors

TWO PROBLEMS, ONE SOURCE

It is not uncommon for a patient to come to the chiropractor for pain in the neck and find that a seemingly unassociated problem gets better during treatment. For instance, a longstanding sinus problem may show signs of improvement as the chiropractor applies therapy to the neck. This is because the nerves that supply energy to the sinuses exit the spinal cord in the region of the neck. If the same problem that caused neck pain also restricted the flow of energy in this nerve, both problems may well benefit by treatment. Usually it is a subluxation in the cervical (neck) vertabrae that can cause both neck pain and a reduction in the healthful functioning of the sinuses. All this serves to illustrate that problems of the spine are commonly responsible for ill health elsewhere in the body.

The spinal column is the body's communication network. By removing points of interference, commands them pass through to every organ and extremity allowing a natural healing process to take place. For more information on how chiropractic can benefit you, call DR. DEBRA M. TRANBERG, SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, 80 Front St., Scituate, 545-7388, and DR. SUSAN EMMER, CHIROPRACTIC & FAMILY WELLNESS CARE, 87 Sohier St., Cohasset, 383-1330. By appointment. Workers Comp. cases and most insurance plans accepted.

P.S. Often the spine is implicated in a problem somewhere in the body yet shows no signs of discomfort itself.

• Rebecca "Becky" Bates-McArthur has received a "Thanks Badge" at the Patriots Trail annual Girl Scout meeting last Thursday.

The Badge honors members whose service is so significantly above and beyond the call of duty that no other award would be appropriate.

Becky has been dedicated to Girl Scouting for most of her life; she has served the town of Cohasset and the council in many ways over the years.

She has been a leader, a service unit chair and cookie chair for both her service unit and Area I.

As a past advisor to an international event, Becky has been able to inspire many cadettes and seniors with the desire to excel. She has served as a national delegate to the Houston Convention and served on the property task force, as well as the panel for adult recognition.

Having once been a camp director, Becky brings stability to her service unit, sharing a wealth of experience and supporting new leaders.

A working-wife and mother, she now leads a cadette and senior troop.

• At the same meeting, Louise Smullen received her 30-year membership pin.

And, you won't believe it, Dorothy Bates received her 70-year membership pin.

Bates was Girl Scout Troop in Chicopee and attended the Girl Scout troop at Bridgewater Norman School.

She attended her first Girl Scout Camp in 1921, and while a teacher in Quincy in 1930, she had a troop for 15 years. Bates is really the one in Cohasset Girl Scouts, she taught me how to make my first "Samore". How about you?

Congratulations Mrs. Bates; 70 years with an organization must have set records everywhere.

• Saturday sure was a nice day for the annual Little League parade and Opening Day exhibition games.

The schedule now begins, be careful driving past the field, as every once in a while a ball "escapes", and the boys run to catch it...Drive slowly!

• Congratulations to Melissa Christoffel and Robin Haynes. Both girls were part of the 43rd annual student government day. It is a day at the State House in Boston where the students learn the ropes of the running of the state.

The activities included committee hearings on legislation and then debates on them in the house and senate sessions...Bet they didn't get a chance to vote on any tax bills...

• That's the news for this week; be sure to call me with any of your family (or friends') latest tidbit. We all love to read it and share in your happiness.

You have the time

At town meeting last week, the advisory committee sent a clear signal about its intentions for next year.

You can expect that members of that committee, as well as members of the school committee, administration and staff, will be hollering next spring about the necessity of passing another override proposal.

They'll say that the schools were decimated by your refusal to pass the proposal this year, and that the schools and other town services will be in dire jeopardy if you don't pass an override.

You could hardly blame them, especially after voters nixed the payment for capping the landfill, and then voted to go ahead with the project anyway—and agreed to renovate the police and fire stations without taxing themselves any extra to pay the bill.

Those who manage the budget are rightfully tearing their hair out, because they feel they weren't listened to. But maybe they aren't listening either.

If the voters say, "Read my lips, no new taxes," then it's time for the community to get creative. You've spoken out. Now, it's time to get involved—you can't just leave it up to the advisory committee, especially if you're not going to take their advice.

Fortunately, you have a whole year to work with; why not begin now?

The answer, of course, is to study ways the town can consolidate its services, do things such as pur-

Letters

To the Editor:

I was here for the first Earth Day twenty years ago. The library made a gung-ho effort with exhibits, book lists, and so on. The world's environment is worse.

So, I didn't get too excited about this Earth Day. But the newspaper said 200 million people worldwide participated — 10 times as many as in the first Earth Day. So, I'm glad to report that the library has been "with the program" through these many years, supplying books and magazines on all aspects of the world ecology/economy.

We did the "library week" thing a few years, then let it drop. I'm inclined to view conservation and information-gathering as daily, life-long routines and wonder if one-day or one-week celebrations are called for.

I'm intrigued by the strong connections between environmentalism and library service. I'm gratified to ponder the beneficial environmental effects of my work, as well as the informational, educational, cultural.

A public library is a model of conservation: carefully selecting, sharing and recycling books, magazines, newspapers. The Cohasset library, for example, buys about 3,000 new books a year, keeps the average book in use for about 10 years, and helps people use these books more than 100,000 times a year.

Our users probably would not buy 100,000 books a year if the library did not exist. But they would buy more than they do now (and do without others). Many of the books and magazines purchased privately are not used.

Destruction of trees, manufacturing and transportation impacts on the environment, would be greater to no good purpose.

I estimate that the average household in Cohasset spends $500 or more a year on newspapers, magazines and books. What reductions in this level of consumption are feasible based on the library's present level of service?

What changes in library practice are needed to encourage more people to share the library's resources? Tell us. The library's current cost is about 2 cents of the property tax dollar, considerably less than a household spends privately for the same materials.

What if the library expenditure were increased to 3 cents on the dollar? The town could build a new building twice as big, with plenty of parking, and staff it to be open seven days/four nights a week. Would that increase the level of resource-sharing, saving households more than it would cost? I think so.

Conservation surely is the style for all public facilities. We repair and recycle broken furniture and typewriters far longer than most businesses would consider desirable.

In stark contrast to the extravagance lavished on private homes and businesses — redecoration, refurnishing, remodeling, replacement — Cohasset's library building has served for nearly 90 years with modest repair and renovation.

Built on an "unbuildable" site before people had cars, it's 7,000 square feet are used by 250 people a day, who come mostly by car, despite the absence of parking space. Compare the use rate per square foot of your home. Compare your household parking.

Resource sharing among residents of their public library's resources is now extended, through a new computer system, to sharing of library resources among 21 city and town libraries on the South Shore.

You can see on the public access computer which town owns a book or magazine. The computer will tell you if it is on the shelf. By computer, your library instantly can hold any book in the system and have it delivered to you in one or two days.

Communication — moving information — replaces commuting — moving people and vehicles — at enormous personal savings of time, money and natural resources. Will libraries be rewarded by adequate funding for these tremendous contributions to environmentalism, conservation, and service to people?

Libraries contribute to conservation in the centralization and specialization of information management. Librarians select materials, from the 50,000 new books a year, from the thousands of journals, saving people much time and effort in locating suitable information.

Librarians catalog and index these materials to give users efficient access to information. The computerized index to 400 magazines, for example, will display a consumer evaluation of a product by brand name or by generic name. It will locate reviews of books and films. It will locate articles on every topic. What is this level of information service worth to the taxpayer?

Calculate the savings in impacts on the environment: use of paper, use of phones and fax machines, use of gasoline to run around looking for information (comparison shopping?), loss of time without expert help of librarian/information —managers.

The earliest libraries in civilization were a matter of economic necessity: the resources required to produce and preserve books (information) were too great to be an individual consumer activity.

Rising standard of living (higher consumption), rising literacy and education, mass production of information media, and freedom of access to knowledge, have destroyed the ancient monopoly of church or state on information. But an ecological concern for conserving and sharing insures a role for the library.

The information explosion, too, makes the library more necessary and useful than before as a shared mechanism for selecting materials and organizing access and preserving knowledge at the most cost-effective level.

Environmental awareness and information access are not one-day or one-week occasions. They are elements of the emerging world culture and lifestyle on which survival of the human species, if not of earth itself, depend.

Since political factors presently obstruct a fair consideration of adequate library funding through taxes, you are invited to make a tax-deductible gift to your library.

In Cohasset, 325 households this year gave to the Friends of the Cohasset Library, Inc. Their $7,000 contribution to the operating budget enabled the Cohasset library to maintain level service another year.

Maree offers thanks...

To the Editor:

A month ago, my daughter, Ann Maree Wheeler, was burned out of her apartment on Front Street, Scituate.

Since that time, we have been touched by so many people with kindness and support. It was a very emotional time for us all and this helped so much.

I wish to thank my boss, Joe Hamilton, for stopping by the night of the fire to check on my welfare and give me moral support and to Bobby Protulis who stopped by the next day. I really appreciated their concern.

Chamber of Commerce news and views...

By Paula Knowles
Special to the Mariner

With our yearly membership drive drawing to a close, and the Chamber of Commerce business directory in the last stages, it is now time to look to the rest of the year 1990.

What are we planning? Well, here are a few things that you should all be aware of.

The "Little Piece of Home" gift packages sent to all this year's graduating seniors will be going out in September this year. If you have a 1990 graduate in your household, whether from Cohasset High School or a private school, we ask that you contact us with the needed information as soon as possible.

We need to know the graduate's name, address as of September, 1990 (college, service, etc.) and parent's phone number.

You may either jot the info down and send it to Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, P.O. Box 336, Cohasset, 02025, or call 383-1010, and leave the info on our recorder.

We don't want anyone to miss out on these boxes. The feedback from last year has been amazing. Between the goodies and the Mariner subscription, the kids were wild over them. And their parents loved the idea as well. So get that info in to us as soon as possible.

Our May meeting at the South Shore Art Center will feature renowned senior athlete, author, and raconteur, Ellery Clark, Jr. Please call 383-0787, Bob Martin, for further details.

And now is the time to get prepared for two of our fall meetings — the school committee forum and the annual C of C auction. You may send your questions for the school committee in to us anytime you think of them between now and Sept. 1. We will save them for use on the night of the forum.

Any thoughts that you may have had that were generated by the override votes or town meeting — jot them down now and send them in to us at Box 336, Cohasset, MA 02025. September is not that far away.

Nor is October — start planning for the auction now. Any donation or gift that you might want to donate can be accommodated right no...or next week...or next month. Don't wait until September to try to come up with an idea. To paraphrase an old political saying: "Donate early and often."

And remember, our metings are open to the public — those of you who are not members and wold like to take part in our programs are urged to attend any and all meetings that are of interest to you.

SENIORS INVITED TO MEETING

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce cordially invites all senior citizens of Cohasset and the surrounding towns to join us on May 16 at the South Shore Art Center, to enjoy a presentation by Ellery Clark, Jr., one of our most active and noted natives, young or old.

Clark, son of Ellery Clark, Sr., a gold medal winner in the first modern olympics held in 1896, has himself won medals in 20 events in the senior olympics; and, at the age of 80-plus, "shattered" the record for race walking in his age group.

Clark also is well known for his books on the Boston Red Sox, as well as work on antique duck decoys and films on the 1896 Olympics. A renowned speaker on all things Cohasset, Clark will speak on many subjects, including: Cohasset 1-4-3; Minot's Light; Cohasset and the Olympic Team; Cohasset and the Red Sox; and a few of Cohasset's great "Characters."

Letters of invitation will be sent to the 60 plus club as well as the council on aging and the historical society; however, we urge all interested seniors to join us on that night.

The evening will begin with light refreshments At 6:30 p.m., followed by Clark's presentation at 7 p.m. for further info, please call Bob Martin at the Goodale Co., Inc., 383-0787, or the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce at 383-1010.

Cohasset recycling news...

By Alix White
Special to the Mariner

This week I caught up with the selectmen at town meeting in order to bring you their Earth pledges:

Jane Goedeke, selectman: "We would like to increase recycling in our home. We used to buy juice boxes but have switched to glass containers because they are recyclable, and the juice boxes are not.

"In the community, I would like to see litter at the beach cleaned up. We need to police each other and make litter socially unacceptable.

"Also, we wanted to make our children more aware of the environment, when, in fact, they are the ones who are making us aware."

Rocco Laguelle, selectman: "I was given seven trees from my company, Eastern Edison, for Earth Day and I have planted them. In the community we have to continue fighting for what we have. We can't lose ground."

Diana Kornet, selectman: "An environmental pledge is not something you should take for just one day. We are an across-the-board environmental family; it's something that pervades our life."

Martha Gjesteby, selectman: "I will use more recyclable resources and less non-recyclable ones. I wish the town did not accept plastic bags at the landfill."

Ed Tebbetts, selectman is away at this time and could not be reached for comment.

Ed Atkinson, minister of The First Parish Church: "At home, we are working to recycle more. In the parish, we are recycling, trying to use the church china instead of paper products.

"We eliminated polystyrene products, although people will purchase them by mistake occasionally, and we are converting to recycled paper. Through the worship service — the prayers and sermon, I am working with and teaching the community to be more thoughtful and sensitive to our environment.

"In my personal life, I own stock in Exxon. Last year after the Exxon Valdez spilled 11 million gallons of oil off Alaska, I went to the stockholders meeting g and spoke out against the spill. This year, I notice that they have moved their shareholders meeting from New Jersey to Texas — just so I can't go!

However, I continue to participate through letters. I also feel that each and every one of us must become more sensitive to Earth. Each year, for instance, we collectively as individuals dump more oil onto the ground or in waterways than was spilled by the Valdez.

Thank you all for sharing your Earth pledges with your community.

I also want to thank the Board of Water Commissioners, Bill McAuliffe and co-workers of the department who have been so kind and understanding.

Thanks also to Nancy Snowdale and the people at the Town Hall for their help and support. My deepest gratitude to all who have helped Ann through such a difficult time.

Dear Alix,

I'm enjoying your newspaper column. I need help on plastics. What can be recycled: milk containers — 10 qt. = 1 gal.? meat and produce polystyrene foam trays? Broken kids' toys? How about plastic Easter eggs?

Thanks,
Needs Help

Dear Needs Help,

thanks for your question. We currently are recycling plastic jugs (key word here) with the numbers one, two, or three in a triangle on the bottom of the container.

Flip over your milk jug (any size) and look at its bottom. Do you see the number inside the "chasing arrows" triangle? If it's no. one, two, or three you can recycle it right here in the cardboard boxes in the big blue building.

The numbers inside the "chasing arrows" triangle designate the predominant resin used. That is to say, if the package is only 40 percent HDPE, it can still be labelled no. 2 as long as no other resin is present in greater quantity.

There are hundreds of different plastics being used on a regular basis. Each must be recycled separately by resin. That's why we currently are shredding only numbers one, two and three resins.

That translates into most jugs: plastic milk, water, juice, detergent, shampoo, cleaning agents, antifreeze, and motor oil jugs. These all are accepted at the RTF.

We cannot accept polystyrene foal trays., Instead, ask your market manager to purchase paperboard trays. Currently, food co-ops and Bread & Circus are using them.

We cannot accept broken kids' toys because they are made of many resins and they often have wire and other metal that would contaminate the plastic and break the shredder.

Easter eggs made of the colorful plastic also are not recyclable. The granny Easter bunny whom we visit asks for them back at the end of the Easter egg hunt. The children think that the Easter bunny recycles, of course.

chasing and recycling on a regional basis, and find more cost-effective ways of handling town business.

The town also should show a little backbone when it comes to negotiating contracts with town employees.

Doubtless, the employees deserve everything they get, and should be compensated for the excellent job they do. But in these tight fiscal times, the town can't afford to give out six and seven percent raises.

Some of you have spoken out at town meeting. Don't wait 'til next year; speak out now. What ideas do you have for trimming the budget and avoiding an override?

Committee for Life plans food drive

The Respect Life Committee of St. Mary of the Assumption Parish will hold its monthly food collection drive at masses this weekend, May 5 and 6.

Paper supplies and cleaning products also are welcome. The church give those items to Wellspring and to Friends of the Unborn of Hull, a home for unwed mothers.

On Mother's Day, May 13, committee members will sell "roses for life" lapel pins after masses outside St. Ann's.

The rose pins are a symbol of the respect for life movement. Proceeds will benefit Massachusetts Citizens for Life.

WEED CONTROL

Nature has a solution.
Cows are great at nibbling weeds. And fresh milk is delicious. But not everyone is lucky enough to know a cow.

The Lawn Company has a more practical solution.
You'll be surprised at how healthy your lawn will look and how little it will cost. Our lawn program is scientifically designed to produce grass so lush and so thick that weeds are forced out.

We started more than ten years ago, right here in Southeastern Massachusetts. So we know the problems particular to this area.

We know when to treat your lawn for weeds and when it's just plain hungry for nutrients. And when there's no such thing as too much service.

Call us today for a free, no-obligation analysis of your lawn, trees and shrubbery. Find out how easy it is to have a Lawn Company Lawn.

Students clean up their act for Earth Day

Brian Pattison, an eighth grader at CHS, helps clean up the schoolyard for Earth Day.

The eighth graders of Cohasset Junior/Senior High School contributed Thursday to the celebration of Earth Week.

Every eighth grader at the school arrived with a plastic bag prepared to clean the grounds around the school.

Students and teachers were divided into groups and given sections to clean. The results were magnificent and the spirit and pride of each student was evident. More than one hundred bags of debris were removed from the school grounds.

At the close of the day and the end of the pick-up, a beautiful disease-resistent dogwood tree was planted outside the West Wing of CHS as a tribute to grade 8.

The tree was contributed by Waste Management to Cohasset, a member of the 10-town South Shore Coalition. Superintendent, Stephen Hart and the three principals, Mary Ellen Gallagher, Kenneth Ekberg and John Creamer, all participated in the tree-planting ceremony.

Town officials also took part, including: Selectman Martha Gjesteby, the town representative to South Shore Coalition and Sharon Becker from the board of health.

The eighth graders studied how to help our planet in a number of ways. The social studies department became familiar with environmental terms and learned how kids can make a difference for a greener planet.

The English department sponsored a prizewinning essay and prepared oral reports on endangered species and made colorful slogan posters.

The mathematics department initiated the cleaning up of school grounds while the science department provided the organization and expertise.

At the end of the program, the eighth graders felt they had learned they can do something about the environment through responsible action and cooperation.

Local goalie goes far

Kyle Hublitz, of 38 Forest St., Cohasset, helped lead the 1989-90 Hamilton College ice hockey team, the Continentals, to the seventh seeding in the Eastern College Athletic Conference (ECAC) post-season tournament.

Their tourney appearance followed a 13-10-1 regular season.

In their record fourth consecutive Hamilton playoff appearance, in the quarterfinal round, the Continentals' season ended with a 6-5 loss to eventual champion Elmira, for a 13-11-1 overall record.

Hublitz, a junior, is the son of Dr. & Mrs. Uve F. Hublitz. As goaltender, he compiled a 2-1-0 record, allowing only eight goals, while making 82 saves.

Health Fair opens May 10

When the Cohasset Health Fair opens at noon on Thursday, May 10, Ann Leonard and Virginia Anderson will lead the Cohasset Strutters on a one-mile walk from the town hall.

They will be joined by walking clubs from neighboring towns and anyone else who wants to go along.

Later, from 1 to 1:30 p.m., Karen Kirkendall will lead "gentle aerobics exercises."

The health fair, sponsored by the Social Service League, the board of health, and the council on aging, will take place at the Second Congregational Church and the auditorium of the town hall next door. The hours are noon to 3 p.m. and 5 to 7 p.m.

Last year, more than 200 people attended the fair; this year some 30 groups will provide testing and information, mostly free of charge. (There will be a small charge for cholesterol screening.)

Among the new features are a computer program to yield a profile of a person who may be at risk for pulmonary cancer and carbon monoxide analysis for smokers.

Other features are screening for anemia, diabetes, oral cancer, glaucoma, and breast cancer. (The van for mammograms to detect breast cancer will be in Cohasset in June.)

Other testing available will be of blood pressure, vital lung capacity, and hearing. A pharmacist will be available to answer questions from 12:30 to 1 p.m. and from 2 to 2:30 p.m.

The fair is designed to offer something for all ages. Marybeth Worrick and Carolyn Housman will discuss the Social League's caregivers' program.

The Cohasset Police Department will present a safety program, including fingerprinting and a talk on keeping children safe.

A representative from Brigham and Women's Hospital will be on hand with information on sleep disorders.

Other groups will have information on arthritis, and osteoporosis and on good nutrition.

A number of services available to residents will be explained by agencies such as Hospice, the VNA, SHINE and Lifeline. The last is an emergency call system whereby people living alone can summon help.

Mary Hartwell and Barbara Donahue will be responsible for the delicious and healthful refreshments during the fair.

The program from 5 to 7 p.m. is designed primarily for people who work out of town and may drop in at the health fair on the way home.

The scope of activities at that time will be somewhat limited, but will include testing for anemia and diabetes, as well as blood pressure, cholesterol, carbon monoxide and the pulmonary cancer profile

Garden club lifts the spirits of seniors

With the growing public interest in indoor and outdoor gardening "horti" and "flower therapies" are becoming very popular in hospitals, nursing homes and rehabilitation centers.

The garden therapy program of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset was formally introduced in 1968 by President Grethe Fesler with Cynthia Flolid and Carole Johnsen as chairmen. It still is one of the club's major, but virtually unknown, activities.

It has, for 22 years, enriched the lives of the residents, handicapped by age or physical disabilities, at the Cohasset Knoll and Ripley Road nursing homes.

Realizing that many of the elderly had to leave gardens and plants behind, the current committee, a dedicated group of members (Kay Christian, Kathy Dennis, Doris Hyland, Phyllis Peck and Elli Wilson) under the chairmanship of Christine Flood, visits both nursing homes each month, bringing joy and happiness to the residents by sharing with them their love of plants and flowers, filling a void in their lives.

Members who have participated in this program will tell you they gain much more than just the knowledge of a job well done. And it may be these benefits that still keeps former chairman Jean Manganaro going back for visits after many years of being actively involved.

Roberta Dufresne (left), administrator of the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home, meets with members of the garden therapy committee, Elli Wilson, Kay Christian and Chairman Christine Flood, along with several residents.

All South Shore garden clubs take turns in a monthly garden therapy program at the Brockton Veteran's Hospital. Members Jean Manganaro, Barbara Dillon and Lee Drew represented the Community Garden Club in March and had a wonderfully rewarding experience.

The men have a greenhouse and grow their own vegetables.

The club's program on flower arranging was voted by the veterans as the most popular one so far.

The Cohasset PSO will hold its annual spring meeting Thursday, May 10 at 7:30 p.m. in the Cohasset High School cafeteria.

The program will feature a panel discussion entitled "Exploring Ability Grouping K-12: Are We On The Right Track?"

Participants will include: Ruth Chapman, principal of the Angier Elementary School in Waban; Clista Dow, teacher in the Sixth Grade academically and creatively talented (ACT) program at Sharon Middle School; Joseph Jordan, secondary science department chairman and teacher of middle school and high school science, at Weston Public Schools; Dr. Alan Gruber, consulting neuropsychologist, Cohasset Public Schools; and Moderator Marilee Cantelmo, curriculum/enrichment coordinator, Cohasset Elementary Schools.

The discussion will explore ability grouping/tracking placements currently used in area schools, as well as alternatives such as cooperative learning and peer tutoring.

A question-and-answer period will follow.

The PSO anticipates an informative and stimulating meeting and encourages all to attend.

Call him Dr. Young

Mark R. Young of Cohasset will receive a Doctor of Medicine degree from the University of Massachusetts Medical School June 3.

He is the son of Carole and Joseph Tierney of Cohasset.

Young was graduated from Stonehill College in 1983.

Following graduation from UMass Medical School, Young will serve his residency in family practice at Memorial Hospital in Pawtucket, R.I.

Sale to benefit scholarship

The Scituate/Cohasset Newcomers Club is planning for a huge yard sale to be held in Scituate at 26 Candlewood Dr. May 5.

The sale will start at 10 a.m. and go to 3 p.m., and will also include a bake sale.

A small sailboat will be included in the items for sale, as well as a good selection of children's and baby items. In the event of rain, the sale will be postponed until Sunday, May 6.

Each year at graduation time the Scituate/Cohasset Newcomers Club awards several scholarships to seniors of the two towns. The scholarship award money is raised during the year through various projects undertaken by the Newcomers Club.

Parent workshop planned

The PSO curriculum enrichment committee is sponsoring a "Talents Unlimited" training workshop for parents of children in grades K-6.

The workshop, which will be held Wednesday, May 16 at 7:30 p.m. is the first part of a two-part workshop.

The second part will be held in the fall.

The purpose of the workshop is to introduce parents to the "Talents Unlimited" program which Cohasset teachers are implementing in grades K-6.

All interested parents may attend the workshop, which will include a discussion, slide presentation and handouts.

Cohasset Public Schools served as the host training site for Talents Unlimited March 5 and 6. Thirty teachers, specialists, and administrators from the four communities of Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Cohasset participated in the training.

Janis Baron, a nationally certified Talents Unlimited trainer, conducted the 12 hours of instruction in the multiple talent approach to teaching.

Talents Unlimited is a divergent-thinking-skills model originally developed and researched in Mobile County Public Schools.

Based on Dr. Calvin Taylor's theory of a multiple-talent approach to teaching, Talents Unlimited helps teachers give students six ways to be smart. The talent areas of productive thinking, decision making, planning, forecasting, and communication are taught in addition to academics.

Baron will return to Cohasset May 16 and 17, to provide technical assistance for teachers. She will provide one classroom demonstration of a Talents lesson at each grade level and consult individually with teachers. She also will lead the parent-training session on the evening of May 16.

Dance lessons offered

Sharon Weber, dance coordinator at the South Shore Conservatory of Music, is giving creative dance lessons to the kindergartners at the Osgood School.

The creative movement will focus on the four elements of dance — space, time, body and force.

The children will explore one element per class through improvisation and problem solving, ending in their own good-bye dance.

Each class will meet with Mrs. Weber for four half-hour lessons during May and June.

Cohasset PSO curriculum enrichment committee has been instrumental in coordinating this effort.

Students take "Teen Challenge"

The students at Cohasset High School participated in a "Teen Challenge" assembly program April 26.

"Teen Challenge" is an international drug-rehabilitation center founded by the Rev. David Wilkerson back in the 1960s.

He is the author of a book/movie entitled The Cross and the Switchblade. Wilkerson still runs the main house in Times Square, NYC, which has saved thousands from lives of crime and drug abuse.

"Teen Challenge" boasts an 84 percent cure rate from life-altering addictions. The local house is on Main Street in Brockton.

A few weeks ago, Bill Kite and Ted MacDermott joined classes with Ginny Burbank's minority literature class in welcoming four ex-drug addicts from "Teen Challenge," Brockton, to tell their stories.

Their testimonies were so touching and powerful that the students themselves asked for this assembly. The four men were pleased to know that the students cared that much to invite them to speak before the entire high school.

Skippers fight back to win first game of season

By David McKee
Mariner staff

The Cohasset High School softball team secured the first notch on its victory belt.

The Skippers dumped rival Hull 13-10 last week after trailing at one point 9-1, for their first win of the year.

"I was thrilled to get that first win," coach Mike Gill said. "And the best part was that the girls fought back from being down by so much. They really showed a lot of character. I think the girls didn't even think they could do it but they held on. I really think that the win will help us with our confidence. The girls now know they can win and be competitive with anyone."

Sophomore Bridget Leung got the start on the mound for the Skippers. She lasted three innings and was replaced by Junior Nicole Barry who finished up to get the win.

"They jumped out to a quick lead on us," Gill said. "But we kept pecking away and pecking away. There wasn't one big inning, but eventually we caught them."

The Skippers broke open the tie game in the sixth inning.

The key hit was delivered by junior Kerri Mieli. She lashed a two run triple that gave the Skippers the win.

"I'm glad we got the monkey off our back especially this early in the season because it will go a long way for us," Gill said.

LATER ACTION

After the big win over Hull, the Skippers went on to face a tough Norwell squad.

But this time the magic ran out as the Skippers fell 10-9.

Barry got the start for the Skippers and went the distance.

"She pitched well," Gill said. "She threw strikes out there. But Norwell did get in their licks."

Norwell build an early lead and held on for the win despite a late charge by the Skippers.

"Going in I expected a tough game from Norwell because they are a quality team," Gill said. "But I was very pleased with how we played. We stayed right with them and had a chance near the end to win. I'm very happy with our effort."

The Skippers were led offensively by junior Barbara Lagrotteria who had two hits on the day and five stolen bases.

Freshman Alison Ludlow also had two hits on the day.

And Mieli added a big triple.

"We were able to get some good offense against a tough team and that was good to see," Gill said.

The Skippers ended the week with a difficult 22-5 loss to undefeated Carver High.

The Carver Crusaders ended up with 17 hits on the day as they did to the Sailors what they have been doing to every other team they have faced.

The Crusaders jumped out to a 7-0 lead off starter Barry and cruised to the victory from there.

"She pitched well out there," Barry said. "They hit her but they are a good hitting team."

He said part of the reason why the Skippers lost by 17 runs was their shoddy defense and poor hitting.

The Farm League coaches gathered on the infield to a round of applause. They are: Jake Carone, Michael McWilliams, Bob Gledhill, David McMorris, Dr. Paul Cotter, Dr. Steve Golden, John Whoriskey, Bill Grimm, Dan Duffy, Artie Roach, Paul Bilodeau, Ernie Grassie and Bob McDonald. Youth soccer league sizzles on the field

By Carol Riley
Special to the Mariner

Saturday was a sizzler for Cohasset Coastal Youth Soccer League teams playing on South Shore fields during an unseasonable heat wave.

Jugs of water and orange slices kept Cohasset teams fueled for some big wins.

The boys under 14-1 team beat Norwell on their home turf 2-1, with goals scored by Charlie Endris and Jeremiah Stevenson, assisted by Mike Riley.

Brian Duffy showed great speed, while Tim Brister and Drew Pozatek, sharing goalkeeper duties, held off the Norwell attack.

The boys under 14-2 team, playing with only nine players, lost to Hingham, 2-1 last Thursday. Cohasset was leading 1-0 at the half with a goal by Andy Fitzsimmons.

Coach Stanko Bubanja commended Greg Schultz for outstanding play.

On Saturday, this team lost an away game to Marshfield 5-2, with goals scored by Andy Collins and Pat Reynolds. Kennie Leahy assisted on both goals. Greg Schultz and Kevin O'Donnell also played superb soccer.

The Boys under 12-1 squad lost at home 5-1 to a very strong Hanover team. Matt Belsen scored Cohasset's only goal, although Taylor Devin made a thrilling breakaway drive, only to be stopped by the Hanover goalkeeper. Brian Riley played an outstanding game according to Coach Pete Mangan.

The boys under 12-2 team lost 4-0 to Pembroke last Wednesday. Sam Goedecke, Sean Cogill and Tucker Gledhill performed nobly.

On Saturday, this team lost an away game to Hanover 3-0, despite outstanding defensive play by John Whitehouse and goalkeeper Nevin Bunstein. Todd Harrington was strong at midfield.

The boys under 10-1 squad beat Halifax 2-1 with goals by Greg Bilton and Nate Cotter, and superb defense by John Kasameyer.

On Sunday, this team scored another victory over Plymouth, 5-3, with Matt Verrochi scoring a hat trick and Robbie Buckley and Andrew Ross scoring one goal each. Stephen Kovach provided great defense.

The boys under 10-2 team whipped Scituate 5-0 with goals by Ted Goff, Eric Hanian, Jamie DeMichele and two by Paul Sheerin.

Jay Whoriskey was the shut-out goalkeeper, who had good defensive help from David Banks and Andrew Leahy.

Midfielders, Jamie DeMichele, Mark Equi and Mike Baird controlled the game, according to Coach Bill Baird.

On Saturday, this team beat Hanover 4-3 with two goals and an assist by Jamie DeMichele and one goal each by Paul Sheerin and Kyle Bunstein. Adam Sheerin was superb in goal, with great defensive help from Wiley Wakeman, Ted Goff and Carl Dean.

The boys under 10-3 crew beat Scituate 2-1 with goals by Pat Murphy and Dennis Rooney. Outstanding players in this thriller were David Bruns, Mark Caristi and Elliot Noon (playing with a broken nose).

In girls' action, the under 19-1 team lost a heartbreaker to Hingham 6-1, with Kerri Miele playing strong defense. Kara Manion passed to Melissa Rousseau to score the only goal.

The girls under 16-1 squad tied a strong Plymouth team 1-1, with the Cohasset goal scored by Shona Hislop. Jen Knowles did an outstanding job as goalkeeper as did Allison Doyle at midfield.

The girls under 14-1 team lost to Plymouth 5-0, despite solid defensive play by Sara Atherton, Bonnie Kreuger and Marnie DeMichele and fine goaltending by Sara Kirk.

The girls under 14-2 squad beat Plymouth 2-1 with goals by Megan Rhodes and Erin Murphy. Liz Corcoran provided strong defense while Jessica Jenkins and Martina Snyder played well at midfield.

The girls under 12-1 team, the "Skippettes," had another victory, this time against Norwell, 2-1. Both goals were scored by center Megan Fahey, with as-

"It was not a good game for us," Gill said. "We made some mistakes defensively that opened the door for Carver. Plus they had a tough pitcher who threw hard and we had a tough time getting anything going."

However despite the loss, Gill is pleased the progress his young team is making.

"The overall attitude is good," he said. "The kids see we can play with anyone. We beat Hull and gave Norwell a scare. We have to avoid mental mistakes. We are throwing the ball around too much and need to get more focused."

He is pleased with the offensive production of the team and the pitching.

"Ludlow, Kerri Mieli and Barbara Lagrotteria are really hitting the ball and (junior) Maureen Long is starting to get some hits also. And our pitching has been showing steady improvement."

The Skippers face Hanover and then East Bridgewater.

Recreation department offers golf lessons

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting registrations for spring, outdoor golf classes to be taught by professional golfer and instructor, Chuck Young.

Classes will be offered for beginners and advanced beginners as follows: Thursday evenings: 5:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. or 6: 30 p.m. to 7: 30 p.m. beginning May 10; Friday mornings: 8 a.m. to 9 a.m. or 9 a.m. to 10 a.m. beginning May 11.

All classes will be held on Cohasset Common, in front of Cohasset Town Hall and each class is one-hour, each week for a five-week session.

The fee for the five-week program is $40 per person, and checks for payment must be payable to Town of Cohasset.'

Pre-registration is essential for this program, and may be accomplished by calling the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791.

Participants who do not have access to golf clubs should indicate this at the time of registration, so the department can make arrangements to loan clubs for class.

All classes are limited in size, hence, immediate registration is advised and non-Cohasset residents will be accepted on a space-available basis.

The department currently is making plans for a junior golf program, which will be offered this sum-sists from Bonita Johnson, Amie Theriault and Megan McNamara.

Outstanding defense from Christine Burns, Jayne Singleton, Laura Slotnick and Stopper, Kena Roukounakis helped in this big win. Coach Sandy Theriault said, "Way to go, girls!"

The girls under 10-2 team lost to Scituate 1-0, with Katie Donovan outstanding on goal and Jennifer Meehan and Annie Palone playing well at midfield. Alexandra D'Urso played fine defense.

In another game, this fine team whipped Carver 5-0, with two goals by Alexandra DeRosa and one each by Sara Eaton-Bruce and Alexandra D'Urso.

Lydia Crafts was outstanding at forward, while Phoebe MacPhail and Kerry Dweyer provided strong defense.

The girls under 10-3 crew lost to Halifax in the Sunday drizzle, 3-1. Mareth Collins-Wooley scored the single goal for Cohasset. Cornelia Wakeman, Katie Brister and goalkeeper, Megan Waal played particularly well.

Last weekend, this team lost to Middleboro, 2-1, playing with only seven players. Katie Brister scored the goal.

Studds files bill against hoax calls

Congressman Gerry Studds introduced legislation to stiffen federal penalties for making false distress calls to the Coast Guard.

"Hoax calls are very serious business," Studds said. "They put lives unnecessarily at risk and waste limited Coast Guard search-and-rescue resources. These calls are intolerable under any circumstances."

Rep. Studds said he is upset by the increasing frequency of hoax calls to search-and-rescue stations, and was moved to introduce legislation by the recent loss of the SOL-E-MAR, a New Bedford dragger. Efforts by Coast Guard dispatchers to respond to the SOL-E-MAR's distress call on March 25 were tragically diverted by a subsequent SOS which was identified as a hoax

The Studds bill would provide for penalties under Title 14 of the U.S. Code of five years in prison and $20,000 in fines for persons who make false distress calls to the Coast Guard.

In addition, the bill would require violators to reimburse the Coast Guard for the cost of any search-and-rescue efforts resulting from the hoax call. The Coast Guard has estimated that dispatching one 44-foot cutter and one helicopter for a period of four hours for a typical search patrol would cost $11,000.

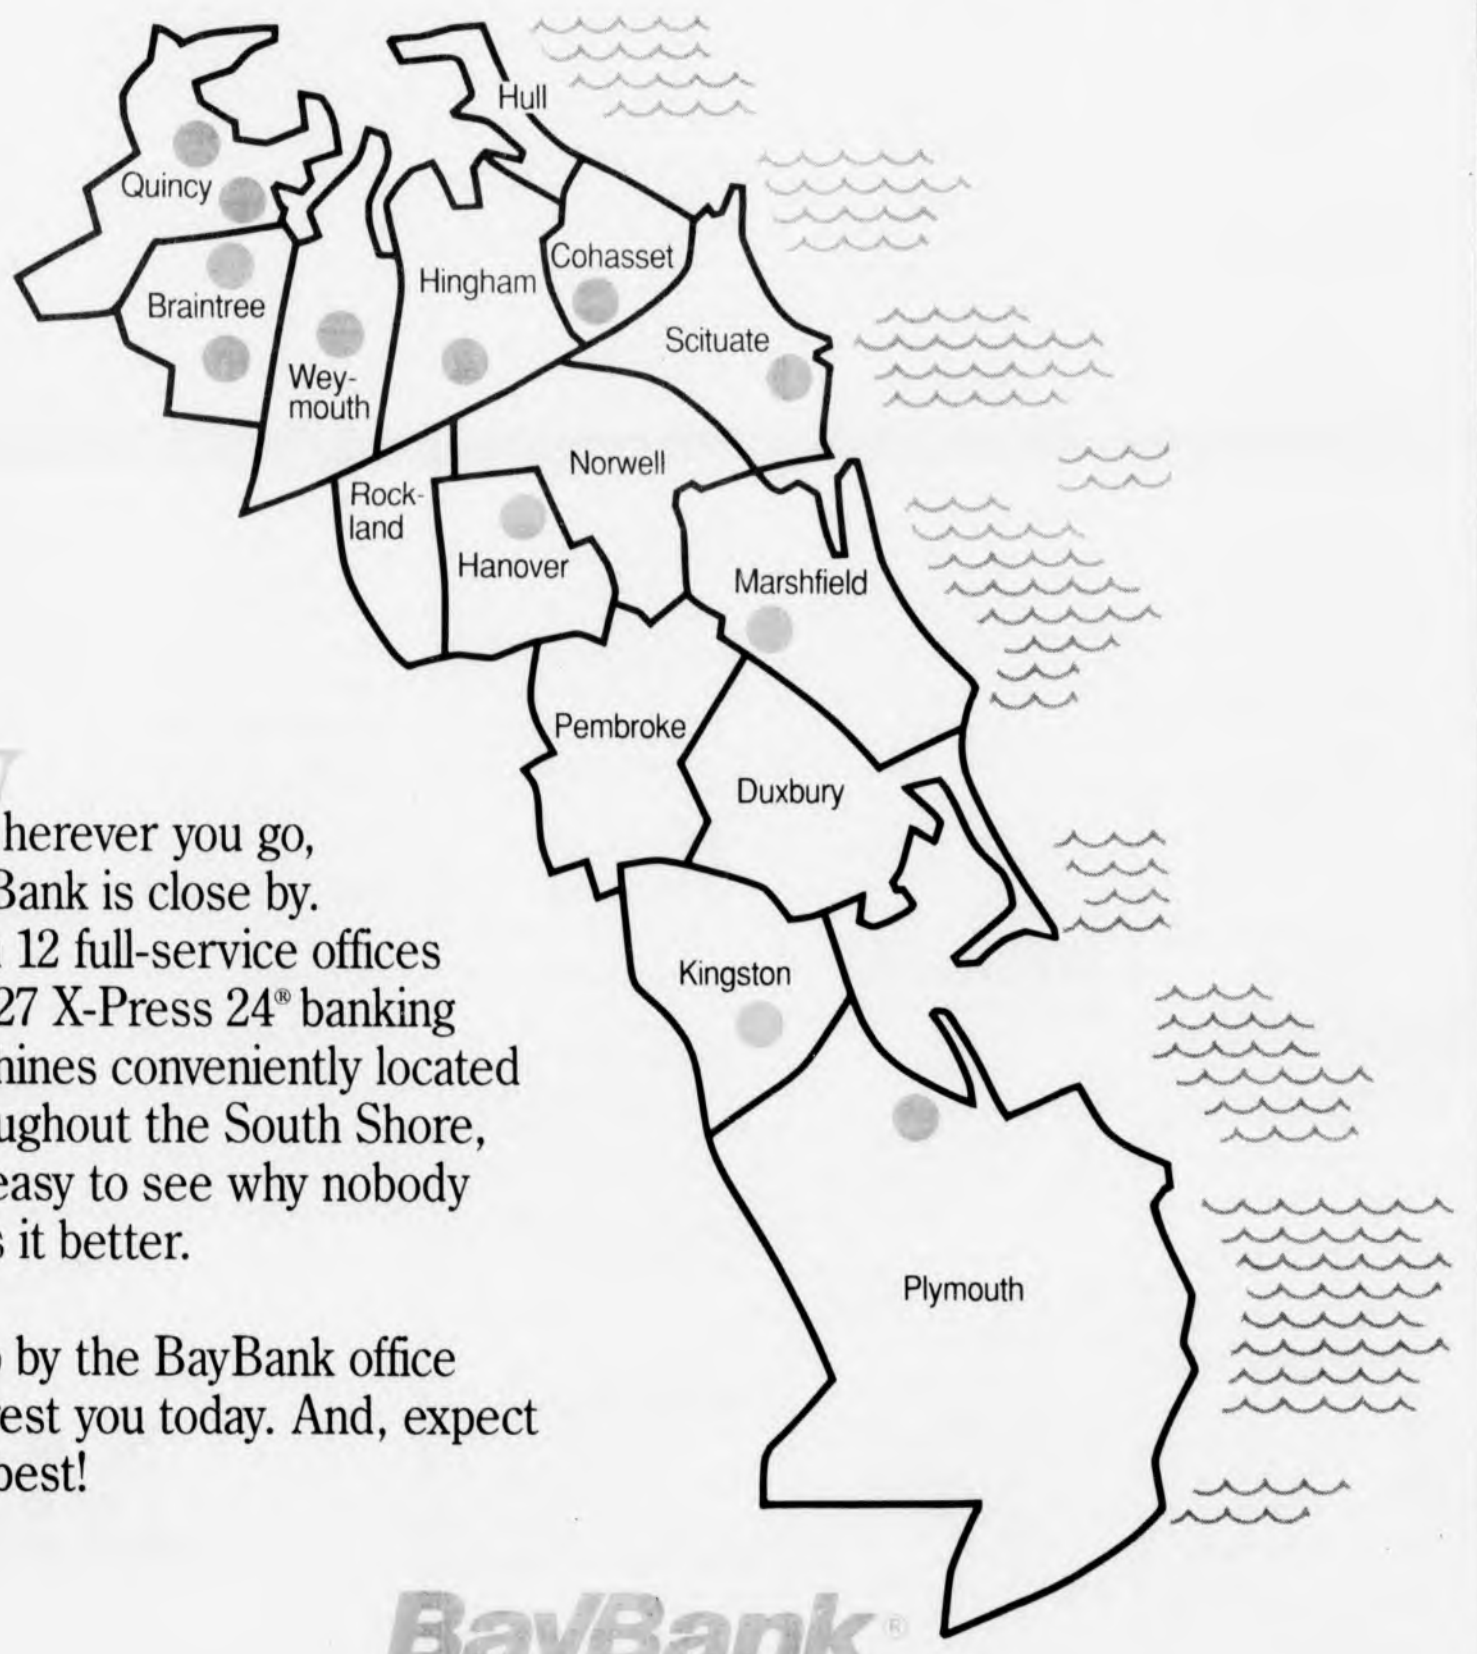
DRUG WAR



Crime and Drugs are the most important issues to the people, yet Gerry Studds voted consistently AGAINST anti-drug bills, such as the death penalty for drug kingpins who murder, but FOR the release of dangerous felons.

State slams Lobsterman's Association

By Robert J. Flavell
Executive Editor

The Scituate-based Massachusetts Lobsterman s Association has been enjoined from spending any money from its health insurance fund until officials can sort out thousands of unpaid subscriber claims.

Nobody seems to know exactly how much was collected, what claims were paid, or who is owed what amounts. But the claims evidently are in the thousands, and the amounts into the millions.

In a complex lawsuit three years in the making, Atty. General James Shannon accused the MLA and its outside insurance administrators with collecting millions in premiums, but failing to pay claims since 1986, leaving "thousands of consumers" in the lurch, saddled with medical bills and dunning calls from collection agencies.

OTHER STATES INVOLVED

Shannon said in a statement that MLA marketed and sold accident and health insurance to fishermen and lobstermen in Massachusetts and other coastal states, including Florida, New York and Rhode Island. The plan collected more than $3.5 million in premiums since 1985. Shannon alleged.

He said the MLA, through its Maritime Commerce Foundation Trust Health Plan, then failed to pay more than $1 million in "legitimate medical and hospital claims."

MLA director William Adler, reached at the group's headquarters at 8 Otis Place, Scituate, said he agrees with the injunction, issued Tuesday in Suffolk Superior Court, which orders MLA to deposit all premium payments in an escrow account, stop soliciting new business, and pay outstanding claims.

Eight boaters win mooring battle

Mooring rights have been restored to eight boaters who lost that privilege after a confusing and bitter battle over billing procedure.

The eight boaters who have regained their moorings are those who filed an appeal with the Department of Environmental Protection Waterways Regulatory Program under chapter 91 of Massachusetts General Law, on the grounds that the new billing procedure was confusing and not in keeping with past practice of former harbormasters.

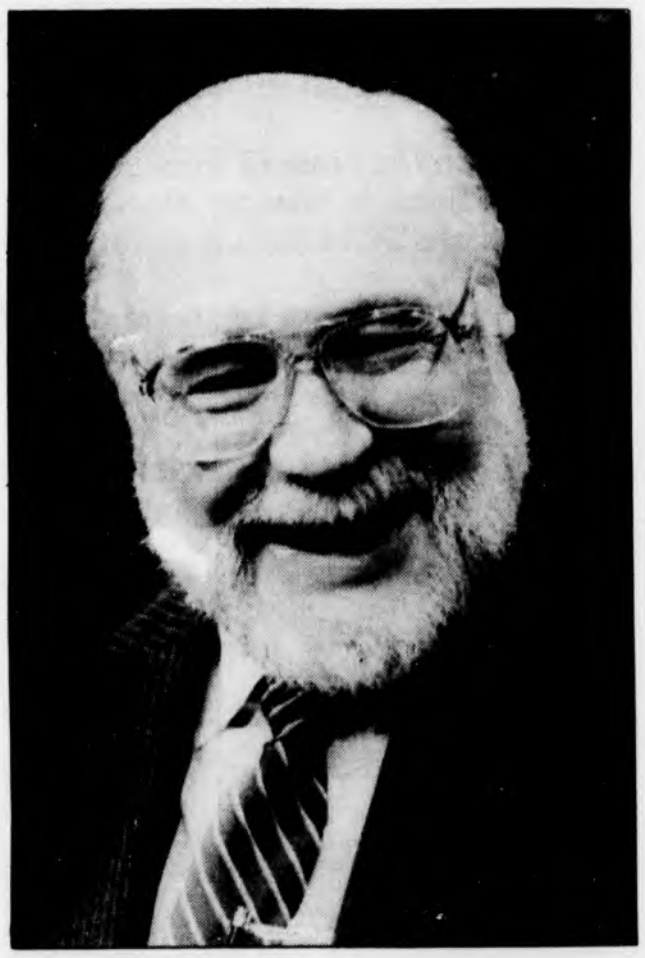
In 1988 Cohasset selectmen denied mooring privileges to 18 boaters and removed 58 names from the waiting list for failure to meet the annual billing date.

The issue stemmed from a discrepancy in billing procedure.

On March 11, 1988, mooring owners were reminded in a letter from Steven Osborne, who was harbormaster at the time, that fees were due in the treasurer's office by the close of business June 1, 1988.

Bills, however, were printed and issued with a due date of June 30.

Complicating the billing procedure further was a revised by-law that established the payment date as April 1.



Previous practice allowed for a 30-day grace period; if users did not comply with the deadline, written warning was issued to remind them.

The new by-law has no such grace period.

Those affected by this confusion inserted a citizens petition at the 1989 town meeting calling for two amendments to restore the lost moorings, the advisory committee came out against the amendments, and voters agreed to indefinitely suspend a vote on the matter.

Having exhausted all other avenues of restitution

New chef wants Red Lion to roar again

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Michael Ollila is in constant motion.

He moves from prep area to prep area, checks in with his sous-chef, surveys the shelves and refrigerators, makes notes to himself and then he's off to the next thing.

If he seems like a man in a hurry, there's a good reason why. The new chef at the Red Lion Inn is a man with a mission.

"My goal is to make up for 10 years of neglect in one year," Ollila said. "The Red Lion once had a very famous reputation. I want to get people back in."

Ollila has his work cut out for him. As he points out, the kitchen facilities are 28 years older than George Washington.

Obviously, the Red Lion Inn isn't about to construct a new kitchen, so Ollila has to work around a rabbit's warren of tiny, low-ceilinged rooms. He's compensating by eliminating the useless stuff and maximizing the assets.

One asset he pointed out is a gleaming stainless steel steamer kettle that stands at least three feet high.

"That kettle is worth about $6,000," Ollila said. "It sat idle for about six years. I cleaned it up and got it working again."

He opened the lid of the kettle and hauled out a steamer basket overflowing with perfect stalks of asparagus.

Diners at the Red Lion may never know or care what goes on behind Ollila's closed doors. All they really need to know is what goes on their plate.

And boy, does Ollila have some goodies to reveal.

He isn't going to mess around with the standard menu much. He plans to keep the old favorites on the list. What he is going to do is boost the quality of the food and offer several specials on a daily basis.

The specials will change on a daily basis.

"There will always be something new and creative on the menu," Ollila promised. "I want to make everybody happy."

Varying the specials won't be difficult. Ollila has a one file box with well-thumbed index tabs that contains nothing but veal recipes. Two hundred of them, more or less, are lurking in his file box. If veal isn't to your taste, you might be partial to his chicken or seafood specialties.

Ollila gathered his recipes from cookbooks and chefs whose work he admires, but mostly he likes to invent his own recipes.

Ollila's recipes come to him from a variety of inspirations.

His strawberry Chambord parfait is the product of the law of supply and demand: the restaurant had too much strawberry ice cream and virtually no one was ordering it.

Ollila decided to swirl the unwanted ice cream with Chambord liqueur. The result: a heavenly parfait that diners are raving about.

Woman escapes injury

An 85-year-old Cohasset woman escaped serious injury when her car left the road and hit three guard rail posts in Norwell last weekend.

Norwell police identified the driver as Audrianne M. Condon, of 124 South Main St.

The accident happened at Pleasant and Circuit Streets as the car travelled toward the Hanover Mall. Police said the driver lost control of her car.

Town has duplex trouble

Selectmen voted Monday to seek a $5,000 transfer to fix the septic system at the town-owned duplex on Government Island.

The board also decided to look into legal action against a tenant at the duplex who is way behind on rent payments. According to Executive Secretary Greg Doyon, the tenant has paid only $500 over the past few months; the rent is $600 a month and will be going up.

Doyon said the tenant is refusing to pay until the town makes improvements to the property. Selctmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle agreed there are serious problems at the dwelling with windows and doors.

Although the duplex is not officially "affordable housing," Laugelle said, the town has maintained it as such over the past few years.

Cohasset's week

Support in spirit offered, but questions linger

The selectmen voted Monday to endorse a position paper disseminated by the Suburban Coalition that calls for the state to change its ways.

Specifically, the paper calls for full funding of state-mandated programs and administrative directives; and a guarnatee that 40 percent of personal and corporate income and sales tax and all of the lottery revenues be dedicated to local aid.

Among other items, the coalition also seeks a revision in the local aid formula and in the Prop 2-1/2 levy from 2-1/2 percent to the U.S. Department of Commerce Index that measures state and local government costs.

The coalition said that from 1987-89, costs increased by 4.1 percent.

Selectmen said they agree with raising the Prop 2-1/2 levy limit, but found the 40 percent tax return request "ambiguous."

newly elected Selectman Jane Goedecke to nominate Diana Kornet, by the same margin.

Gjesteby was elected vice chairman.

Selectmen nix land bank idea

Selectmen voted Monday not to endorse a position by the regional Minuteman Advisory Group on Interlocal Coordination (MAGIC) on developing a state land-banking bill.

Under the proposed bill, money for a real estate transfer tax would go toward conservation and affordable housing.

Selectman Diana Kornet said she would be reluctant to attach a fee to the transfer of real estate, unless there were an exemption for first-time home-buyers.

Selectman Jane Goedecke added, she would not want to see affordable housing groups and conservation groups squabbling over land bank money.

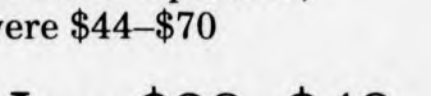
Laugelle is chairman

Followng a bit of friendly debate over who should be selectmen chairman until the next town election, the board unanimously backed Rocco Laugelle.

Laugelle served once before as chairman.

An effort by Ned Tebbets to nominate Martha Gjesteby went by the boards 3-2, as did a bid by

Group seeks well restoration



The Village Renaissance group asked selectmen for support and advice Monday in its quest to place a well at the intersection of Elm and North Main streets in Cohasset Village.

According to group member Jackie Dormitzer, the well that served as a public drinking water supply, quenching the thirst of children and filling the casks of ocean-going vessels, was removed in 1928.

Selectmen were concerned that the placement of a well at the intersection might pose a traffic hazard. Chairman Rocco Laugelle said fully lit Christmas trees have fallen victim at the site in front of the Cohasset Hardware store.

Group member Beth Christoffel said the pump would be placed within a raised concrete trough (which would be used as a flower planter in the warmer months).

The group will take its plans to the building inspector, highway surveyorand safety officer.

State slams Lobsterman's Association...

The MLA, which already sued its outside administrators, was able to "rescue" some funds, Adler said; but he declined to say how much money is now in the fund.

HOPES TO MAKE GOOD

He said he hopes to make good on the unpaid claims, but said "there's a massive amount of work involved to determine who to pay and then do something about paying them.

"There's a very big list" of those not paid, he said, "but we're not walking away."

Adler said the MLA originated a self-funded insurance program, and that "other associations up and down the coast" joined in the program because it answered a need for fishermen and lobstermen, who were difficult to insure.

"It worked very well for a number of years, but claims just skyrocketed. Basically, it ran out of money. Claims were higher than the premiums that came in."

But according to Shannon's lawsuit, there's more to it than that.

For starters, the MLA had no right to engage in the insurance business, but marketed the plan and solicited new subscribers through mailings to other fishermen's associations along the East Coast.

In order to get the insurance, according to the attorney general, potential subscribers had to first join the Massachusetts association.

Shannon alleges that MLA created the trust, which he says it had no right to do, then engaged Robert B. Poitras, formerly of Plymouth, to administer it through his Regency Administrative Services, Inc., formerly of Tarkiln Road, Kingston.

"UNFAIR AND DECEPTIVE"

Poitras, according to Shannon's 18-page complaint, "individually and through various corporate entities including Regency" promoted insurance sales using "misrepresentation and unfair and deceptive sales practices."

Shannon claims the marketing plan involved solicitation of purchasers and collection of premiums, but "subsequent failure to pay claims and the refusal, after demand, to pay claims or refund the premiums so collected."

The complaint alleges that although Poitras, a licensed insurance agent, is believed to have withdrawn funds from the trust bank account at Rockland Trust Co., he failed to pay the claims.

Poitras could not be reached for comment.

Sometime in May, 1988, the Lobsterman's Association switched administrators from Poitras and Regency to Harbor Medical Administrators, Inc., the complaint alleges.

Poitras was evidently not a principal of Harbor, but the complaint claims "Harbor worked with and assisted the defendants Poitras and Regency in carrying out the marketing plan," misrepresenting the existence of the insurance, liability limits, assurances of claim payment, and falsely reporting payment of claims.

The suit says and Harbor collected more than $1 million in premiums while administering the plain, but also failed to pay claims.

EXCUSES FALSE

When subscribers inquired why their claims were not paid, MLA, Regency and Harbor "falsely represented" that the delay "was due to computer errors, administrative and staffing problems and equipment breakdown," the suit charges, and "MLA falsely presented, in response to demands for payment, that MLA had filed for bankruptcy."

The suit charges that Harbor Medical also sold insurance plans to members of the Massachusetts Auto Body Shop Owners Association, the Massachusetts Association of Rehabilitation Facilities, their families "and unknown others," who also found their claims unpaid.

No one at Harbor could be reached for comment.

(According to Asst. Atty. Gen. Thomas McNaught, the attorney general's staff has been unable to locate Harbor Medical, although it is listed as doing business at at least two Boston addresses.

(Asst. Atty. Gen. Hilary Rowan, handling the case, said Harbor Medical's president has been indicted in Georgia "and presumably has fled the country." She said the staff is now trying to find a Harbor Medical official authorized to speak for the firm.)

KEPT ON SELLING

Although they knew they were in trouble, Shannon charges, the Lobsterman's Association "continued to accept premium payments from insured members and continued to solicit and accept new business."

In October, 1988, the suit charges, MLA "falsely represented" that unpaid claims would be paid if members paid a new $50 fee in addition to their premium payments.

"Such false representation had the effect of inducing participants to remain in the plan and extend additional monies to their detriment," the suit charges.

Although subscribers assumed the $50 would go toward paying back claims, Rowan said $25 of it went to the Lobsterman's Association, and the old claims were never paid.

Rowan said the MLA seemed to pay claims in its early years because it has "stop loss insurance," a backup policy to cover any financial shortfall.

But after Regency became administrator, the MLA dropped its "stop loss" coverage, and claim payment troubles began.

The defendants in the case have another week before their answers to the lawsuit are due.

Chef wants Red Lion to roar...

Other recipes are born of house specialties.

For example, the Red Lion is known for its own cranberry bread. Ollila decided to capitalize on that specialty when he decided to try a variation of Baked Alaska that he calls Baked Cape Codder.

The base is cranberry bread. In place of the ice cream and claret sauce Ollila uses cranberry sherbet and Chambord. The whole thing is covered with a dome of meringue and then baked for about 10 seconds — just long enough to delicately brown the peaks on the meringue.

If the dinner hour is a time for fancy food, lunch is a different matter.

Ollila knows that the people who come by for lunch want the best possible food at the best possible price — and they need it served up fast.

"I give them good old Yankee cooking," Ollila said. "They want a lunch that will stick to their ribs."

One constant at lunch or dinner is the produce.

"The vegetables and potatoes are always fresh, not canned or frozen," Ollila said.

"I also try to put variety in the choices of vegetables and starches," he said. On a recent day, diners could choose between asparagus, ratatouille, french fries, baked potato and potato lyonnais.

Ollila said his work was easy because of the excellent staff he had. He especially singled out his sous-chef, Rich Straley, for praise.

"Without him, I couldn't do it," Ollila said.

Ollila is obviously close to his family. The hard-working chef gives credit for his accomplishments to his father, Leonard M. Ollila, for teaching him the value of the work ethic.

He also wanted to mention that his sister, Judy, was his best friend in the whole world.

A bachelor, Ollila makes his home in Millis, but found a "room in the inn" so he doesn't have to spend all his time in the kitchen and on the road.

Looks are deceptive. Ollila at 37 looks as if he's fresh from culinary school, but he brings a wealth of experience to the job.

He's worked in corporate kitchens such as the Marriott chain and in intimate settings like the Wellesley Country Club and everything in between. He also studied at Northeastern University.

On the whole, Ollila prefers the Red Lion.

"It's like night and day," he said. "I have much more control."

He plans to use that control to make the Red Lion Inn one of the premiere dining spots on the South Shore.

Mooring battle...

the matter went to the state DEP.

The appeal filed by Richard Guilfoyle, Noel Ripley, Henry Dormitzer, Archie Rasmussen, Paul Carlson, Donald Clark, Paul Sheerin and Bill Henry, a portion of those who lost their moorings, relied on the same claims that prompted the petition at town meeting.

They stressed the confusing nature of the by-laws with regard to payment and leniency.

The appellants said there was no precedent in Cohasset for taking away property without advance warning or allowance for late payment.

There was no notice of the removal of the grace period in the letter issued by former harbormaster Steven Osborne, and no mention in a May 26 newspaper notice.

The appellants also alleged a conflict of interest with selectmen and three members of the harbor advisory committee.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby's husband Arne, was number 77 on the waiting list published June 2, 1988; Harbor Advisory committee member John Pfaffmann, was number 29, committee member Peter Wood, was number 51, and committee member Mary Muncey, was number 126.

All opposed the reinstatement of moorings and waiting list position.

In a DEP decision signed by selectmen March 16, 1990, the eight mooring holders had their status reinstated.

The decision applied only to those who filed the case, preventing mooring holders who had problems in previous years from seeking restoration.

The eight aforementioned individuals will have all rights and privileges restored, and the town cannot affect their rights in renewing permits in the future on grounds related to their previous revocation. The decision calls for the appellants to be treated as though they had been issued permits for the year in question, if this affects their re-application for a permit.

"It is gratifying to know that there is a process by which aggrieved citizens can act to protect their rights," said Richard Guilfoyle, one of the appellants, shortly after learning of the decision. "Now that the boats will again be safely moored in Cohasset harbor, any one of us will gladly take any of the selectmen for a day's fishing, provided they bring their own bait, buy their own lunch and furnish their own beverages."

The lesson to be learned by mooring holders and those on a waiting list, is to be clear on billing procedure, so the problems of previous years will not be revisited.

Cohasset Savings files report

Cohasset Savings Bank (NASDAQ:CHTB) has reported net income of $57,000, or 6 cents per share, for the quarter ended March 31. This compares with $131,000, or 13 cents per share for the first quarter of 1989.

Net interest income continued at $600,000 for the quarter, despite a significant increase in interest paid on deposits, but increased operating expenses, a smaller gain on securities transactions, and an increase in the provision for possible loan losses combined to reduce net income.

A provision for possible loan losses of $75,000 was made in the first quarter of 1990, compared with $41,000 in the first quarter of 1989, because of the uncertainty in the real estate market and the Massachusetts economy.

At the bank's annual meeting held April 19, stockholders re-elected the following five directors for three-year terms under the staggered board plan: George F. Buckley, Cohasset, president and treasurer of Buckley Corporation, steel assembly; Robert P. Magner, Scituate, senior vice president of the bank; Sheldon N. Ripley, Cohasset, creative director, Marcoa DR Group, Inc., advertising; F. Allen Weisenfluh, Cohasset, senior vice president, John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co., bonds and corporate finance; and Brian R. Wilkin, Cohasset, president and CEO, Hingham Mutual Fire Insurance Company. Wilkin also was re-elected clerk of the bank.

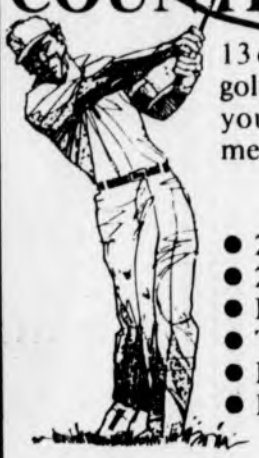
Chiropractic for Health

by Dr. Debra M. Tranberg & Dr. Susan Emmer
Chiropractors

SUBLUXATION DEFINED



"Subluxation" is not a word that comes up in the everyday speech of the average person. For a chiropractor, however, it is a term that specifically describes the misalignment of two or more adjacent vertebrae. The nerve passing between two vertebrae may become pinched as the result of a subluxation. This can have negative consequences for any organ or part of the body that the nerve serves. For all the possible dramatic consequences of a subluxation, it does not necessarily take an accident to cause one. A cough, a sneeze, or even a strenuous bowel movement can cause vertebrae to move out of alignment with one another. Subluxations that happen in this way may very well not be noticed until their affects are felt much later on. Patients should be aware that muscle spasms, tingling, and loss of muscle control may be signs of subluxation.

Thus, it is obvious the benefits that can be derived from periodic chiropractic exams. In this fashion chiropractic can address existing problems as well as focus attention on developing conditions. DR. DEBRA M. By appointment. Workers Comp. cases and most insurance plans accepted.

P.S. Vertebral "fixation" is the locking together of the bone segments of the spine.

Ellery has been working out all winter to ready himself for the contests, and as you have read in previous columns, he has quite a record of distinction. We'll be watching for the results. Good luck to all of our Cohasset senior athletes!

• We wish Bill Protulis a very happy 40th birthday.

• Special congratulations go to Ester Pratt this week.

Ester just earned her third degree; this time she is a psychotherapist. She earned her degree at Boston College. Now, she is planning to go on for her doctorate, and everyone is bursting their buttons with pride. That is grand!

There are 30 girls involved in the program, and they are to be congratulated.

• Finally, to all of you moms out there, here's to a glorious Mother's Day. Here's hoping that the weather is great so that Brendan and all of the other men planning Mother's Day meals can make the cook-outs extra special.

Leonard goes for the gold at Senior Olympics

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

Cohasset's Ann Leonard is going for the gold again this year, but this time she's taking some friends with her.

An eight-year veteran of the Senior Olympic Games, Leonard has a fistful of gold and silver medals to show for her accomplishments. But winning is not what keeps her going back to the Beechwood Community Life Center in Quincy. It's the company.

"I've found a lot of new friendships," she explained. "The Olympics is growing, and I'm glad about that; it gets seniors moving. It gets them out, instead of sitting and watching TV.

"I would like to see more seniors get out and try for the fun of it. Get out there and try," she said. "Put one foot in front of the other."

So far, six Cohasset men, Leonard and Virginia Anderson are going to Quincy.

With the help of the state Department of Elder Affairs, Anderson co-founded the Cohasset Strutters with Leonard. The strutters know a lot about putting one foot in front of the other; they do it three times a week, all over the South Shore. And they move fast.

Some of the strutters are almost in their 80s, but they manage to keep up, Leonard said.

They attend walking events from Cape Cod to Boston, and meet all sorts of interesting and friendly people.

Leonard dabbled in every sport when she was young, and played basketball when she was in school. "I'm a competitive person," she said. "I have to be right up there."

But her favorite sport is track and field. In the Senior Olympics May 14-19, she will participate in the three-mile walk, the javelin throw, the shot put, the standing long jump and the running long jump.

She warmed up for the track and field events by pounding through Boston in last week's Walk for Hunger.

Last year, she leapt eight feet, four inches. Not bad for a woman who will be 76 next month.

It's no wonder that during last year's awards night at the Beechwood center, host Barry Walsh of the YMCA commented, "No one enjoys these Olympics more than Ann."

Ann Leonard of Cohasset will compete in this years Senior Olympics for the eighth consecutive year.

Las Vegas night May 12

The Scituate Knights of Columbus will host a Las Vegas Night May 12 from 7 p.m. to midnight.

The cost of admission is $2 or a copy of this Mariner's notice.

There will be a cash bar. The games of chance include Blackjack, Roulette, and various side games. There will be no "Craps Table."

Proceeds will be used to defray medical expenses incurred by the Hawkins family of Scituate whose 2-year-old child died from a brain tumor last November 22.

The Scituate K of C Hall is located on Rte. 3A in Scituate across from PJ's Restaurant. The public is invited. For more information call John McNamara at 383-1844 or Edward Crowley at 545-0210.

How much money is planted in your yard ?

Count it up. A couple of flowering shrubs, a hedge and a maple tree from the nursery could amount to as much as $600. You've probably made a considerable investment, in plants alone. A living investment that needs attention to grow.

Take this little quiz, to find out if your landscaping investment is increasing or decreasing in value:

- ☐ Are any of your bushes yellowish?
- ☐ Do any of your trees or shrubs have dead or dying branches?
- ☐ Did your flowering shrubs fail to bloom as well as expected ?
- ☐ Are insects nibbling holes in the leaves ?
- ☐ Are the leaves and branches sparse or stunted ?

If you answered yes to any of these, call us for a free , no-obligation survey and price quote. Our ornamental tree and shrub inspection, pest control and fertilization programs are designed to promote healthy and attractive plants. And healthy landscaping means a healthy increase in your property's value.

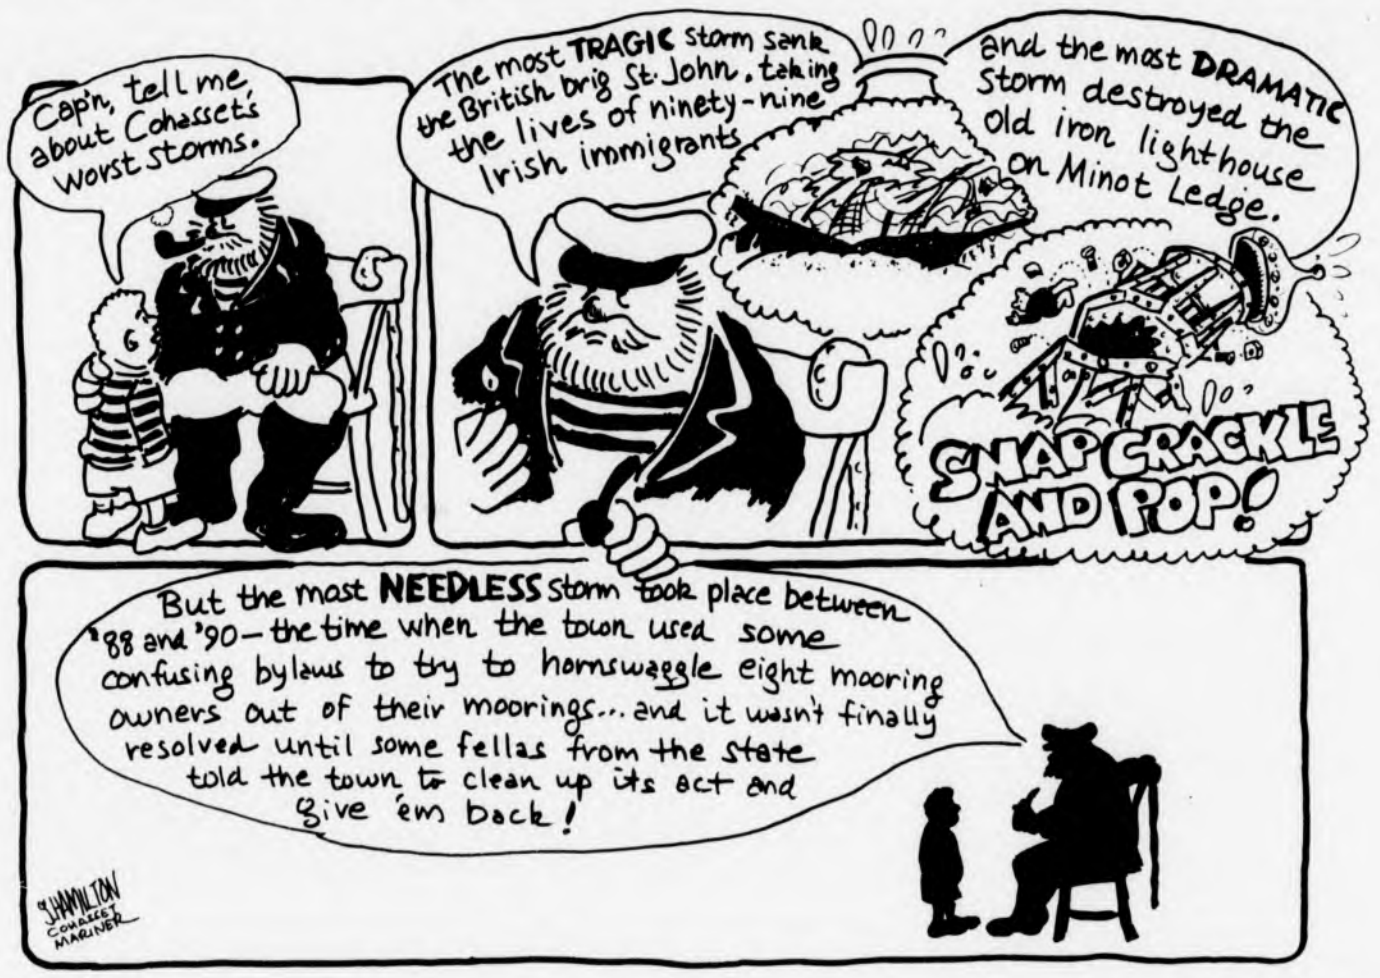
A call to arms

Cohasset selectmen issued a call to arms this week, a plea to anyone who would be willing to volunteer to serve in Cohasset town government.



You don't necessarily have to run for office. There are plenty of study committees in town that consist of appointed members.

The selectmen's move to expand the cemetery study committee from three members to five (resulting in two openings) prompted the call.

Cemetery expansion is a hot issue in town these days. At Monday's meeting, selectmen argued over whether the town ought to use a portion of the newly acquired land over by Lily Pond for a cemetery. It's something the committee may want to look into. And you could be a part of it.

Go ahead, join the fun. Being a part of your local government not only has the benefit of getting you out from in front of the TV, but it allows you to make a difference in your town.

If you don't dig studying cemetery expansion, you have plenty of other options. To get an idea, just look in the back of your town meeting warrant, or drop by the selectmen's office at town hall.

Information on theft sought

To The Editor:

This is the kind of letter that no one likes to write.

It is the type of letter that no one should have to write.

For 25 years,I have owned an automobile repair garage in Cohasset. A very symbolic, but no less integral part of this garage has always been the clock on the top front of the building. This has been so since the building was built.

Over the years, this clock has been used by many as a handy time reference. If they thought of the garage in the process, that was just another plus.

Two years ago, the clock was stolen. Because so many people, customers and non-customers alike, remarked how much they appreciated the clock, I decided to replace it.

Four weeks ago, it was stolen again. Bolted to the building, it literally was ripped off. All the thieves needed to do to disconnect it electrically was to unplug it. But, no, they had to cut the wire!

The point of this letter is not to grouse over expense, but rather two-fold. First and foremost, I feel violated — not only for myself and those who came to depend on this clock, but for good people everywhere who have lost something important to them by the wanton actions of others.

If the perpetrators of theft would only stop to consider what they are doing, not only to the individual losing property but to others in an indirect way, they might (and underscore might) think twice about taking something that doesn't belong to them.

Finally, if anyone reading this letter has any information about my clock, I sincerely would appreciate hearing from them. Simply, I want my clock back. No questions will be asked nor identities need be made.

Sincerely,
Wayne H. Robbins

Cemetery poses threat

To the Editor:

I am writing to you to express my concerns regarding the proposed cemetery site off Smith Place.

The photographs displayed at the recent town meeting were brought there in order to graphically illustrate my most serious concern about this proposed site, namely, the impact of construction on groundwater and drainage.

The hill area of Cohasset and the homes at the foot of the hill have been plagued historically by drainage problems, septic problems, wet basements and occasional flooding.

Most of us have sump pumps that work continually, even in reasonably dry weather. Backyard ponds materialize from beneath the ground during every rainstorm.

I see the proposed cemetery parcel as a natural earth sponge which catches and holds much of the rain falling on the hill area. If significant portions of this "sponge" are covered with roads and filled with burial vaults, the water will go somewhere else. It stands to reason that this water will end up downhill in an already troubled area.

When, as abutters, we initially disagreed with the site selection, we felt that the potential of a development to flood a neighborhood speaks strongly against the appropriateness of that site.

We understand that the cemetery study committee viewed this land as a "free" and lovely space to provide long-term burial space for our town (and, most likely, for people from other towns as however, that a larger perspective must be taken by the selectmen and that the impact on the homes and property below the site must be considered.

It would be irresponsible of the committee and town officials to continue to pretend that this issue is not a serious impediment to the proposed site. To proceed without considering alternative sites that do not involve the financial implications that a flooding problem would mean for homeowners and the town would be a serious mistake.

Sincerely,
Linda T. Keller

Sandy Beach trustees seek donations

To the Editor:

It is springtime and beachtime once again and in a few days, the Sandy Beach Association will be mailing letters to each of the 2,800 homes in Cohasset asking for their financial support of the beach in 1990.

When townspeople buy parking and dump stickers each year, none of this money goes to the Sandy Beach Association, which relies entirely on private support.

Last year about 20 percent of Cohasset households provided such support, which was also about 30 percent of those who obtained car stickers. For 1990, the association hopes to increase these percentages significantly, as well as the dollar amounts of donations.

The cost of operating the beach is substantial – about $37,000 last year. This included five guards who cover each day of the 12-week season – ten hours per day!

There are also three part-time beach cleaning workers. Last year, once again the association received many favorable comments about the way the beach and the town's parking area were maintained and managed by our beach employees. An additional point is that in many shore communities, beach operating costs are included in the general tax rate – not in Cohasset.

Beach cleaning to repair winter storm damage is another big expense – several thousand dollars each year, while insurance, payroll taxes, utilities and supplies are other key items.

Over the past three years, considerable effort and expense have been incurred to repair and upgrade the beachhouse which is feeling the effects of age and weather. Last year some wonderful high school seniors created a mural on one wall of the house as a lasting civic contribution.

The association hopes that each Cohasset family which uses and values our beautiful beach will make tax-deductible contributions this spring to support this invaluable resource. With enough financial support, we can continue to have a clean, safe and pleasant beach where we and our families can have yet another enjoyable summer in Cohasset!

Deer Hill students shine in annual science fair

The gymnasium of the Deer Hill Elementary School took on a carnival atmosphere last week as the sixth grade students presented their projects for the annual science fair.

The variety and complexity of the projects made this year's fair something special.

For instance, Andrew Collins displayed a model solar house. "There are lots of different types of solar houses," he explained. "There are solar greenhouses, where the sun just comes in and heats them up, and some have water tubes; others have air forced through them.

"I think we should use more natural resources," he said. "Solar power is very efficient and cheap; it can cut your heating bills by half."

Collins said his aunt's home on South Main Street has solar power features. He had photos of several other solar homes in Cohasset on display.

In her project, Heather Littlehale explained how to start a vegetable garden. She started by planting seeds in a seed-starter and watering them. Nature took over and she had some tremendous vegetables, including corn and tomatoes.

"I thought it would be neat to plant some in the garden at my father's home," she said.

Amanda Ross experimented with plants, too. But her experiment had more to do with tropisms—geotropisms, thermotropisms and phototropisms.

By experimenting with gravity, heat and light in a closed environment, she learned how these forces affect the growth of plants.

How you can help out Mother Nature

By Joanna Clifford

Commentary

Ahh. the joys of parenthood. Feedings at 2 a.m., changing diapers and no sleep. Sure it can be tough, but compared to other species, human child rearing is a pretty cushy job.

After hatching, some baby birds need to be fed every 15 minutes, from sunrise to sunset! For us, a drowsy session in the rocking chair or a trip to the kitchen for formula completes the task.

During the early spring months, many animals will be raising young. In many cases, this will occur in our own backyards!

The New England Wildlife Center in Hingham frequently receives calls from people concerned that young birds or rabbits found in their yards have been orphaned.

This assumption is often followed by a "rescue" and the frustrating attempt to raise the animal without knowing what to do.

Under normal conditions, both bird and rabbit parents will leave their young in search of food. In cases where baby birds should fall from the nest or a baby rabbit wander (rabbits are on their own at 4-5 weeks), simple measures for facilitating the reunion of mother and young can be taken.

If you find a baby rabbit and it appears to be healthy and unharmed, keep all pets and children indoors, and wait.

Usually, if no one is around to scare them off, the mother will come and retrieve her young.

If several hours pass, you can return the baby to the nest yourself. Rabbits sometimes nest in the middle of a yard. Pick up the rabbit with gloved hands so as to keep your scent off the rabbit, place the rabbit in the nest covering it with grass.

Chances are that you won't see the mother come for its young as she is most likely to come at night when it is safe. Safety for a rabbit in suburbia means no cats, dogs or people present.

If you should discover a baby bird on the ground, look above you. You'll probably find a nest in the branch of the nearest tree. If the bird appears healthy, pick it up gently and place it in the nest.

Unlike mammals, birds have an underdeveloped sense of smell and won't detect your scent on their young, so no precautionary measures are necessary.

If the nest has fallen out of the tree intact, tie it up in the same spot with a heavy twine. Finally, should the nest be destroyed, a substitute can be constructed with a plastic margarine tub or a berry basket.

Be sure to poke small holes in the bottom for drainage and line it with the following material: dryer lint, dried grass or shredded paper towel. Never use fresh grass or cotton.

If the bird or rabbit appears injured, call the NEWC. It is always best not to move the animal. The NEWC staff are always ready to direct you on how to proceed.

It's important to note that the percentage of hand-raised birds and rabbits surviving to adulthood is tragically low. Their chances are far greater if left in the care of their natural parents.

By handling the situation properly, you are doing local wildlife a favor in letting life continue naturally and not as we would like it to. If you have children, use the experience as an educational opportunity!

Explain why you are not raising the baby animal yourself. That one lesson will go a long way toward fostering in children an enduring sense of respect for wildlife.

From the Kitchen...

By Joan Pinkham
Mariner staff

This week's column is a hodgepodge, for though a young man's fancy turns to love in the spring, mine rivets on the mundane. All of a sudden, there's an urge to throw out things, tidy closets, get things squared away before it's too nice to stay indoors. Getting rid of clutter does pay off, for I'm finding recipes I haven't even used. Not that more aren't always welcome — we're waiting for your favorite still. Here is Polly Sweet's recipe for those who are looking forward to the day when we unveil ourselves for that first appearance on the beach or poolside. Whenever Polly and fond husband decide it's time to diet again, this is the type of dish that is both tasty and slimming. It's called

DICKIE'S FAVORITE COLE SLAW

3 cups shredded cabbage
1 teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons sugar & wine vinegar
1/4 cup light cream or yogurt

Combine all ingredients. Serve at once, or marinate in the refrigerator until needed. Yield: 1 1/2 pints. Polly writes: Preparing this yourself is cheaper, tastier and easier than buying the prepared product in the market. If you read the label, you may find benzoate of soda, tartaric and citric acids have been added.

Life was certainly easier when we didn't have so many options. Did you know there are more than 25,000 items on our supermarket shelves — two hundred of them cereals. There are all kinds of food labels designed to catch our eye and in the interest of good eating, demanding we read the label before making a decision. Life was simpler back in the 50's when cars were black, boats black or white, telephones black and houses painted white with black trim. In the spring, one's outfit was navy blue and a basic black winter dress was de rigeur. Babies were dressed in pink or blue and on a certain day in the spring, Straw Hat Day determined for the men in our lives that it was time to put aside the felt hat for the straw boater. Decisions, decisions. Just for the fun of it, read the nutritional contents on some potato chip bags. Then to insure chips that are free of preservatives, grease and salt, come home to make these

REAL POTATO CHIPS

Peel potatoes and cut in half crosswise to give you two flat surfaces. Using a potato peeler, cut paper-thin slices from the flat surface until the entire potato is sliced. Spread slices out on an oiled cookie sheet. Brush the top surface of the potatoes with oil and bake in a 450 degree oven 8 to 10 minutes until brown. Place chips in brown paper bag with 1/4 teaspoon of salt per potato and shake to season. Vary the flavor with chili powder, garlic, onion, or seasonings of your choice. Store in an airtight container to preserve freshness.

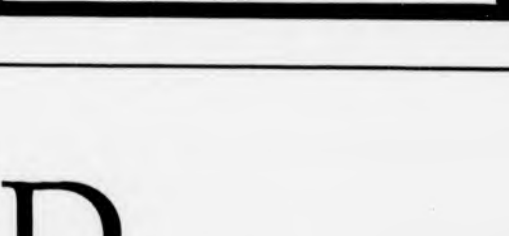
Cutting down on calories is not just for the pleasingly plump. Added weight has a sneaky way of creeping up as one gets older. Men and women 55 to 75 years old need 150 to 200 fewer calories per day than when they were 35 to 55. Perhaps you, too, have discovered that anything that tastes good is sure to be fattening. Sauces, gravies, whipped cream and salad dressings often contain more calories than the food they adorn. Another depressing thought: five medium potato chips can add more than 50 calories. An eight-ounce glass of beer packs a whalloping 100 calories. So much for snacks on a warm spring day. How about Linda Whitman's way of serving a pleasing, low-calorie

COLD FRUIT SOUP



2 peaches
2 plums
1/2 medium cantaloupe
2 oranges
1 cup yogurt
2 tablespoons honey, optional
1 cup blueberries

Dice peaches and plums; cut melon from rind and dice pulp. Combine diced fruits and orange juices in blender. Puree until liquified. Add yogurt and honey (if your fruit is not sweet enough) and process at low speed until smooth. Stir in blueberries and chill until serving time. Serves four.

To the Editor:

In order that the Annual Easter Egg Hunt be conducted, it requires the combined efforts and interests of many people who are willing to donate their time.

Also required is financial support necessary for payment of the various encumberances generated from conduct of the program. Monies are donated through the combined generosities of local organizations, businesses and residents, allowing for the annual event.

The 1990 hunt, being the fourteenth consecutive, continues to be a great success.

As with any project of this magnitude, special gratitude need be expressed, and once again this year we thank Jean Salvador, whose participation remains the matrix of not only the egg hunt per se, but includes visitations to hospitalized and homebound residents, bringing them an Easter basket, but most importantly joy and happiness.

We all owe Jean Salvador a special vote of thanks for certainly her efforts, but most of all for caring about our community and our residents.

Also to be thanked for the visitations and the egg hunt are Jean Higgins and Manuel Salvador, whose efforts and interest remain essential to the program.

Many thanks should go to: American Legion Post #118, Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, Cohasset Police Association, Cohasset Rotary Club, Cohasset Veteran's of Foreign War's Post #9146, Tedeschi Corporation and Paul Cullinane, as the primary financial supporters.

Extremely generous donations in kind and of various sorts are as follows: Scout troop/post #28 and 28, Maureen Healy, Kimball's-By-The-Sea, Dan Lahey, Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy, Ralph Harrison, Woolworths, Mr. Hathaway, Walgreens, Cohasset Recreation Commission, Richard Barrow, chairman, Cohasset Fire Department, Chief Dan Brock, Cohasset Tree and Park Department, Peter Laugelle, superintendent, Cohasset Wire Department, Steve Wigmore, superintendent and Dick Gallo, Deer Hill School staff, Ken Ekberg, principal, Robert Barrow and Barbara Conte.

Also, Lot W. Bates, Jean Higgins, Richard Yocum, Arthur Lehr, Joanne Lehr, Kevin and Maureen Chapman of Stone Meadow Farm, East Bridgewater, Hugh Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. Steven Bolster, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Patterson and Steven Ritts, as well as donators wishing to remain anonymous.

As is evident, a program of this scope and magnitude cannot be successful without the efforts and interest of numerous individuals, organizations and businesses.

Cohasset Recreation Department

Cohasset Scouting news...

Pack 38 does "the wave"

Pack 38 was well represented at the Scout Day at Fenway Park recently.

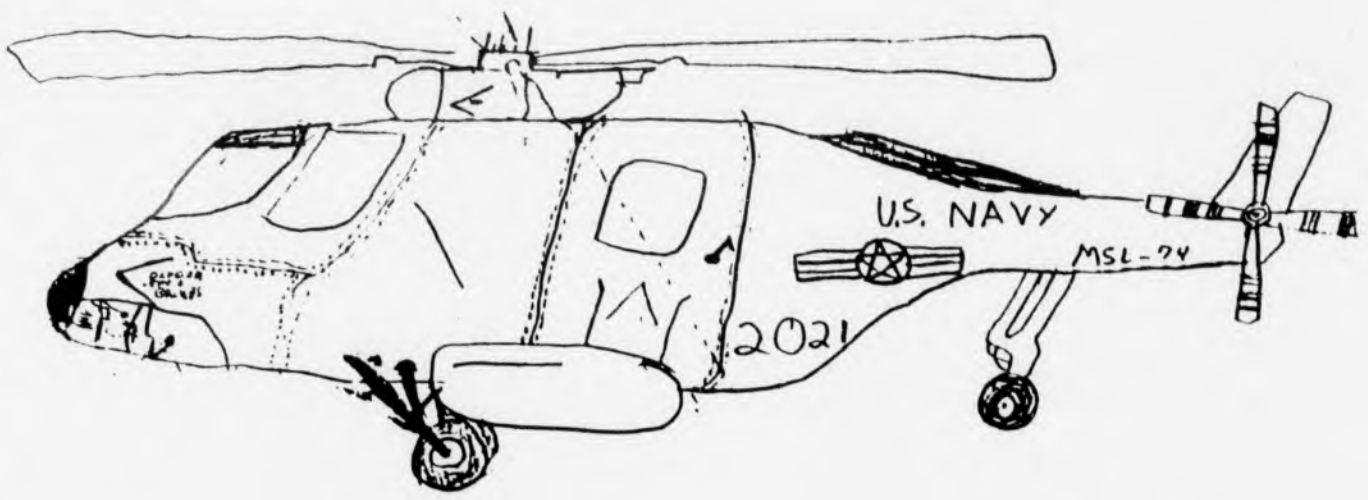
Mark Equi, Evan Murphy, B.J. Butman, Justin Maitland, Todd Bestick and Boyd Stepan were particularly effective in throwing off the concentration of the Milwaukee Brewers with "the wave." The Red Sox beat the Brewers 4-2.

Cohasset Scouts advance

Several Cohasset Cub Scouts in Pack 38 recently earned awards for their hard work and dedication.

Justin Maitland of Den 3 earned a bear, one gold arrow and one silver arrow.

And in Den 1, Kevin DeVito, Jaoh Paul Laugelle, Greg Boyne, Ben Ketchem, Luke Caldwell, Andrew Sorrentino and Ronald Nicycski all earned their wittle and chip.



Webloes enter Troop 28

Five local Webloe Scouts have moved up to join Troop 28. They are: Sean Cogill, Frank Judge, Anand Merchant, Dan Preston and Jerry Cogill.

The Webloes are looking forward to their camporee May 18-20 at Camp Child in Plymouth.

Tigers become wolves

Just when you thought they were tigers, some of the Cubs in Pack 38 have become wolves. Next thing you know, they'll be bears.

Ben Smoot

Scouts visit Navy base

Cub Scouts from Cohasset recently visited the Naval Air Station in South Weymouth.

The tour began with a look at the patrol planes and helicopters.

In the parachute loft, the scouts learned why each parachute has four different colors of fabric: green for camouflage when landing in jungle areas; white for snow; tan for sand or dessert; and bright orange for being seen easily.

The boys also saw the survival kits the men carry with them. The kits include flares, tools, foil reflectors, chewing gum, and high-caffeine coffee.

At the end of the tour, the scouts had "chow" in the galley. Devin Buick, Michael O'Hart, Ryan O'Hart, Chris Olney, Justin Maitland, and Ben Smoot enjoyed the Navy's hospitality.

Students study health

During the weeks between April 30 and June 15, students in the Deer Hill and Joseph Osgood schools will participate in health education programs in their classrooms.

The "theme" for this period of time is child growth and development, and each grade level will concentrate on some "age appropriate" aspect of this theme as part of their health education instruction.

This theme will deal with areas such as: nutrition, body structure and function, varying growth rates, social, intellectual, emotional and spiritual growth and development, how personal decisions can affect one's growth, communication, decision-making, and building self-esteem.

Students in the upper elementary grade levels also will be introduced to an educational unit which provides students with a vehicle to learn and ask questions about the changes which will be occurring in their bodies as they approach puberty. More information will be provided prior to that unit.

Through this program, the schools are attempting to cooperate with parents in assuring the health and well-being of the children by reinforcing healthy attitudes and values, in building self-esteem, and empowering the students to make healthy, appropriate decisions about their behaviors.

Students to be tested May 29

Second graders will take the ERB tests beginning May 29. The school department wishes to minimize the stress associated with these tests and is encouraging parents to have their children enjoy a good night's sleep the night before, so they will arrive at school "with their usual enthusiasm."

Meagher performs in N.Y.

Michelle Meagher of Cohasset was among 130 Boston University students to perform at various sites throughout New York City during a concert tour this spring. Meagher is a soprano in the Boston University Music Organization's Choral Union.

The Choral Union performed with another Music Organization ensemble at such locations as South Street Seaport and City Hall Plaza. The students also performed in a joint concert with musical groups from New York University.

A sophomore majoring in English, Meagher is a 1988 graduate of Cohasset High school. She is the daughter of Richard and Mary Meagher of Evergreen Lane.

Dudley Bryan

PSO meets tonight

The Cohasset PSO will hold its annual spring meeting tonight, May 10 at 7:30 p.m. in the high school cafeteria.

Following a brief business meeting, a panel comprised of administrators, teachers and a school psychologist, all from area school systems, will discuss "Exploring Ability Grouping: Are We On The Right Track?"

If you are interested in learning more about current educational practices, both in Cohasset and other public school systems, you should plan to attend. Questions from the audience are encouraged.

May 16 is the date for the "Talents Unlimited" training workshop for all interested parents. This is designed to help identify and develop the many talents of children grades k-6. It will be held from 7:30 to 9 p.m., at the Deer Hill School cafeteria.

Dudley Bryan honored

Dudley Bryan won the accolades of six of his teachers at Cohasset High School in being nominated student of the month for March.

His advanced placement calculus teacher, Dennis Walsh, said Bryan is the type of student who takes on extra responsibilities, such as writing a computer program to help the library keep track of its books and acting as an aid in computer science classes.

"I cannot think of any student or group of students who have put forth such an effort... Dudly Bryan is a real gentleman and a real asset to Cohasset Junior/Senior High School."

In nominating Bryan, Susan McFadd and Janet Batts, of the library, agreed the student's computer program "will make life much easier for us."

Colleen Lucas, Bryan's art teacher, called him talented and "an all-around creative person." She noted that he has helped dozens of students with cartooning, drawing and painting.

Bryan, a METCO student in Cohasset since first grade, is an honor roll student and a gifted artist with a warm personality, according to METCO coordinator Patricia Brown

Dr. Jack Packard cited Bryan's dedication, consistency and high-caliber work on school video productions as a combination that has served as "an extraordinary contribution to the A.V. and other departments this year."

Students enjoy great books

Students in the Joseph Osgood and Deer Hill Elementary Schools recently completed the Junior Great Books Program.

Ninety-five students in grades two, three and four met weekly in discussion groups from Feb. 26 to April 12. The discussion groups were led by 10 parents who have been trained in Great Books Foundation courses.

Junior Great Books leaders who have volunteered their time this year are: Monica McKenney, Alison Ulmer, Jane Goedecke, Sarah Pease, Elaine Smoot, Roz Blake, Lillian Ketchum, Linda Gaston, Sue McNamara and Kate Caldwell.

The program has been coordinated this year by Monica McKenney, Parent School Organization (PSO) representative, and Marilee Cantelmo, curriculum enrichment coordinator for Cohasset Elementary Schools.

Junior Great Books is a program of interpretative reading and discussion. Students learn how to interpret what they read. Interpretative comprehension is a skill which requires that children make inferences about characters or events: Why did the characters behave as they did? Why did this event happen?

In Junior Great Books every answer to a "why" question must be defended by citing supportive evidence directly from the text.

This skill – linking evidence to the assertions – underlines the critical thinking that characterizes more advanced literature study and reading in content areas such as science and social studies.

Junior Great Books lessons are conducted by the method of "shared inquiry." In shared inquiry, students and discussion leaders work together to answer questions that focus on important problems of meaning in a literary work.

Guided by the leader, students develop their own interpretations and support them with evidence from the text. The reading selections used in the program range from classic folk tales and modern short stories to the works of great thinkers.

Scholarship signups open

Continental Cablevision is accepting applications for its second annual $1,000 scholarship for a graduating high school senior on the South Shore pursuing a career in the communications field.

Public and private school students from Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Norwell or Scituate are eligible for the Continental Cablevision Communications Scholarship if they will attend an accredited institution of higher learning next fall in pursuit of a career in communications, television, radio, journalism or the theater.

To apply for the Continental scholarship, students should send a letter (no more than two pages) to John Walber, Continental Cablevision, 15 Farrar Farm Road, Norwell MA 02061.

The letter should provide background information on themselves; explain what they are interested in doing in the communications field and why; and tell why the scholarship is important to them. They also should enclose two letters of recommendation from adults who know them well, such as teachers, members of the clergy, employers or business people.

All letters must be received by May 25 for applications to be considered. An independent panel of communications professionals will choose the scholarship recipient.

For further information, contact John Walber at 659-0502.

Heather Littlehale learned how to make a garden grow for the Deer Hill School annual science fair.

Devon Noonan explained how our eyes trick us into seeing optical illusions.

Deer Hill students shine in annual science fair

be neat and I wanted to see for myself," she explained.

Melissa Weier, whose report was on electricity, illustrated her report by wiring a dollhouse for the show, complete with tiny working lamps connected to little jacks she had put in the walls of the dollhouse.

Devon Noonan's display of optical illusions was a real attention-grabber.

She said she likes to look at things that you can look at in two ways, in ways that can fool you sometimes.

The illusions often are created, she explained, because the eye has a hard time differentiating between dark and light colors; if a color is too light, then the brain is misled.

David Christoffel's funnel cloud was a big hit at the science fair.

Christoffel said his brother helped him build a vented chamber with a hot plate and pie tin at the bottom to create steam and wind current conditions that would create a miniature funnel cloud. The little tornado was impressive.

Eric Henry's project was on "Light, the Mystery You Can See."

Henry said he didn't know what light was until he embarked on his project and found that light is made up of the six colors of the spectrum: red, orange, yellow, green, blue and violet.

As a photo of Albert Einstein peered out from behind the periscope Henry had made, the student noted that "many knowledgeable people in science have studied light."

Census-takers are coming

Census-takers will be making house calls throughout the region starting Thursday to pick up completed questionnaires and to help residents fill them out. Census takers will be working from now through the summer months.

"Many people have been working for months - even years - to make sure that the door-to-door phase of census-taking...will be as smooth as possible," Census Bureau regional director Arthur Dukakis said last Thursday in Boston.

All employees of the U.S. Census Bureau are required to take the oath of confidentiality, which bars them from releasing any information from individual questionnaires under penalty of imprisonment and/or a $5,000 fine.

Census employees can be identified by a red, white and blue shoulder bag labeled "U.S. Census 1990" and a red, white and blue badge with the census-taker's name printed on the front.

The census determines political representation and federal funding.

Clark addresses chamber

On Wednesday evening, May 16, Ellery Clark Jr. will be the guest speaker at the monthly meeting of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce.

Clark, author of three books on our own favorite bad boys of summer – the Boston Red Sox – now makes his winter home with his wife, Grace, in Maryland, and spends the majority of his time preparing for and participating in the senior Olympics.

Following in his Olympic gold medal-winning father's footsteps, he has won 20 medals himself in the Maryland Senior Olympics over-80 class.

Concert benefits Center

The 60-piece Southeastern Philharmonic Orchestra will perform a concert Saturday evening, May 12, for the benefit of the South Shore Natural Science Center, Norwell.

Held at Scituate High School from 7:30 to 9:30 pm, the program will feature both classical music, including Schubert and Grieg, and more contemporary fare, such as Frederick Lowe's Brigadoon and a selection of Broadway tunes. Tickets are $7.50 in advance (available at the Science Center [617] 659-2559) or $9 at the door the evening of the concert.

The 74 year-old orchestra is the oldest continuing civic orchestra in the country. The group consists of 60 musicians, ranging in age from teenagers to octogenarians. Through its history, the orchestra's purpose has been to provide enjoyment and experience for music lovers of all ages and levels of accomplishment. According to orchestra president Mary Quinton, "a particularly gratifying result of the past 74 years has been the number of young people who have progressed through the orchestra, many of whom have gone on to become professional musicians and teachers."

Members of the orchestra reside in cities and towns all over the South Shore and as distant as Attleboro. Conductor Robert C. Babb, now in his 11th season, travels from Nashua, New Hampshire each week to Weymouth to rehearse and for the six or seven yearly concerts the group performs.

The Cohasset Fire Department's Chief Daniel Brock taught fire safety. The Cohasset Police Department's safety officer, Clifford Jones, brought a video of "Amy" and spoke of safety.

Linda Farrag, the coordinator of the course, is a registered nurse. She spoke on first aid and safety, including the Heimlich Maneuver to help the choking person. The last day was a fun "nutrition party."

"Fiddler" opens to a standing ovation in Hingham

The crowd at the Hingham High School auditorium erupted into applause last week in response to the Hingham Civic Music Theatre's opening production of "Fiddler on the Roof."

As the show begins, Tevye, played by Charles Terranova of Scituate, is joined by the entire cast in in the rousing opening number, "Tradition."

Tradition is the foundation of the village of Anatevka, and the Jews who scramble for a living there.

Tevye is the master of the house, who keeps trying to have the final word at home with Golde, his long-suffering wife, played by Jodi Capeless of Easton.

Their two younger daughters, Shprintze and Bielke, played respectively by Hillary Blowers and Lauren Seroll, both of Hingham, are content.

But the older girls find that the traditional way of the Papa– of having the matchmaker choose their husbands– conflicts with the fact that they each have fallen in love on their own. And Tevye must decide if his belief in the tradition that keeps them all in balance is more important than the love he sees in his daughters' eyes.

Can he bend enough to allow Tzeitel, played by Poicow to marry the poor tailor, Motel, played by Steve Dooner of Weymouth?

Can he bend even further to allow Hodel, Carol Jo Barnes of Sudbury, to wed the radical student, Perchik, Peter Kulka of Norwell?

And finally, can he break fully with tradition to allow Chavaleh, Cristi Lamb of Hingham, to marry a Russian, played by John Taylor of Hull?

And what becomes of the Yente the matchmaker, played by Doris Herzberg of Hingham, or of Lazar Wolfe, the butcher, played by Ron Herzberg of Hingham?

You can find out when the show continues at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, May 11 and 12 at H.H.S.

Tickets are available from cast members, Noble's Camera Shop, Hingham Public Library and the Hingham Music Store at the Harborlight Mall in Weymouth. Advance sale tickets are $8; they cost $9 at the door. For tickets or information, please call 749-0857 or 749-0867.

Charles Terranova of Scituite and Jodi Capeless play out their roles of Tevye and Golde in a production of "Fiddler on the Roof" that will appear at Hingham High School on May 11 and 12.

TREAT THE PROBLEM NOT THE PAIN

Pain is only the tip of the iceberg. Chiropractic concerns itself with the body's nervous system. Regardless of a person's age it is the nervous system that helps maintain health and integrity of body organs, muscles, bone structure and related tissue. All too often pain, fatigue, or sickness in any area of the body can be traced to the impaired nervous system that governs that body area.

Carillon re-dedication set

The Rt. Rev. David E. Johnson, bishop of Massachusetts, will re-dedicate the Cohasset Carillon Saturday, May 19, at 4 p.m.

The re-dedication will begin with a gathering outside the Cohasset Town Hall. Participants then will process across the town common to the west door of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, singing hymns accompanied by the carillon.

This was the way the first dedication began 66 years ago. A service of evening prayer will take place in the church. Bishop Johnson will offer the prayer of re-dedication and preach the sermon.

Following the service, there will be a reception in Walton Rodgers Hall. An exhibit on the 66-year history of the carillon will be on display by the historical society of Cohasset.

The service of re-dedication will be the centerpiece of a weekend of activities. A carillon recital will take place Saturday, May 19, at 2:30 p.m. performed by Albert Gerken, carillonneur of the University of Kansas.

That night, at 7 p.m., Milford Myhre, carillonneur of the Bok Tower in Lake Wales, Fla., will give the recital.

The next day, on Sunday, May 20, a recital will be given at 2:30 p.m.
by Sally Slade Warner, carillonneur at St. Stephen's.
At 4 p.m., there will be an open tower where visitors can examine the playing chamber and bells of the carillon and see how it is played.

The concluding recital will be given May 20 at 7 p.m. by Todd Fair of Amsterdam, the Netherlands.

The renovation of the Cohasset Carillon has consisted of replacing 35 bells weighing from 29 to 660 pounds. Six bells have been added to the original carillon so that the instrument is now in concert pitch.

The Cohasset Carillon is the largest in New England in number of bells. In terms of quality, it is one of the finest in the world. The re-dedication of the carillon is an act of praise and gratitude.

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow wrote of the "Bells of San Blas":

"For bells are the voice of the Church,
They have tones that touch and search
The hearts of young and old;
One sound to all, yet each
Lends a meaning to their speech,
And the meaning is manifold."

Such is the significance of the re-dedication of the Cohasset Carillon on the 19th of May.

Mothers lauded at L.D.S.

The Hingham Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will celebrate "The Challenges and Blessing of Motherhood."

Speaking at the 9 a.m. family worship hour are three members of the congregation: Maija McLean, mother of a teen-age daughter; Daryl Davison, mother of two young children; and Diane Mangum, mother of six sons, one daughter.

The meeting will be conducted by Craig Bradley, assistant to Bishop Dan Garrison, spiritual head of the local congregation. Visitors are welcome at this meeting.

Pro-life pins for sale

"Roses for Life," a lapel pin that symbolizes the pro-life movement, will be sold after all masses this weekend (May 12 and 13) outside St. Ann's Church by members of the Respect Life Prayer Group.

Mother's day wishes from Mother Earth

My Dearest Children,

On Sunday you will honor your human mother, the one who has loved, nurtured, fed, clothed and admonished you.

Has it ever occurred to you that I too am your mother, your mother's mother, and the mother of all living things?

For many years now I have been suffering from pollution, over-development and excessive consumerism to the point where I am deeply hurt. My air, soil and water are unhealthy, and some of my plants and trees are diseased and dying.

As you know, many animals who called me their home are no longer to be with us ever again. They are extinct.

But you can turn the tide. On this Mother's Day, I plead with you to remember me daily and care for me lovingly through a conserving life style.

Please don't buy chemical pesticides for your lawn, garden or plants.

Please don't buy so many things, especially plastics and products which damage or over-use me.

Think of how all your choices affect me. And remember that as you care for me you really care for yourselves. For we are united.

I want you to be able to depend on me for good strengthening, poison-free food, air and water.

I want you to enjoy an abundance of lush flowers and treed.

I want you to happily and fearlessly swim in my waters, hike my mountains and revel in my fields.

So I admonish you, my children, to treat me with respect, to give back to me as I have given to you and to "walk in balance" upon me.

With deepest love,
Your Mother Earth

Softball team proves a surprising opponent

By David McKee
Mariner staff

The Cohasset High softball team continues to surprise opponents throughout the South Shore League.

Last week the Skippers split their two games to move to a 3-6 record overall with a 3-4 league mark.

The Skippers dropped Abington 6-5 and then suffered a 12-3 loss to Norton.

"We are playing pretty solidly," coach Mike Gill said. "It was great to get the win over Abington. The kids never quit and hopefully this will give us confidence as we head into the second round of league games."

Against Abington the Skippers stayed close and then made their move in the sixth inning to grab the win.

Junior Nicole Barry got the start for the Skippers and went the full seven innings for the victory.

"Nicole pitched a very strong game for us," Gill said. "She was around the plate and walked very few. Her pitching was the key to the game."

Behind 5-4 entering the fifth, the Skippers tied the score on an RBI single by junior Kerri Mieli.

Then in the sixth the Skippers took the lead for good.

Junior Kay Long singled to start the inning. She moved to second on a single by sophomore Heather Bass. She moved over to third on a wild pitch and scored on an errant pick-off throw.

"This game was close all the way," Gill said. "We were able to get some offense going later and then we held them in the seventh."

The Skippers got nine hits on the day. Bass and eighth grader Alison Ludlow led the way as each went two for three.

Junior Barbara Lagrotteria got a single and had three stolen bases.

"We had to take advantage of what Abington gave us plus we were moving on the basepaths," Gill said. The Skippers ended up with seven stolen bases.

After the big win the Skippers faced Norton and lost a 12-3 decision.

Barry got the start for the Skippers and went five innings plus. She was relieved by sophomore Bridget Leung.

Barry then came back to pitch in the seventh but to no avail as Norton won by nine runs.

"Norton was a very small team but they were the fastest runners I've seen this year," Gill said. "They got on the bases and used their speed to make things happen. Plus they were very selective at the plate and bunted a lot. At one point they milked ten straight walks from us."

In addition to the Norton speed, the Skippers committed a few errors.

The Skippers did manage some offense themselves.

They scored single runs in the second, third and sixth innings.

In the first inning, junior Maureen Long doubled and later scored on a passed ball.

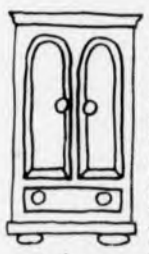
In the third, Lagrotteria scored by stealing home as the catcher threw the ball back to the pitcher.

"It was a good play by her," Gill said. "But Norton turned around and did the same thing to us a few innings later."

In the sixth Kay Long singled in Ludlow who had reached on a base on balls.

All told the Skippers had seven hits on the day with seven different players collecting the safeties.

"We were not at the top of our game offensively," Gill said. "They played a better game and we did not capitalize on our chances."



EARLIER ACTION

The Skippers second win of the year came in a 10-9 win over Hanover played two weeks ago.

Barry went the full seven innings to pick up the win for the SKippers.

Skippers can't shake those springtime blues

By David McKee
Mariner staff

The Cohasset High baseball team has the spring time blues.

The Skippers lost three straight last week to fall to 0-6 on the year.

They lost 10-2 to East Bridgewater, 11-0 to Abington and then finished up with a 19-3 defeat to Norton.

"The kids are still showing up every game," coach Ted McDermott said. "No one is getting down or anything. Sure losing is tough, but with the youth of our team, we consider this a learning experience. I'm not putting any additional pressure on them. They have enough pressure being freshman and sophomores playing for the varsity."

The Skippers opened with a 10-2 loss to East Bridgewater.

Senior Mike Rollandeli got the start for the Skippers and lasted four and 1/3 innings.

Senior Mike Ellinger, who had missed some games due to an ankle injury finished up.

In Rollandeli's stint he allowed seven runs to cross the plate.

"It was a tough time out there for Rollandeli," McDermott said. "But I was encouraged with how Ellinger looked."

Ellinger struck out six batters in his relief stint.

As for the Skipper offense, the lone bright spot was freshman Nate Fiore who went two for three and drove in one of the Skipper runs.

The Skippers next faced Abington and Ellinger, coming off his fine relief work, got the start.

However this time it was a different story. He allowed seven runs in the first inning and four in the fourth.

"He got off to a bad start," McDermott said. "But he settled down in the second and third as he struck out a couple batters. But then he ran into trouble in the fourth."

Senior Noah Hill relieved Ellinger and pitched the fifth and sixth innings, shutting out Abington.

"Noah looked real good out there," McDermott said. "He is starting to learn how to mix his pitches and work different situations. For a kid who took up baseball two months ago, he is doing just great."

Once again the Skippers had trouble getting anything going offensively. The lone bright spot was eighth grader Chris Rollandeli who went two for three.

"He is not intimidated playing for the varsity, especially when he is at the plate," McDermott said. "He has a good stroke for someone his age."

The Skippers then finished up their week with a 19-3 loss to heavy-hitting Norton.

"Norton might be having a down season record-wise," McDermott said. "But you couldn't tell that out there. Everything they hit, they hit hard."

Mike Rollandeli got the start and lasted the first three innings.

Golfers tee-off for hospital

Local golfers can tee-off to raise funds for the renovation of South Shore Hospital's emergency and obstetric services at the Hatherly Golf Club in Scituate Wednesday, May 16.

The first South Shore Hospital Golf Tournament, which will include dinner, music and prizes, will benefit the hospital's $15.9 million emergency/obstetric services project, scheduled for groundbreaking this summer.

Scituate resident Charles F. Field, principal of Charles F. Field Insurance Agency, Inc., in Hingham, and a longtime member of the board of directors at Hatherly Golf Club, is heading up the volunteer committee that is organizing the event.

"Planning the tournament gave me a chance to help the hospital in a way that I enjoy," Field said.

Volunteer tournament organizers and committee members Jack Toomey, president of John T. Toomey Associates of Hingham, and his wife, Susan, echoed Field's sentiments.

"I gave birth to four children at South Shore Hospital," said Susan Toomey. "I received wonderful care, and I'm glad that I can now give something back to the hospital."

Laura Jean MacDonald of Cohasset, an amateur golfer and real estate agent with H.R. Hunneman and Company, said planning the tournament was a lot of fun.

"I love golf," she said, "and the tournament will raise money for a very important project."

"Florida Scramble" teams, captained by hospital physicians, administrators and trustees, will tee-off at 1 p.m. Golf pro Scott Allen, a New England long drive champion, will drive a ball from the third tee for each team.

In addition, golf pro Chip Johnson will hit long balls for each team from the 18th hole.

Any golfer who hits a hole-in-one where a 1990 Isuzu Trooper is parked will win the vehicle, courtesy of Scott Shulman and Best Chevrolet of Hingham.

Following the tournament, dinner will be served at Hatherly by the Barker Tavern of Scituate. Boston sports broadcaster Ken Coleman of Cohasset will be the featured speaker.

For tickets to the golf tournament, please call Barbara Wollan at (617) 340-8334.

South Shore Hospital is a 340-bed, not-for-profit medical center providing health care to more than 450,000 residents on the South Shore.

Showers stall soccer

By Carol Riley
Special to the Mariner

An all-night downpour forced cancellation or postponement of many Coastal Youth Soccer League games last Saturday. A few contests were held on away fields and several took place Saturday afternoon and Sunday on a very soggy Milliken field.

Here's how Cohasset teams fared:

The boys under-14-1 undefeated team overpowered Hingham's top soccer squad 6-2 on home turf, with goals by: Eric Henry (2), Chris Kondrat (2), Charlie Endris and Tim Brister. Ben Redifeld at sweeper position and Nick Terry at right wing aided in this big win.

Boys under-14-2 lost a close away game to Duxbury, 2-0. Playing great defense were: Dean Volungis, Tobey Horn and Kevin O'Donnell; strong on offense were: Ben Manning and Pat Reynolds.

Boys under-10-1 team fell to Hanover on their field, 2-1, in the Saturday drizzle. Cohasset's single goal was scored by Greg Bilton. Leigh Atherton was outstanding on defense; Derek Bugley looked strong at forward.

In girls soccer action, the girls under-19-1 team won by forfeit to Kingston.

Girls under-16-1 swept Scituate 3-1, with goals by: Kathleen O'Brien, Jessica MacDonald and Lisa Schramm. Playing strongly at midfield were Allegra Snyder and Katie O'Sullivan. A fine defense was anchored by Robin Devito, Bridget Corkery and Mieka Marie Laugelle.

Girls under-14-1 were overpowered by Sacred Heart on their field, playing shorthanded (nine vs. 11) in the rain. Players and coach felt that they "played the best game of their lives" especially considering the adverse conditions. Giving credit to all: Sarah Atherton, Sarah Kirk, Marnie DeMichele Bonnie Kreuger, Julie Good, Sheryl Saef, Cilla Goff, Alison Killilea, Christa Ansbergs; Coach Tom Killilea lauded his team.

Girls under-14-2 fell to a very strong Plymouth squad, 3-1, with Cohasset's single goal scored by Melinda Johansen. Goalkeeper Emily D'Urso was brilliant in stopping a penalty shot by Plymouth. Molly Pease, Martina Snyder and Jemilah Afshar were effective at midfield.

Girls under-12-3 team played two games last week. They whipped Hingham 8-0, with goals by: Katie Fitzsimmons (4), Cara McKenney, Julie Smith, Emily Henderson and Liz Good. This big win was followed by a 3-0 loss to Plymouth. But this past weekend, the girls were victorious over Duxbury 1-0, with an outstanding goal by Jo Hurley. Goalkeepers Lonnie Colwill and Alia Afshar provided the shut out.

Girls under-10-2 lost a close one to Pembroke 5-3. Scoring for Cohasset were Alexandra DeRosa (2) and Lydia Crafts. Playing well at midfield were: Victoria DeRosa, Susana Candia and Kyralea Cogill.

Although losing 4-0 to Duxbury the girls under-10-1 team played an outstanding game once again. There was good defensive play by Ali Kinchla, Sally Hamill and Alissa Conley. An aggresive forward line was helped by assists from Sarah Nohe and Alison Hawks.

Baseball...

He gave up five runs in the first and then ten in the second and Norton had a commanding lead.

Once again Hill relieved and did a fine job in the fourth, fifth and sixth innings as he retired nine men in a row.

"Noah again did a fine job pitching for us," McDermott said. "But it seems when we start bleeding, we can't stop it. We either start getting the ball up or we start making too many errors. We have to work on that."

The Skippers got one run in the fourth and two more in the fifth.

The batting stars for the Skippers were sophomore Ryan Cibelli who went two for four with a triple and a RBI and Mike Rollandeli who had a double, a triple and a run batted in.

Chris Rollandeli also had a hit and is batting .400 since being called up from the sub-varsity.

"Chris has been one of our most consistent hitters the last week or so," McDermott said.

Even with the winless record, McDermott has seen some progress by his team.

"The kids are getting better each time out," he said. "We are a young team but the kids are learning and maybe if we can get solid pitching and some hitting we can pull out some wins."

Softball...

The offensive stars were Maureen and Kay Long. Each went two for four on the day. And Kay knocked in Maureen for the winning run in the seventh.

The Skippers are now 3-6 overall with a 3-4 league mark.

Gill is hoping the team can continue improving and grab some more league wins.

"We need to work on all aspects of our game," he said. "We are a young team but I see the progress every day. The hitting will come but the pitching and defense need to be there more consistently."

Lobsterman's group blasts allegations by A.G. Shanon

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

The Massachusetts Lobsterman's Association is working diligently to pay off valid medical claims despite allegations by the attorney general's office that the association refuses to pay.

The attorney for MLA, Leonard Rose of Falmouth, characterized the lawsuit filed May 8 in Suffolk Superior Court as full of "a lot of misinformation."

Attorney General James M. Shannon filed suit against MLA, the insurance companies and administrators of the group plan for failure to pay more than $1 million in medical and hospital claims.

"I think the people in the attorney general's office might have been more careful and taken the time to inquire what the facts were," Rose said.

According to Rose, the attorney general's office failed to provide the required five days notice of intent to file suit or confer on the facts before filing with the court.

Rose cited the court's refusal to grant the attachments sought by the attorney general as proof that the lawsuit overstated and exaggerated the situation.

"We agreed to the injunction because it contains everything we're doing and nothing we're not planning on doing," he said.

According to Rose, the attorney general's office has known about the health insurance problems and efforts by the lobsterman's association to resolve them for the past two years.

"We notified the attorney general in 1988 when we first knew about the deficit," Rose said.

Rose also said the association offered to let the attorney general's office handle the review of claims and settlement negotiations with medical providers.

"He ducked out of that one real fast," he said.

According to Rose, the health insurance plan offered by Maritime Commerce Foundation Trust and marketed to lobstermen and fishermen through the association "was working fine for years." Things fell apart in 1987 - 1988 when the health insurer was socked with several high claims.

"The claims that came in were horrendous," Rose said. "They just overwhelmed the program."

Several claims were in the range of $100,000 or more.

Blue Cross gives town bitter pill

Blue Cross gave Cohasset a bitter pill recently: enroll more town employees in the health insurance program or face cancellation of the policy.

The board is hoping the insurance committee and the employee study committee will help find a solution to the health insurance mess.

According to Executive Secretary Greg Doyon, financially-troubled Blue Cross imposed a new underwriting requirement that 20 percent of the town employees must be enrolled in the Blue Cross plan or the town could be cut off.

Currently, only 13 percent of the active eligible town employees subscribe to the Blue Cross plan.

Blue Cross wants the town to drop one of the HMO plans in order to boost participation in Blue Cross.

Even if the town could convince another 15 employees that Blue Cross offers better coverage, the employee's share of the premium might dissuade them from signing on.

"The prices are prohibitive compared with the HMO coverage," Doyon said.

Blue Cross proposed premiums of $603 per month for an individual and $1,283 per month for family coverage. The HMO charge is $238 for an individual and $545 for a family.

The town pays half of the Blue Cross plan as its contribution toward employee health insurance coverage regardless of the plan actually chosen by the employee.

"There is no guarantee employees would opt into Blue Cross even if we drop one of the two HMOs," Doyon said.

Chairman Rocco Laugelle asked if the town even has the right to drop the HMOs.

"We gave the employees a choice of health insurance," Laugelle said.

Doyon agreed collective bargaining agreements may make it impossible to drop the coverage.

He said he notified the town unions of the possible changes in health insurance coverage and invited them to discuss the matter.

If Blue Cross drops Cohasset, it is most likely to affect retirees — particularly retirees living out of town.

"They could potentially be left out in the cold,"

Rockland man dies in fall

George W. Severance Sr., died as a result of the severe head and neck injuries he incurred when he fell off a roof at 108 Jerusalem Rd. Friday, May 11.

Severance, 51, of 620 Hingham St., Rockland, was working at the Jerusalem Road site as a carpenter with Richard Farwell and Sons.

According to police, it was toward the end of the day, about 4:30 p.m., when Severance lost his balance and toppled from the roof, hit another roof at a second level, then hit the ground. He died of his injuries at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth.

Selectmen mull cemetery options

If Cohasset opts for the three-phase expansion of Beechwood Cemetery, the town could add 600 to 700 more grave sites, according to cemetery consultant Brewster Fuller.

It will take careful planning and a lot of gravel— and the historical commission isn't sure they approve.

Fuller, of Brewster Fuller & Associates of East Bridgewater, said the construction plan would meet the town's needs until a more permanent solution can be built. The cemetery commission estimates that at least 200 more grave sites must be built to satisfy a pressing need.

The first phase would extend the access road off Doane Street and add 50 to 70 graves within the $10,000 budget approved at town meeting.

The cemetery committee favors the first phase, but hasn't decided to seek bids on the project.

The second phase would add another 300 graves, reached by a new entrance and road off Beechwood Street. The final phase could add as many as 240 graves.

According to Nancy Snowdale of the historical commission, the main concern of the commission is maintaining the historic integrity of the cemetery and the Beechwood area.

Both Snowdale and Noel Ripley of the historical commission object to building a 20-foot-wide road off Beechwood.

"Whatever you do is forever," she warned. "We lost Beechwood Fire Station and we never should have."

Former Selectman Burt Pratt queried why a stopgap measure had become a massive project.

"At what point do we go beyond a temporary expedient and into a major expense," he asked, concerned about the necessity of buying $16,000 worth of "dirt" to fill in a glacial depression in the cemetery in a later phase.

While Fuller estimated it could take 2,000 yards of gravel to fill the hole, he said as much as 500 yards of it could be taken from the hill that would be leveled.

Fuller said much of the cost of the project hinges

Cohasset's week

Assessors on hot seat

The cable TV show "The Home Center with Gail Bell" the show " The Cohasset and Hingham assessors on the hot seat" Wednesday, May 16 at 8 p.m. on Channel 53.

Jim Lagrotteria, Cohasset assessor, and Nazarino DeVito, Hingham assistant assessor/town appraiser will be Bell's guests.

The hot topic of "seemingly over-assessed property in today's real estate market" raises the issues of abatement, fair market value, and accurate reevaluations. Mark and Jane Cahill from Hingham will be Gail's recent "Homebuyer on the Street."

Murray blasts rate hike

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) has notified the Department of Public Utilities of her opposition to a requested rate hike by Boston Gas Company.

Rep. Murray has urged the DPU to consider the consumer who has been faced with increased state fees and now new taxes.

Murray said the Boston Gas Company has requested a 6.9 percent increase. DPU approval of this increase would see an increase to those who do not use gas to heat and who use 10 to 30 therms a month of $2.33 to $2.92.

Those customers who use gas for heating and use 50 to 120 therms per month would pay approximately $2.42 to $3.33 per month.

Rep. Murray said Boston Gas Company has also has sought approval to include in their rates the cost of environmental clean-up sites caused when gas was manufactured from coal.

Customers in Cohasset, Hingham and Hull are among the users in the 78 cities and towns supplied by Boston Gas Company.

Rescuers work to assist a victim of last week's accident at the entrance to the Super Stop & Shop on route 3A.

Advisory Committee to study rail plan

A series of public meetings has been scheduled by the Old Colony Citizens Advisory Committee to review the recently-completed draft environmental impact statement and report for the proposed Old Colony commuter rail project.

The environmental statement and report will be made available to the public following formal advertisements which will appear in the Federal Register on May 18 and in the state Environmental Monitor on May 22.

The advertisements will trigger a 45-day public comment period during which citizens, state and federal agencies will be invited to review and comment on the environment statement and report.

Fifteen public meetings and three public hearings have been scheduled within the Old Colony communities during this 45-day period. At these meetings, the results of the environmental review, alternatives examined, and other Old Colony issues will be discussed by members of the Old Colony Citizens Advisory Committee.

The draft report concludes that in the year 2000, Old Colony commuter rail service will carry between 13,000 and 15,000 commuters from 21 South Shore stops into Boston each morning.

The report states that the restoration of commuter rail service on all three Old Colony lines would result in substantially more benefits than any other alternative previously examined by the MBTA.

According to the environmental report, the benefits will include: providing the most direct transit service to the most communities; reducing traffic, especially on commuter roadways in Quincy and Dorchester; reducing parking demands in Boston; reducing air pollutants in the region; lessening passenger demand on the Red Line; reducing energy consumption; and achieving regional transportation equity by providing transit service to Southeatsern Massachusetts comparable to those enjoyed by the rest of the greater Metropolitan Boston area.

When the public comment period is over, the MBTA will proceed with the preparation of the final Old Colony Environmental Impact Statement/Report.

Public meetings have been scheduled in the following communities: Plymouth and Carver, at Plymouth North High School cafeteria, May 23 at 7:30 p.m; Kingston and Duxbury at the Reed Community Building auditorium in Kingston, May 30 at 8 p.m.; Brockton, East Bridgewater and West Bridgewater, at Brockton City Hall, GAR Room, May 31, 7:30 p.m.; Scituate, Norwell and Marshfield at the Scituate Public Library, downstairs meeting room, June 4 at 7:30 p.m.; Cohasset at Cohasset Town Hall auditorium, June 6 at 7:30 p.m.; Hingham at Hingham Town Hall auditorium, June 7 at 7:30 p.m.; Bridgewater at Bridgewater Academy Building auditorium, June 21 from 6 to 8 p.m.; Hanson and Pembroke at Maquan Elementary School cafeteria in Hanson on June 27 at 7:30 p.m.

Shopowner berates selectmen over ignored zoning laws

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

There is no profit in playing by the rules, according to Melinda Mincolla.

Mincolla is the proprietor of Design in Bloom, a florist shop on Route 3A. She told selectmen she adheres to every zoning regulation about signs, outdoor displays and outside sales only to see the shop two doors down openly flout the rules and make out like a bandit.

It was bad enough when Inspirations boutique had a scantily-clad mannequin leaning against its sign. But when the clothing shop brought in truckloads of flowers and blatantly sold them, Mincolla really got mad.

"I'm being seriously hurt," she said. "It has affected my business."

The flower sales began on Valentine's Day and have continued on every major holiday.

Mincolla said the town added insult to injury when police were ordered not to shut down Inspirations' roadside flower sales.

"I was told a year ago I couldn't sell flowers on the highway," she told the selectmen.

Executive Secretary Greg Doyon explained police had been advised by Town Counsel Richard Henderson it was "not appropriate" for them to shut down businesses. Henderson told police to log in the complaints and refer them to him for action.

Mincolla isn't the only one objecting to the outdoor flower sales and merchandise displays. In addition to Mincolla and other merchants, Brewster Road residents complained that visibility at their intersection was damaged by the flower displays.

According to Doyon, the town sent a letter to boutique owner Shirley Musto of Scituate on May 7 stating she could not sell flowers or other merchandise outdoors. Musto ignored the letter.

Doyon said the zoning officer took pictures of the flower sales to introduce as evidence when the town seeks a permanent injunction against the business in court.

He told selectmen that Inspirations is subject to a fine of $100 a day.

"The profit gained [from the sales] is far greater than the fines for breaking the law," Selectman Jane Goedecke said. Goedecke also said it would cost the town more than $100 per day to pursue the matter in court.

Chairman Rocco Laugelle promised Mincolla the town would move "full speed ahead" to resolve the matter.

"I'm glad it's going to happen, but it's a day late," she responded.

"I'm tempted to sell my flowers outside, too. At a $100 fine, it would have been a drop in the bucket."

Contacted later, Musto said, "I do believe I am not in violation [of zoning laws]. If I am, then Woolworth's is in violation and Stop & Shop."

Musto referred all other questions to her attorney, Joseph Hayes.

In other business, the selectmen:

• Approved a $32,000 architectural contract with Strekalovsky and Hoit for the police-fire station renovation. David Chase, chairman of the renovation committee, said they hoped the project could be completed without moving either department into temporary quarters.

• Accepted a drainage report and voted to pay the Russell Wheatley Co. for engineering services at Milliken-Lillard Field.

• Granted permission for Thayer Academy students in the marine biology program to park at Black Rock Beach or Government Island on May 21. The rain date is May 22.

• Agreed to meet every other week during the summer beginning May 29.

Lobsterman's group blasts allegations

Rose said the association stopped offering medical coverage in November 1988, offered coverage through Blue Cross/Blue Shield to people enrolled at that time and filed in bankruptcy court in order to settle the claims filed by medical providers.

In the latter part of 1989 or early 1990, the bankruptcy court ruled that bankruptcy laws did not cover the particular situation the association found itself in. Rose said MLA withdrew its bankruptcy petition.

"The money has never been touched while we've been trying to find a fair way to settle the claims," he said.

Rose said the association is computerizing the information about outstanding claims, a process he estimated would take another three or four months.

"It's a monstrous job. We're only on 'M', " Rose explained.

Once the data collection phase is completed, all claims must be analyzed for eligibility.

Analysts will weed out duplicate billings, exclude deductible amounts and check for bills outside of the covered period.

"We are not going to pay out any money until we see how many valid claims there are," Rose said.

Before any money is paid out, the association will seek permission from the court and the attorney general.

Rose is unable to say how much is owed until the final analysis has been made, but "millions is perhaps an exaggeration."

Rose estimates the association has about $200,000 available to pay claims and is optimistic medical providers will accept whatever payment the association can offer on the dollar.

"The providers are waiting patiently for settlement offers," he said. "There are no problems with that."

Fashion plates to strut their stuff for JDS

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

For Jane Leahy, it's more than just another cocktail party and fashion show to raise money for a good cause.

"It's sort of like a healing process," she says of the fundraiser for juvenile diabetes.

Many people tend to think of diabetes as more of an inconvenience than a disease. They assume that diet and insulin have made it a harmless condition.

Nothing could be further from the truth.

Diabetes can maim, disable and kill even the most careful of diabetics. Leahy knows because her brother died four years ago at 42 because diabetes destroyed his kidneys.

Since that time, the family has sponsored a golf tournament in Milton to raise money for a scholarship in his memory. Another fundraiser is held in Florida for the Kidney Foundation.

Leahy, a Cohasset resident for the past four years and specialist in faux finishes for furniture and walls, decided it was about time to raise money for research into the disease that really killed him.

The fundraiser is being co-chaired by Leahy's husband, Robert, and Paul and Drew O'Neil of Hingham.

Friday, May 18, anybody who's anyone on the South Shore will be at the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset for cocktails at 6:30 and an informal fashion show beginning at 8-ish. There will also be an auction and raffle.

Seven men and ten women will model fashions from near and far.

Some women will be modeling evening clothes and sophisticated attire in imported Thai silk from Siam Malee, a Boston boutique in Faneuil Hall. Appleseeds of Cohasset will unveil its new look for the '90s, featuring sport and cruise wear and evening attire.

The men on the runway will wear classic looks from Gates of North Scituate.

Models include Cohasset residents Janet Lamp, Joan McDonald, Dee Dee Nicynski, Alicia Spenlinhauer, Babette Strecker, Vic Lanzilotti, Bill McAuliffe, Emmett O'Brien and Ron Nicynski.

Brian Leary of Channel 5 is the guest speaker while Lindy Backus of Fleuri will narrate the fashion show.

If clothing isn't your thing, stick around for the raffle and auction. There's something for everyone.

Sports fans might want to bid on the four Red Sox tickets and dinner at Whipper Snappers or one of the rounds of golf. Music and theater lovers have several options feed the senses and the body.

Homebodies can redecorate by bidding on window treatments, watercolors and silk floral arrangements, while those who want to make a great escape can opt for a sailboat cruise or a lost weekend on Nantucket.

Gamblers can take their chances on a variety of goodies including gift certificates, museum passes and a brunch for two at the Boston Harbor Hotel.

Or you can simply enjoy the hors d'oeuvres, cocktails, fine music and pleasant company all in a good cause.

The Juvenile Diabetes Foundation believes that the '90s will be the decade of discovery. They are financing research into better ways of controlling diabetes today and curing it tomorrow.

There is no cure today.

Symptoms of diabetes include excessive thirst and hunger, unexplained weight loss, lethargy, blurred vision, and injuries that are slow to heal. Leahy urges people to contact their doctor if they or a loved one is experiencing these symptoms.

Cost of the evening is $15 per person or $25 per couple. Tickets are available at the door. The art center is located at 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset village.

Doyon said. Currently, 12 retirees are enrolled in Blue Cross, three in Medical East and 16 in Bay State.

Doyon told the board Blue Cross gave the town until June 30 to make a decision.

"I'm very much against reducing choices for our employees," Selectman Diana Kornet said. "It's a bad plan to eliminate one of the choices in hopes enough people will opt for Blue Cross."

Doyon told Kornet the town must reduce the choices or the reduction would be made for them.

"We could poll our employees and ask if any of them would like to pay three times as much for medical coverage," Kornet said dryly.

But, said Selectman Jane Goedecke, "we must also be aware of the cost to the town and carefully weigh those things.

"I have been told to expect the annual town cost of health insurance to increase by 15 to 20 percent each year."

Selectman Ned Tebbetts suggested other options the town could pursue, such as increasing the amount employees must contribute or reducing the level of coverage.

• Dick Guilfoyle has just been informed that the national awards jury of the Freedoms Foundation at Valley Forge has received three nominations naming him to receive their "1991 Businessman Award."

Smithsonian magazine, The National Flag Foundation and the Newcomen Society all named Dick as their nominee for next year's commendation. They pointed out that before he retired in 1988, as president of the Sturges Corp., his company placed 50 full-size replicas of America's Liberty Bell at prominent locations across the nation--plus the thousands of replicas of the famous Paul Revere/Old North Church Lantern, and the Independence Hall Inkstand (used to sign the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution), currently on display in schools libraries, institutions, museums, and government offices throughout the USA.

For the past 42 years, the foundation has recognized individuals and organizations who have made significant and positive contributions toward the strengthening of our free society. The awardees will be honored at special ceremony in February 1991.

Previous awardees of Freedoms Foundation have included such notables as John Glenn, Paul Harvey, George Foreman, Eric Hoffer James Schlesinger, Dr. Wernher Von Braun, John Wayne, Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn, Bob Hope, Patrick Buchanan, Stan Musial, as well others representing a cross-section of leadership from the business, educational entertainment and civic communities.

• Cohasset Red Cross community bloodmobile was recognized for the third year at the American Red Cross Blood Services, Northeast Region annual recognition night, held at the Sheraton Mansfield Hotel at Mansfield on April 26.

Cohasset Blood Chairman Alfred Odermatt accepted the award, which was for conducting three Bloodmobiles, averaging 102 pints per blood drive in 1989.

The guest speaker was Charles Fiske, father of Jamie Fiske who underwent a successful organ transplant. He stressed that even with the donated organ and medical science, the success of the operation was dependent on blood donations. The next bloodmobile will be held at the First Parish House, 23 North Main St., Tuesday June 5, from 2:30 to 7:30 pm.

• Cohasset's own boys soccer coach, Dan Magner, has received an award for his abilities recently.

The National Federation Interscholastic Coaches Association (NFICA) has selected Dan to receive the state Distinguished service award for soccer.

"His contribution to high school athletics is truly deserving of our recognition and thanks. Congratulations on being selected to represent all of those deserving people in your state who have contributed so much to the interscholastic athletic program," signed Don Sparks, NFICA/NFIOA director.

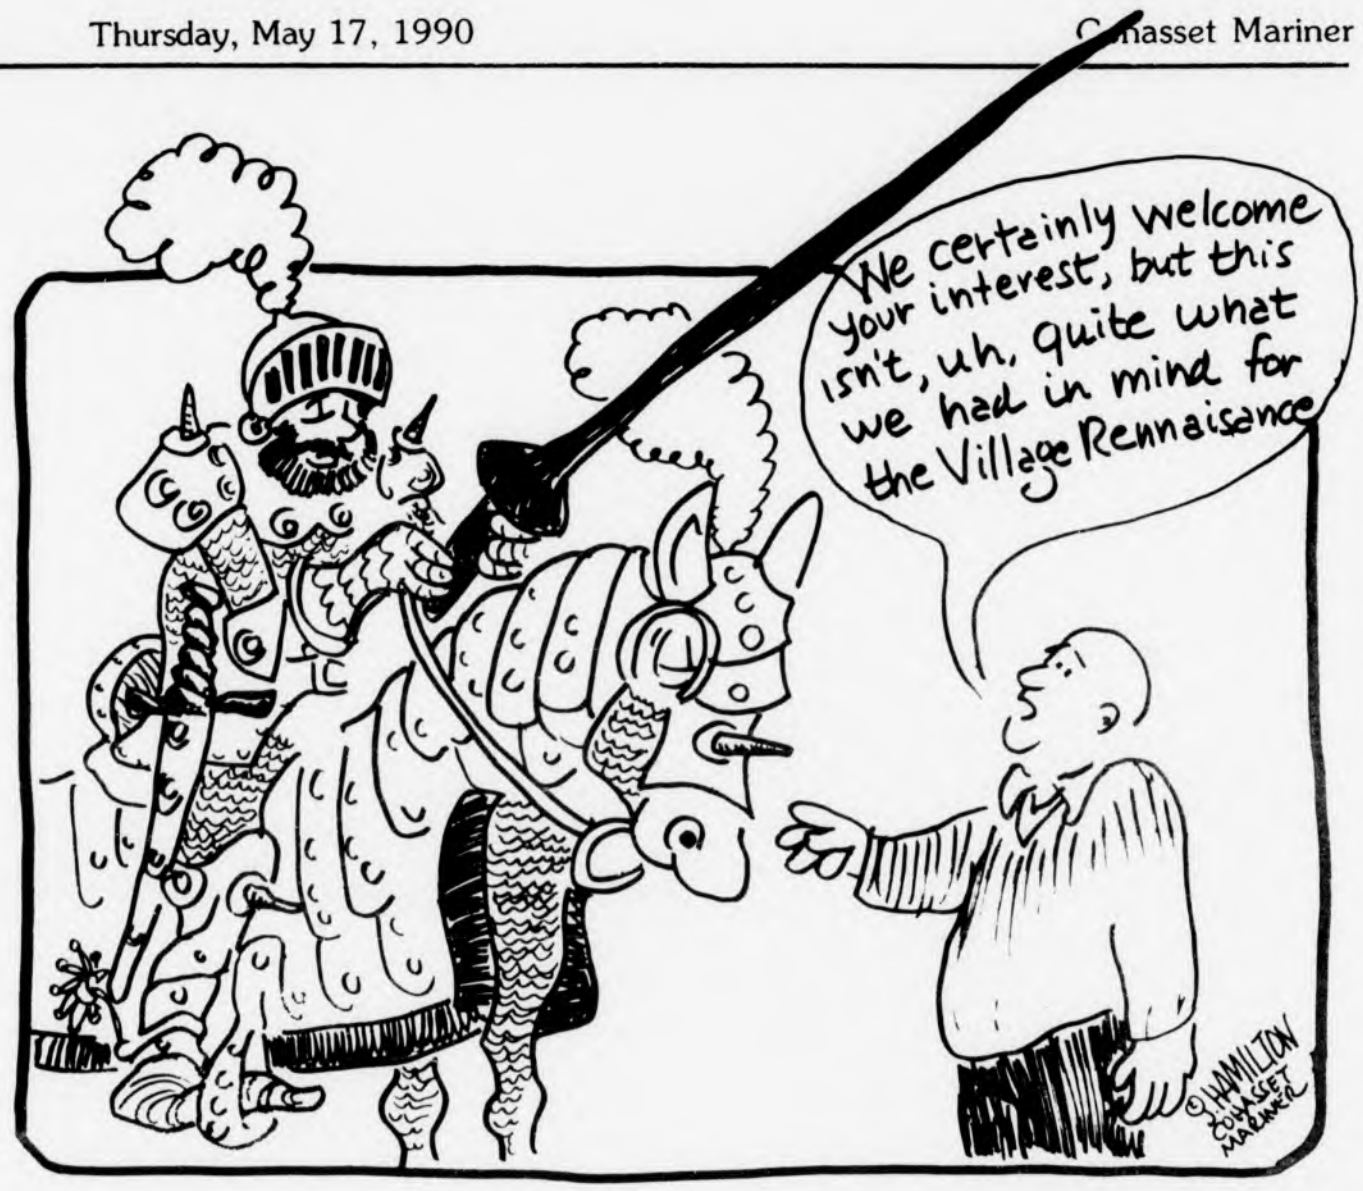
Catch that train!

The time has come, Cohasset, to stand up and speak your piece about the proposed revival of the Greenbush commuter rail line through Cohasset.

Next week will mark the opening of a 45-day public comment period on the project. There will be numerous meetings, including one at the Cohasset Town Hall auditorium on June 6 at 7:30 p.m.

This project could very well change the face of Cohasset. Martha Gjesteby and Debbie Cook have been Cohasset's representatives on the citizens advisory committee, and they have differing views on the subject. Where do you stand?



If you feel you don't know enough about the project, and would like to learn more, you may look at a copy of the Mass. Bay Transit Authority's environmental impact report at the library or at town hall; both the selectmen's office and the town clerk should have copies, according to officials at the MBTA.

To refresh your memory, the rail line enters Cohasset from Hingham between North Main Street and Route 3A. It crosses Sohier Street by the Osgood School and runs past Smith Place and behind the shops in Cohasset Village.

It continues on to the Greenbush area of Scituate, hence the name "Greenbush Line."

The project features 12 grade crossings in Cohasset, complete with gates, flashing lights and bells. The trains will run at short intervals during rush hour and hourly during non-rush periods.

The MBTA also proposes building a train station and parking lot off Route 3A where the former ice rink and current boat store stand.

You won't be the only one eyeing this project during the next two months or so; federal and state agencies will be looking it over too. But have your questions ready, because you might bring up something that others will overlook.

Chamber of Commerce's Costello addresses tax debate

By Kevin Costello
Special to the Mariner

Commentary

It's that time again; time for us to let you know how we feel about the pending debate on taxes.

We fully admit we've been defeated before. Since last summer more than $1 billion in new taxes and fees have been assessed to the Massachusetts taxpayer. We're not happy about that, and we know that the South Shore delegation, by and large, led the fight against those tax and fee increases.

Well, we're asking you to lead the fight again. In doing so, we are re-releasing our plan to deal with the fiscal year 1990 budget deficit, and the fiscal year 1991 budget.

As a chamber of commerce, we are in a unique position to observe first hand any shifts in the economy. Unfortunately, what we have seen of late has not been encouraging. Layoffs are rampant, Chapter 11 filings are up, consumer spending is down.

To impose either a 20 percent increase in the personal income tax, a 20 percent increase in the unearned income tax or a 20 percent increase in the sales tax at a time when consumer spending is down would mean economic ruin to many businesses, large and small.

In a recent nationwide poll, the Northeast ranked lowest in consumer confidence. this downward trend will only continue if one or more of these taxes gain legislative approval. The one tax we are willing to consider is a hike in the gas tax. We would only support an increase if it were earmarked (85 percent for roads and bridges, 15 percent to the MBTA).

We have suggested in the past that the fiscal year 1990 deficit be dealt with by bonding. We then suggested the bond to be paid off by dedicating the existing surcharge of .5 percent of the 9.5 percent corporate income tax, over a ten year period.

The surcharge on the corporate excise tax will generate an estimated $75 to $100 million a year. Once the bond is paid off, revenues from the surcharge would be placed in a "deficit stabilization fund" to pay off any deficit in that fiscal year. If the deficit is eliminated, any remaining balance would be transferred to a "tax reduction fund" and used to reduce personal income taxes.

There are two potential benefits to this plan:

1. A healthy business climate will ensure a steady revenue stream to pay off the bond: therefore government policy toward business should reflect this relationship.

2. By dedicating an existing tax, this method of paying off the bond circumvents the Citizens for Limited Taxation initiative petition which would make null and void any new tax which may be dedicated to paving off the bond.

Of course, it will be incumbent upon the chamber and others to state where the revenue lost from the corporate excise tax surcharge will be found.

For the fiscal year 1991 budget, we recommend you look seriously at Rep. Richard Moore's (D) Uxbridge, "Proposal for Legislation to Avert Future Deficits." This "Baby Gramm-Rudman" approach to the budget could be instituted for one year to ensure that spending is held in check and fiscal stability is restored.

Another matter to consider is that the cutbacks in spending for this year will have the benefit of a full years savings for next year. The same argument can be used for any re-structuring programs put into effect this year. Therefore, the projected deficit figures for fiscal year 1991 may, in fact, be overblown — having not taken into consideration the benefit of these savings.

If you have any questions or comments I can be reached at (617) 479-1111. Thank you.

Health board says: Good work Cohasset, Keep it up at RTF!

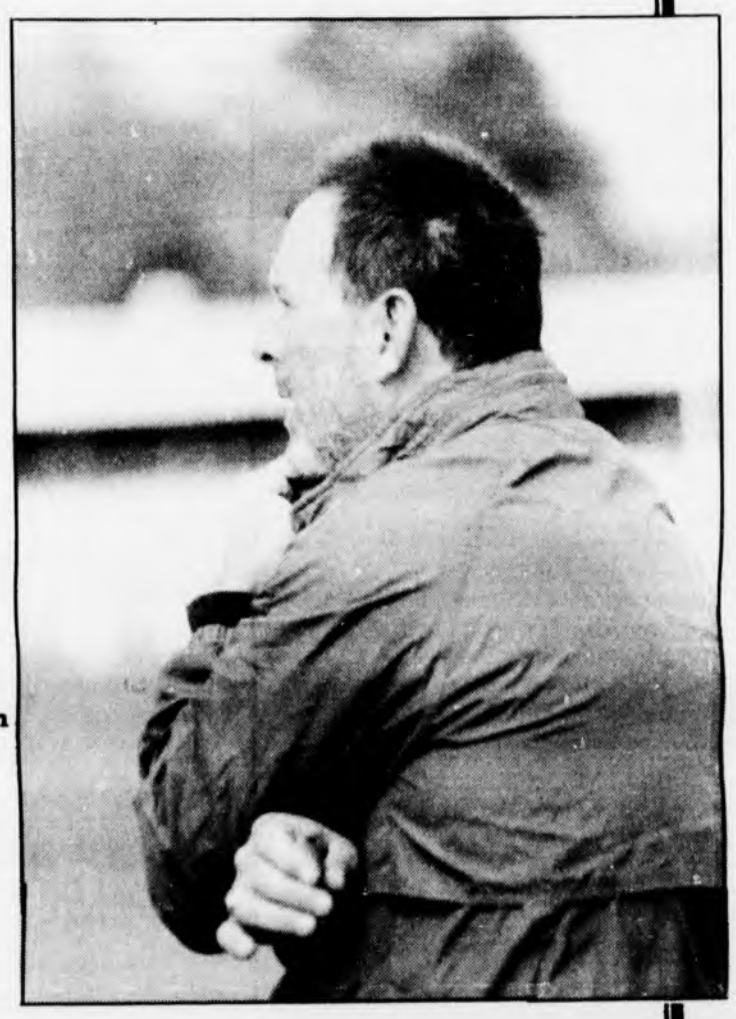
To the Editor:

The Cohasset Recycling Committee and the Board of Health appreciate the excellent manner in which most residents are recycling. The manager of Waste Knott, however, cautions that Cohasset's supply of glass and plastic need refinement.

In order to get an "A" rating on the grade of glass, it must be clean with no caps or other contamination. Cohasset's last rating was "D" and the next lower grade would mean rejection of the supply. Therefore, please see that glass containers are rinsed and call caps removed. Paper labels are okay.

Only plastic containers with the numbers "1" and "2" on the bottom should be recycled. The bottom of most clear bottles will show a "1" which indicates the "Pete" type of plastic (soda, windex, ocean spray, listerine, liquor jugs, etc.). The HDPE or HO2 plastic includes all opaque water and milk containers and most white, opaque, colored, or hard plastics (Tide, clorox, Dawn, etc.). Please, remove caps. Flower pots, yogurt or cottage cheese containers, plastic toys and plastic bags are not acceptable.

A new recycling guide will be available shortly. Recycling is an evolving process and Cohasset can be proud of the amount of recycling done at the Cedar Street Recycling Transfer Facility. The newest addition of tin can (coffee, soup, pet foods, etc.) recycling is going well and further decreasing the amount of trash sent to SEMASS.



The recycling savings to the town amounted to $3,236.07 with a total of 68.31 tons recycled. Keep up the good work! And don't forget to recycle clean glass and specified plastics at your RTF.

Selectmen mull cemetery options...

on what kind of savings are possible by using town labor, equipment and supplies.

Selectman Diana Kornet pointed out that the town was under no obligation to complete all three phases.

"We could do phase one and part of phase two for well under $36,000," she said. Kornet suggested the town build the road and expand the cemetery section on the opposite side of the road from the hole.

Fuller's first phase calls for creation of a minimum of 50 grave sites using town labor and equipment, resulting in a minimal cost to the town.

Fuller wouldn't give any hard figures on costs, saying it all depends on how much of the work can be done by town employees. He estimated the total project would cost $60,000 to $70,000 if all of the work was hired out.

"Using town workers could cut that almost in half," Fuller said.

Fuller also assured selectmen Ned Tebbets and Martha Gjesteby once the total project is done, all water would drain off into the wetlands. He assured them there would be no adverse effect on a nearby home.

Cemetery Superintendent Peter Laugelle said only the third phase would require a notice of intent to be filed with the conservation commission.

Both Laugelle and Fuller recommended filing a notice covering all three phases.

"Just so there's no surprises for anybody," Laugelle explained.

Noel Ripley, chairman of the historical commission, suggested the cemetery expansion include a columbarium, a vault with niches to hold urns from cremations. Ripley proposed building the columbarium into the hillside rather than filling in the area.

Laugelle also asked the board to remove the restriction on lot sales after the first phase is completed. He emphasized the need to bring in some revenue.

Selectman Jane Goedecke said the cemetery commission should take into account the new space at Beechwood in planning the new cemetery.

A facility that could hold as many as 5,000 graves has been proposed for land off Pleasant Lane and Smith Place. Neighborhood opposition and town unwillingness to pass a $100,000 Proposition 2-1/2 debt exclusion lead selectmen to postpone a vote on the project. The cemetery commission is expanding its membership and plans to respond to neighborhood concerns.

A public hearing has been scheduled by the study committee for May 31 at 7:30 p.m.

Both Pratt and selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle raised the issue of people not wanting to be buried in Beechwood Cemetery.

"It is not the responsibility of the town to bury people where they want to be buried," Goedecke retorted.

"I wouldn't want to be the one to tell anyone, 'No, you can't be buried there, you have to be buried some place else," Rocco Laugelle replied.

Chiropractors
RELIEVING DISCOMFORT
Judging by the sales of laxatives in this country, constipation is a problem for millions of Americans. All too many people seek relief for irregularity in the form of over-the-counter laxatives. Many of these work by irritating the bowel into action. This symptomatic approach can pose some long-term complications if used for the relief of chronic constipation. The alternative is to stimulate the intestines to action in the way that the body intends. That is to allow nerve impulses to flow unimpeded to the intestines. A restriction in the nerves exiting the lower spine may block the nervous stimulation needed for proper evacuation. Anyone with chronic constipation owes it to himself to investigate the chiropractic strategy for dealing with this discomforting problem.
Chiropractic is a natural and drugless approach that addresses the source of your problem rather than merely the symptom. DR. DEBRA M. TRANBERG, SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, 80 Front St., Scituate, 545-7388, and DR. SUSAN EMMER, CHIROPRACTIC & FAMILY WELLNESS CARE, 87 Sohier St., Cohasset, 383-1330, are available to assess your needs and offer you the chiropractic procedures that will provide for a total state of well-being. Cardinal Cushing graduates get "Pomp and Circumstance"

By Betty Duquet
Mariner correspondent

"Somewhere over the rainbow, skies are blue, and our dreams that we dare to dream really do come true."

At Cardinal Cushing School and Training Center commencement last Friday, the school chorus sang these familiar lyrics with heartfelt emotion; a touching message of reassurance to classmates in caps and gowns.

It was indeed a day they had dreamed about. One boy had talked about graduating for 1-1/2 years. "He is so excited and happy today!" said Rose Chermesino, a teacher's assistant, who had cheered and applauded when the youth marched alone down the aisle to "Pomp and Circumstance," as each graduate had.

Camcorders and cameras whirred throughout the ceremony, capturing speakers' recurring themes of independence, responsibility and challenges along with the laughter and tears. Some graduates had been Cushing students for fourteen years. They especially faced the event with mixed emotions, because graduation meant leaving the school for developmentally disabled citizens, where teachers and staff play important roles in their lives.

In fact, the staff often become friends and family as well. One example is Marshfield vocational education teacher David Allen and his wife Ellen, who also worked in a training program at Cushing' s thrift store. "My husband brought two boys home to live with us because they had no families. They've been with us ever since," Ellen said. "Now, one boy, Leonard Small, works in Hanover at Crawford Products where he hasn't missed a day in four years," she added with pride.

Cushing School secretary, Kathy Doyle, explained why the staff itself is like one big family. "Many of our employees are related," she said, introducing her own daughter, Kate Doyle, (both of Rockland) a residential counselor. During the ceremony, "Cushing families" of teachers, staff and volunteers heard their school praised as one of the finest in the nation and received appreciation for their roles in achieving that reputation.

School director, Mr. Hank Perrin, extended a warm welcome to parents, guests and staff who filled the auditorium, but especially to the graduates — "twenty of them, who have worked very hard for years. Some of the challenges they've faced, many of us would not be able to face," he said, "and their challenges have become successes."

Perrin had recently explained to his graduates that commencement meant a new beginning. "They seem very happy and excited, but also sad and uneasy about what is ahead of them. And we would all feel that same way. I don't like to see tears today--we should be smiling. Be happy! As we said, it's your very special day!"

While some students had told Perrin, "I'm ready for a new job and a new place to live," others had said, "I'm not ready to leave, I'm not sure what is ahead of me." The director continued, "'So it can be frightening and challenging, but these folks have faced challenges before; they will face them again and overcome them." He added, "It's a new start and that's exciting. We wish you the best of luck."

Perrin expressed thanks on behalf of the graduates to parents, friends and staff for the compassion, stamina, education and training, and the love they had given. "Without you, we may not be where we are today." He also thanked parents for being supportive of the staff, " when you trusted us with your special children. These are fine young men and ladies." His words calmed some graduates who were overcome with emotion, so that when he asked them, "Are you happy?" they shouted, "Yes!"

Perrin introduced commencement speaker Francis P. Kelley, Superintendent of Wrentham State School. Perrin lauded Kelley, who in 13 years has taken Wrentham's programs and developed them into something more impressive and unique than he has ever seen. He announced that both Cushing and Wrentham staffs will be exchanging training sessions at each other's facilities, "to observe and learn."

Kelley, past president of Mass. Special Olympics and consultant to the Joseph P. Kennedy Foundation, had equally high praise for the Hanover school.

"I continue to be impressed when I see what wonderful work goes on here. We're all so proud of you." He asked the graduates to think back to the days when they first came to Cardinal Cushing. "I'm sure you and your families were a little scared of what was going to happen, but also hopeful and excited that you were going to be in a program where you could train for jobs, make new friends and have fun. You probably weren't sure what was going to happen. Now, here you are, with all the accomplishments you've completed. You are fortunate to have been part of one of the finest programs in the world."

Kelley told of his travels around the globe to visit similar training programs. "And this is the finest I have seen....where the philosophy stresses meaningful education with an emphasis on human dignity and spiritual worth. And, something that comes through is that the individual is first. That is what the rest of the country is trying to do, but has always been true here; you come first to the staff and teachers. Your school enjoys a national reputation, as well as in Hanover and the Commonwealth."

Kelley asked graduates to cheer the teachers who had brought them here.

He closed with positive encouragement.

"The important thing to remember is that the more you try to get what you want, the more likely you are going to get it. So I want each and every one of you to set your sights high because you've already reached the point many people thought was impossible for you to meet. But you went out and did it. So my message for you is go for it! Each of you should be proud of your accomplishments. Your families are just filled with pride today. I"ve been told that this graduating class is very special. Today, you embark upon a journey to the future. As you go your separate ways, you represent our high hopes for the '90s, and as we move to the year 2000. In your new jobs and experiences, all we expect from you is one thing — just do your best. God bless every one of you!"

Cheryl Mennino, associate director of the school, announced four special awards to graduates, thanking family and friends "who continue to support us by making donations and awards for our graduates every year." She said selecting recipients was difficult, because all had worked hard.

"I am proud today to award four who really deserved them ." The winners included: Vincent M. Zampell of Billerica, The Young at Heart Award, presented by secretary Amanda Peters; Edward Caouette of Fall River, the Ronald Horte Memorial Award, presented in their bother 's memory (a former student), by Mary Ann and William Horte; Susan Satter of Worcester, the first annual Joan Leahy Memorial Award, presented by staff member Rose Chermisino, in memory of her sister Joan; and Scott Andrews of Halifax, the Friends of Cardinal Cushing Athletic Award, presented by Mennino.

Following awards, child care worker Kim MacKedon read her poem entitled "Cardinal Cushing School," written for the yearbook. The poem describes students' experiences, beginning with evaluation, discovering strengths, weaknesses and originality. She spoke of reaching goals, always keeping individuals' needs and feelings in mind.... "'They grow and learn, both students and staff; they wonder, experiment, cry and laugh. There are good times and bad times as life goes on, so we try harder, from dusk until dawn. Independence we strive for, to do our best; to climb higher and faster than all the rest. Time isn't important, it's the distance we travel, the changes that take place as the knots unravel. More sure of ourselves from the lessons we learn, for greater knowledge, we all so yearn. As a result, we hope to succeed, that each individual has a great life to lead."

Exemplifying all that MacKedon's poem expressed was graduate Denise Maillet of Waltham--a student at Cushing for 14 years--who spoke for her classmates. "'We learned to cook, wash dishes, do chores, laundry, and go food shopping. In gym, we learned sports, how to stay fit and grow in confidence and trust, We've learned jobs at work sites so that after graduation we can show everyone what we can do." Denise received thunderous applause with a standing ovation.

Following Mennino's presentation of certificates, all graduates rose and turned to face their audience for another ovation. And here, there was an especially memorable tribute when Cardinal Cushing Chorus — who had sung "Over the Rainbow" — reached over seats to be first in shaking hands with fellow classmates and wishing them luck.

In addition to award winners, the following graduates received certificates: Nancy L. Saleski of Cohasset; Sharon Doyle of Hyde Park; George Wilson of Mattapan; Matthew Costa of Brockton; Denise Maillet of Waltham; John Ellis of Cambridge; David Coderre of Deerfield; David Jordan of Essex; Gary Bassett of Brockton; Mary Kay O'Rourke of Marstons Mills; Deborah Karslian of Cambridge; Matthew Parker of Dedham, Warren Smith of Dorchester; Craig Priebe of Cambridge, John Bogusz of Nashua, N. H., and Brett Webber of Hyannis.

Cohasset's Marisol Perry glides through the '80s

Lots of dazzle and pizazz was what was on ice at the Pilgrim Skating Arena May 5 and 6 as members of the Skating Club of Hingham showed they had the right stuff in a range of solo and group performances.

'Gliding Through the 80's' was the title of this year's recital. The annual event, performed for family and friends, gives local figure skaters a chance to demonstrate skills they have acquired over many hours of hard training.

And glide through the 80's is exactly what about 60 skaters, from tots to teens, did — to tunes ranging from 'Girls Just Want to Have Fun' to 'Ghostbusters' to the themes from 'Dallas' and 'Dynasty.'

As a special surprise during the Friday performance, the Brockton Dancers proved that skating isn't only for the very young. This group of adult skaters graced the ice with fine couples dancing.

Featured guest performers were 15-year-old Nicole Laurin of Pittsfield and Charlene von Shaer, 15, of Wimbledon, England. Nicole placed fourth in the New Englands and sixth at the Easterns, which are both regional figure skating competitions. Charlene, who lives and trains in the United States, recently placed second in the Eastern Sectional Competition - Junior Ladies 1990 and second in the North Atlantic Regional Competition - Junior Ladies 1990.

Soloists included Susan Dempsey, Ryan Donnelly, Kerry Wehter, and Brett Costello of Hingham; Marisol Perry of Cohasset; Danielle Cheverie of Hanover; Kelly Carr of Abington; Stephanie Wiltshire of Quincy; and Lisa Mayo of Orleans.

The Skating Club of Hingham fosters and promotes amateur figure skating. All members of the club are members of the United States Figure Skating Association. The Club, which is based at the Pilgrim Skating Arena, schedules an series of activities annually to incorporate both the competitive and social aspects of figure skating into an enjoyable and beneficial pastime.

Tourney helps charity

Cohasset Community Center will hold its charity tennis tournament Saturday and Sunday, June 9 and 10.

The tournament will benefit the community center mortgage reduction fund and the nursery school. Matches will be played on 25 private courts throughout Cohasset and Scituate.

Everyone is invited to participate — both novices and seasoned players can enjoy the excitement of competition among friends, neighbors or new opponents.

Entrants will be competing in the following categories: mens' doubles, womens' doubles and mixed doubles for beginner, intermediate and advanced players plus childrens' beginner, intermediate and advanced.

Entry fees are $30 for adults and $10 for teens and children under 18. All entrants will receive a tournament T-shirt and tennis balls. Trophies will be awarded to the winners.

Matches will be scheduled at the following residences: Walsh on Nichols Road, Whelans on Atlantic Avenue, Hill on Atlantic Avenue, Pozatek on Surrey Drive, Vanderweil on Jerusalem Road, Goedecke on Nichols Road, Suhrbier on North Main Street, and DiPesa on Surfside in Scituate.

Several other locations are scattered throughout Cohasset and Scituate. Finals will take place on Sunday at the beautiful Roy Estate on Jerusalem Road.

Entry applications are available through the community center or any of the following committee members: Betsy Connolly, Linda Coyle, Sue Brister, Fleuri Reddick, Claudia Storey, Meredith Gledhill, Karen Devine and Jean Muir. For further information, call the center at 383-0088.

Locals aid cancer society

A number of volunteers from Cohasset are among some 40 South Shore residents who will turn sheriff, jailers and judges for a couple of days in June to raise money for the American Cancer Society through a novel "Jail & Bail" caper to be staged at the Crown Colony office complex in Quincy on Thursday and Friday, June 7 and 8.

"Jail & Bail" involves an "arrest" by agreement or surprise of an individual who must then earn his release by getting his friends to bail him out through contributions to the American Cancer Society.

Proceeds, that could top $40,000, will go to support the educational and service programs of the cancer society, whose South Shore Unit covers the nine South Shore communities of Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Scituate and Weymouth.

Those from Cohasset working on various aspects of the unusual fund-raiser include: Sharon Becker and Ozzie Ingram.

Prominent public officials, business and professional persons and educators are prime targets for the "arresting" officers. The victims will be brought to a mock jail in the lobby of 1200 Crown Colony, dressed in striped prison garb, and hauled before a judge who will decide how much bail they must raise to be released. By telephone calls to friends they solicit the contributions that then go to the good work of the cancer society.

Cancer screening June 14

The Social Service League of Cohasset, Inc. is sponsoring a mammography screening in Cohasset June 14.

The best means of controlling breast cancer is through early detection. If found early, breast cancer is curable. The League is sponsoring the mammography screening program from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. The van will be near the Cohasset Town Hall. Call the league office for an appointment 383-0771 or 383-0821.

The league recommends the American Cancer Society guidelines: 35 to 39 years of age - a baseline mammogram;

40 to 49 years of age - a mammogram every one to two years;

Over 50 years of age - a mammogram every year;

Women under 35 need a M.D.'s order.

Mobile Diagnostics, Inc. of Wellesley provides a fully equipped coach, which is comfortable, private and staffed by registered, female technologists. The equipment is a state-of-the-art low dose mammography unit. The x-rays are read by board-certified radiologists, and the results will be sent to you and your physician.

The total cost, which can be billed to your insurance, is $97. This is significantly below the average area cost of $120 to $200.

Recent legislation requires most insurance companies to provide coverage for Massachusetts residents. If you have private insurance, your insurance company can be billed directly. If you belong to any HMO, you must get written permission from your primary physician.

Some HMO's require you to have mammograms at their own facility. Women with Medicare also need written prescription and diagnosis for this x-ray to be covered. Medicare pays 80 percent of the cost and if you have supplemental insurance the 20 percent can be billed.

If you have only Medicare your cost will be approximately $15. There is a $$75 cash price; only available on the day of the exam, for women with no insurance, or whose insurance does not cover the test.

TV focuses on fosters

Have you ever wondered what foster parents actually do, or what it takes to be a good foster parent?

These questions and more will be answered on "Parents Club," a local talk show hosted by Nell Morse, on Channel 53, Wednesday, May 23, at 8:30 p.m. Diana Doran, a recruiter from Foster Parent Search will be the featured guest.

Museums set to open

Cohasset Historical Society museums at Cohaaset Center will open for the summer season Saturday, June 16.

The Capt. John Wilson House and Maritime museum on Elm Street in the village center will be open to the public each afternoon from 1:30 to 4:30 (except Mondays) through September 30.

The Capt . John Wilson Historical House is an 1810 Sea Captain's home, built by housewright David Nichols and purchased in that year by Capt. Wilson for $475.

Given to the Cohasset Historical Society in 1936 by William Hamilton McCaw, it was the first historical museum in Cohasset and the first headquarters of the Cohasset Historical Society. Today, it holds extensive collections of home furnishings, kitchenware, toys, prints and paintings representative of the early years of the town.

Additionally, this summer a committee of volunteers will be staffing the Capt. Wilson House and will maintain a museum shop facility in the main room of the house. The museum shop will carry a number of unique items made available by the Historical Society including Bigelow's Narrative History of Cohasset In a reprint of the original 1898 edition.

Volume 2 of the Narrative History by Burtron Pratt, also will be stocked, as will the paperback reprint of E. Pomeroy Collier's biographical book Cohasset's Deep Sea Captains.

Such items as Historical Society tote bags (in limited supply), Pairpoint glass cup plates of Minot's Light, sheet music containing a song about the famous lighthouse, and other unusual Cohasset related items also will be featured.

Adjacent to the Capt. Wilson House is the society's maritime museum, a mid-18th century ship chandlery built by Samuel Bates for his fishing fleet.

Originally located on Border Street, the early chandlery was moved to Elm Street at the village in the mid 1950s when given to the historical society by Mrs. William Cox, grand daughter of former chandlery owner Clarence W. Barron. Now, it holds an extensive collection of artifacts, maps, charts, and artwork relatlng to Cohasset's long history as a seafaring town.

Also featured is a collection of general historical interest, ranging from Indian stone tools to early school desks and equipment. Part of a "fisherman's country store" can be viewed, as can an early cordwainer's shoemakng equipment.

Admission to the Cohasset Historical Society's two museums on Elm Street is $1.50 per adult for each building, 25 cents for children ages 6 to 12 years.

Each of the Society's museums illustrates a different facet of Cohasset's long and active history and each offers a glimpse into a world vastly different from our own, carefully preserved in two museum buildings themselves important parts of Cohasset's seafaring history.

Sen. Kerry airs cable show

During the show, Kerry will discuss the comprehensive crime package, which the Senate is scheduled to take up at the end of the month. The Senate will set the priorities for the crime package of which the drug policy will be a major component.

Kerry's guests will include representatives from the Massachusetts law enforcement community as well as drug treatment professionals.

According to Dorothea Guild, owner and manager of Metamorphosis, new and current works by well-known Boston artist Niko will be featured.

These include oils, watercolors, pen-and-ink drawings and prints.

Guild, who represents leading Boston artists and sculptors, is planning "an ongoing cyclorama of exhibitors designed to make the acquisition of fine art and sculpture an affordable and lasting experience for art lovers."

Smith Place, the renovated historical Flat Iron Building, formerly used as the town's railroad station, also houses the Smith Place Consignment Gallery; the Boston Design Center Sample Store; the Frame Gallery of Brookline; Needlepoint; and Designers' Creations Interiors.

AFS seeks host families

Local members of AFS, the oldest non-profit exchange program in the United States, are seeking two or more Cohasset families to host exchange students for the 1990-1991 school year.

"Right now, we have two active applicants for whom we are trying to find host homes — one is a boy from Sweden and one is a girl from France.

Both would be seniors at the high school next year and have some understanding of English," explained Judy Dwyer, an active member of the local AFS program.

Dwyer is one of several local residents who provide backup information and support for AFS affiliated families.

"It's getting late and we are afraid Cohasset won't have the opportunity to host next year, if we can't arrange for host families soon," she said.

Families or adults willing to assume the role of surrogate parents for six to 12 months are urged to apply. "Host situations need not have children of the same age, nor children in the home at all. A number of adults who had never had children or whose children had grown and left home have been very successful host homes in the AFS program," Dwyer said.

Additionally, host families need not commit for the entire year; sometimes a family is able to offer a home to a student for half the year.

Cohasset families have been involved in the AFS program for a number of years, both in sending their children across the world and in hosting students from other countries.

AFS stands for American Field Service, a program begun after the second World War. It was singled out recently by the United Nations and recognized for its leadership in promoting peace and understanding between peoples of the world. AFS also was listed number six among all American charities in terms of ratio of money spent on the program versus administrative costs, in a recent study by a national magazine.

For further information, call Carol Beggan at 383-6473 or Mrs. Dwyer at 383-1654.

Candidates corner...

Republican debate set

Christy Mihos, Donald Hussey and Robert Hedlund will debate the issues facing the Norfolk/Plymouth District and Massachusetts during their two- hour appearance on "Pierson to Person," Thursday, May 17, from 8 to 10 p.m.

Host Wigmore Pierson will question the candidates about the recently enacted tax package, Prop. 2 1/2, affordable housing and the restoration of the Old Colony rail line to the South Shore.

Persons who wish to attend this debate should be at the North Scituate studio by 7:30 pm. For further information call Robert Belliveau at 545-0643.

"Pierson to Person" is aired live on Channel 53 in Hull, Hingham, Hanover, Norwell and Scituate and Channels 3 and 53 in Cohasset each Thursday night, 8 to 9 pm.

McDonald calls for debates

Brian McDonald, Democratic candidate for state senate from the Norfolk and Plymouth District, has called upon a number of local business, civic and political organizations to sponsor debates among the Democratic contenders for the seat.

"The 1990 election for state senate in the Norfolk and Plymouth District will be the most significant in recent memory," McDonald said.

He is calling for debates because Democrats voting in the September primary "need to hear the candidates express their views face-to-face in public forums in order to make an informed choice on election day," he said.

McDonald said that among the four Democratic contenders for the seat, "there is enormous diversity on the issues and there are clear differences of opinion about how government should work, whom it should serve, and what direction it should take in the coming decade."

"The debate format," she said, "offers voters the best opportunity — perhaps the only real opportunity — to compare the candidates and to decide which one would best serve the district in their state senate."

McDonald called for the debates in a letter to the chairs of the Democratic Town Committees in the seven district towns, to local League of Women Voters chapters, to the South Shore chambers of commerce, local cable TV stations, WATD and WJDA.

McDonald said his mailing list is not intended to be all-inclusive. He said that other groups may wish to sponsor debates and he would welcome as many debates as could be scheduled between now and primary day.

Creed opposes petition

While speaking at the town Democratic meeting in Cohasset, John Creed of Marshfield, Democratic candidate for the Norfolk/Plymouth District Senate seat said he opposes the "Citizens for Limited Taxation" petition,

The C.L.T. petition is the referendum question that will be on the November state ballot and, in effect, will cut state spending by $1,000,000,000.

Creed told the Cohasset Democrats that if the C.L.T. passes, it will dismantle state government and eliminate programs that assist our citizens who are most in need.

Creed pointed out "As we enter the 90's, the people of the Norfolk/Plymouth District must ask themselves what type of lifestyle they wish to live." The Marshfield School Committee member said he feels that we have to fund education, the environment, public safety, health care for senior citizens, transportation and other essential services.

"If we want the traditional lifestyle, we must be willing to pay for it." Creed concluded, "If the C.L.T. passes, it will end many people's dreams and I want to have the opportunity, as state senator, to keep those dreams alive."

Flynn speaks out

Rep. William Flynn, candidate for state senator in the Norfolk/Plymouth district, spoke before the House of Representatives Wednesday, May 9, opposing the $1.2 billion tax package.

During that debate, Flynn said, "People are very angry and they are very justified in their anger. What we are doing is driving the hard-working taxpayers out of this commonwealth and inviting the parasites into it. With this tax we are pushing people beyond their ability to pay.

"While I don't want to see the needy and vulnerable of our commonwealth go without essential services," Flynn said, "I am not convinced that the legislature has made enough reasonable cuts within the budget. More importantly, nobody in leadership has assured me that we will not need another huge tax hike to balance the FY'91 budget, which is absolutely scandalous and very unfair to the hard-working men and women in this state."

"We have to stop the flow of red ink now; otherwise the peoples' legitimate anger will not be abated."

"In the past," Flynn said, "I have supported various measures to cut the budget such as the "Massachusetts Budget Economy and Efficiency Act of 1990" "and I will continue to support throughout cuts which will help down-size government."

Flynn concluded, "My position still remains that before we consider a tax proposal, the Legislature must make responsible cuts in the budget. Once we have made this good faith effort in making these needed cuts, we can then proceed from there with respect to any other proposals."

Hussey meets leaders

GOP State Senate Candidate Donald Hussey recently met with teacher representatives from the district seven towns. Hussey was the only Republican in attendance, while most of the Democratic candidates were present.

In the two-hour debate, Hussey said, "Quality public education is and should be a basic priority here in Massachusetts. Having spent 12 years in a public classroom, I know first hand the demands which are placed upon teachers and administrators; I also know that education costs a great deal of money, and that is why I firmly believe that we must downsize this ever expanding State Government and fund education with existing tax dollars. It is my view that we should take care of our children, our senior citizens, our environment, and our safety — the rest of us should be contributing in some meaningful way. We simply can not continue to raise taxes as the solution to our problems — enough is enough!

Cohasset worship

Cohasset Carillon to be rededicated

Concerts by some of the world's leading artists and a service of rededication will celebrate the total renovation of New England's largest carillon the weekend of May 19 and 20.

The Cohasset Carillon will be rededicated at 4 p.m. on Saturday, May 19, at Saint Stephen's Episcopal Church in Cohasset.

In a service that recreates the original dedication 66 years ago, participants will gather outside the Cohasset Town Hall and process across the Town Common to the west door of the church, singing hymns accompanied by the carillon.

The rededication will celebrate the completion of a total renovation of the Cohasset Carillon, including the replacement of 35 bells, the addition of six bells and the installation of a new clavier, the keyboard from which the carillonneur plays the instrument.

The Right Reverend David E. Johnson, Bishop of Massachusetts, will lead the rededication ceremony, which will include a service of evening prayer in the church after the procession across the Town Common.

A reception in Walton Rodgers Hall will follow the service. On display will be an exhibit prepared by The Cohasset Historical Society of the that depicts the history of the carillon.

Also highlighting the weekend will be four concerts by world renowned carillonneurs: Albert Gerken, carillonneur of the University of Kansas, will play on Saturday at 2:30 p.m.; Milford Myhre, carillonneur of the Bok Tower in Lake Wales, Florida, will play that evening at 7 p.m.; on Sunday, Sally Slade Warner, Saint Stephen's own carillonneur, will play at 2:30 p.m.; and Todd Fair of Amsterdam, The Netherlands, will play the final concert of the weekend at 7 p.m.

Carillons are the world's largest musical instruments. They are played from the clavier by means of wires and levers attached to clappers in the bells. The Cohasset Carillon is one of about 125 in the United States, and one of eight in Massachusetts.

John Taylor Bellfounders, Ltd. of Loughborough, England, performed the renovation work and cast the new bells for the carillon. The 51 original bells in the carillon were cast by the Gillett & Johnston foundry of Croyden, England between 1923 and 1927.

When that company went out of business, its tuning records and bell profiles were turned over to the Taylor foundry. These records were used to match the tuning of the new bells with the other bells in the carillon.

"The rededication of the carillon is an act of praise and gratitude," said the Rev. E. Clifford Cutler, rector of Saint Stephen's. "Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's glorious poem about the bells of San Blas summarizes what the rededication of the Cohasset Carillon means to the church and to the community:

... bells are the voice of the Church,
They have tones that touch and search
The hearts of young and old;
One sound to all, yet each
Lends a meaning to their speech,
And the meaning is manifold."

Church hosts spring fair

There also will be a hot and cold buffet table from noon to 1:30 p.m.

Mass set to honor Mary

A mass in honor of Mary, "Queen of Peace," will be celebrated at 7 p.m., Monday, May 21 at St. Ann's Church.

St. Mary of the Assumption's Respect Life prayer group holds a weekly service at 7 p.m. each Monday at St. Ann's. All are welcome.

How much money is planted in your yard ?

Count it up. A couple of flowering shrubs, a hedge and a maple tree from the nursery could amount to as much as $600. You've probably made a considerable investment, in plants alone. A living investment that needs attention to grow.

Take this little quiz, to find out if your landscaping investment is increasing or decreasing in value:

- ☐ Are any of your bushes yellowish?
- ☐ Do any of your trees or shrubs have dead or dying branches?
- ☐ Did your flowering shrubs fail to bloom as well as expected ?
- ☐ Are insects nibbling holes in the leaves ?
- ☐ Are the leaves and branches sparse or stunted ?

If you answered yes to any of these, call us for a free , no-obligation survey and price quote. Our ornamental tree and shrub inspection, pest control and fertilization programs are designed to promote healthy and attractive plants. And healthy landscaping means a healthy increase in your property's value.

Youth soccer teams shine in coastal contest

By Carol Riley
Special to the Mariner

Some stunning victories took place on soccer fields around the South Shore this past weekend in Coastal Youth Soccer League contests.

Cohasset teams played brilliantly. Here are the results, as reported by team coaches:

The undefeated Boys Under 14-1 squad scored a 2-1 triumph over Scituate in an away game last Saturday, with goals by Jeremiah Stevenson and Ryan Freeman. Also contributing to this win were Jim Magner, Mike Shields and Eric Henry.

Boys Under 12-1 team tied Hingham after being down 0-2 at the half. Brett MacQuarrie scored a goal on a penalty kick; the other goal was scored by Greg Neal. Matt O'Connor was strong on offense, while Matt Belsen played outstanding defense.

Boys Under 10-1 team swept Kingston 4-0 on home turf, with goals by Derrick Bugley, Greg Bilton and Nate Cotter (2). Morgan Sandell was super at halfback and Andrew Singleton played fine defense, according to coach, Paul Cotter.

Boys Under 10-3 squad whipped Kingston last week 4-0, with goals by Patrick Murphy (3) and Dennis Rooney. Aiding this win were Chris Olney, Elliott Noon and Cliff Tremblay.

In girls soccer action the Girls Under 19-2 team overpowered Middleboro 2-1 with goals by Heidi Lincoln and Colleen McClarey. Outstanding saves were made by goalkeeper, Marcella Gillis and defenseman Katie Beggan. This fine team holds a 5-0 win/loss record and is looking forward to going to Amherst for the state championships.

Girls Under 14-2 team lost a 3-1 heartbreaker to Plymouth on their field. Molly Hamill, who according to coach, Nino D'Urso, "is the most improved player on the team," scored the lone goal. Caitlin Connolly and Jill DuMoulin were superior at midfield.

Girls Under 12-1 team scored another victory, this time over Plymouth. Final score: 3-1, with goals by Megan Fahey, Tammy Matland and Kelley O'Donnell. Assists on two goals from Ashley Brister and a single assist from Catie Campbell. Lena Roukounakis was outstanding as stopper and excellent defensive play was shown by fullbacks Lauren DeVito and Laura Slotnick.

Girls Under 10-2 had a scoreless game with Girls Under 10-3, with goalkeeper Sara Eaton-Bruce effective in stopping a penalty shot. Jill Magner and Sarah Senechal played great at forward. Last Sunday the Girls Under 10-2 lost to Duxbury 4-0, with Sara Eaton-Bruce again playing goal. Alexandra Derosa and Megan Connolly played an outstanding game at forward and Annie Palone did well defensively.

Lacrosse is the new hit sport at high school

By David McKee
Mariner staff

There's a new hit sport at Cohasset High School and its called lacrosse.

Sure soccer is big and basketball has a lot of history, but lacrosse is on the rise.

Last year in the program's first year, the Skippers finished up at 4-3.

This year they have already compiled a 4-2 mark against private and public high schools.

"The game is a heck of a lot of fun," coach Ken Ekberg said. "It's a combination of soccer, hockey and basketball and is always full of action and excitement. Take a sport like baseball, where you can play for hours and get only a couple minutes of intense effort. Here the game is always moving and that's why it is fun to play."

Last year 25 kids came out for the team, according to Ekberg. But this year there were more than 50.

"It is very much a skill game," Ekberg said of the sport. "When you start out you can't really catch and throw the ball and you end up getting tackled. But as you keep playing, you develop more skills and eventually can move the ball around pretty good and even run plays and things. The more you play, the more fun it is."

In recent action the Skippers dropped a 7-6 loss to Sandwich and won a 9-0 victory over Cape Cod Academy.

The Skippers have wins so far this year over Wellesley by a score of 9-2, Falmouth Academy by a score of 7-1, the Hingham Junior Varsity by a score of 5-1 and the most recent 9-0 blanking of Cape Cod Academy.

Against Sandwich the Skippers lost a heartbreaker as they saw a one-goal lead disappear in the final minutes of action.

Junior goalie Travis Coley got the loss as he surrendered seven goals.

"He has been great in net for us all year," Ekberg said. "It is not unusual to see 14 or 15 goals being scored in a lacrosse game, but he, along with (senior) Jason Cameron, have anchored our defense and that has been a key to our success."

Eighth grader Charlie Endriss led the Skipper offense as he collected two goals.

"This was our best game of the year despite the fact that we lost," Ekberg said. "They beat us earlier in the year 7-1 and this time out we led by a goal with a few minutes left and almost pulled it off. That show how much we have improved."

The Skippers took out their frustration with the loss on Cape Cod Academy as they won 9-0.

"We controlled the game right from the start," Ekberg said. "I think our athletic ability spelled the difference. They had some talented players, but it was not enough against our team. We had too many good athletes for them to handle."

Endriss, Reidy and Marks were the offensive stars for the Skippers against Cape Cod Academy.

Each had two goals and two assists on the day.

Gallagher and Whittaker added goals and even Coley, who started in the net and was later moved up front, had a goal.

Eighth grader Brendon DeVoe ended up in net for the Skippers and recorded the shutout.

"This was a good win for us," Ekberg said. "A lot of kids got to play and we were able to score some goals."

The Skippers face the Hingham Junior Varsity and then end the year with Boston College High.

"The interest is there in the town," Ekberg said. "Originally the kids came to me and we worked on getting a program together. We receive no funding so it is all volunteer. But I would say it has been a great success. We have some very talented athletes on our squad. We have six kids who played on the championship soccer teams for example. We will only continue to improve. The kids really work hard and put in the effort at our practices and in our games."

Clip-a-long race set

The Norwell Men's Club is sponsoring the annual 4-Mile Clip-A-Long road race, to be held at the Norwell Junior High School, Route 123,Norwell, Saturday, June 23.

The race will start at 10 a.m. Registration will begin at 9:30 a.m. at the Junior High School.

Awards will be presented to the top three finishers in each category. Tee shirts will be available to the first 100 participants.

There is a small fee for the race. The funds raised are used for high school scholarships and other community services sponsored by the Norwell Men's Club.

Outdoor golf lessons planned

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting registrations for spring outdoor golf classes to be taught by professional golfer and instructor, Chuck Young.

Classes will be offered for beginners and advanced beginners Thursday evenings from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. or 6:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. and Friday mornings from 8 to 9 a.m. or 9 to 10 a.m.

All classes will be held on Cohasset Common in front of Cohasset Town Hall, and each class is one hour each week for a five-week session.

The fee for the five-week program is $40 per person, and checks for payment must be payable to: Town of Cohasset.

Pre-registration is essential for this program. You may pre-register by calling the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791.

Participants who do not have access to golf clubs should indicate this at the time of registration so the department can make arrangements to loan clubs for the class.

All classes are limited in size, hence, the department encourages immediate registration. Non-Cohasset residents will be accepted on a space available basis.

The department also is planning a junior golf program, which will be offered this summer to children and teens, and details will be forthcoming in the near future.

Camp sign-ups coming

This year's Cohasset Recreation Department's summer playground day-camp program will begin Monday, July 2.

It will operate seven seeks, through Friday, Aug. 17.

Registrations will be held during the week of June 18, and further details will be announced shortly.

Any parents or adults interested in volunteering to assist the program staff either should indicate this at the time of registration or should call the recreation office at 383-6791. The department is looking for assistance for field trips, arts and crafts, and other special activities.

The department also invites anyone with a special talent, hobby or interest, to share their talents with the children (aged 3 through 12).

The recreation department also is seeking items for use for the playground programs. Should you be willing to donate any of these, or any other items, there will be a box at the recreation office and at the playground for collections.

Suggested items for donation include: art supplies, playground balls, children's books, book shelves, boxes, children's games, board games, card games, outdoor toys and games, sporting equipment, art paper, newspaper, hoses, sprinklers, water games, wading pools, beach balls, balloons, posters, kites, tackle box for first aid.

Each summer, the Cohasset Recreation Department selects a small number of volunteer staff and junior counselors to assist the summer staff on a daily basis at the playground.

Youngsters between the ages of 10 to 16 who feel they might be interested in this sort of volunteer work should call the recreation office at 383-6791 as soon as possible. Selections will be made Thursday, June 28, and those chosen will be required to attend a pre-camp training seminar on Friday, June 29.

Tennis lessons offered

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting telephone registrations for spring adult tennis lessons, which are scheduled to begin Wednesday and/or Thursday evenings, May 23 and 24 at the recreation commission tennis courts at Miliken Field, off Bancroft and Norfolk Roads.

Derek Lacks and Frank Willshire of the recreation department's tennis staff will conduct the class. Both Lacks and Willshire have previous tennis teaching experience, with both adult and junior tennis classes.

The fee for the five-week, one-hour-per-week classes will be $40 per person, and classes will be offered for the following ability groups at the following day/times:

Wednesday, 6 p.m. to 7 p.m. - beginners.

Wednesday, 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. - intermediates.

Thursday, 6 p.m. to 8 7 p.m. - advanced beginners.

Thursday, 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. - advanced (tournament level instruction).

Classes will be limited in size as follows: beginner and advanced beginner - six participants per class; intermediate and advanced - four participants per class.

To register for any one of the classes, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791. Both residents and non-residents will be accepted on a space available basis.

Aerobics classes open

The Cohasset Recreation Department is offering fall sessions of low-impact aerobics exercise classes, taught by Margret Watson Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 6:15 p.m. to 7:15 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall auditorium.

Sessions are conducted in eight-week cycles, and cost $40 for two weekly classes i.e.: 16 classes cost $40. However, you may join at any time, at any class, and the fee will be pro-rated based upon the number of classes per week you would like to take, and the number of weeks left in the session.

Participants should make checks payable to: Town of Cohasset.

Sessions continue on a year-round basis and are structured in order that those at all levels of proficiency may participate comfortably.

Watson has taught for the recreation department for the past decade. The program is open to both residents and non-residents of all ages, men and women. Early registration is advised because of popularity of the program classes tend to fill quickly.

For further details, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791.

Motorists warned to be cautious of approaching horses

Registrar of Motor Vehicles Robert Hutchinson, Jr. is informing motorists to exercise caution when approaching horses on the commonwealth's roadways.

Operating with caution in the vicinity of horses should become second nature for operators—just as it should be to stop at a red light or for a school bus.

Urban motorists frequently approach pleasure horses as they would police horses or horses with carriages.

Although accustomed to working in heavily congested areas, even these horses can panic when startled by loud noises or sudden movements.

Most horses used for pleasure, however, are used to quiet, rural roads with little traffic and may be easily scared. Extra care should be exercised when encountering a horse ridden on a country road.

Soccer camp registration forms at town hall

Now is the time to register for either the South Shore or V.I.P. soccer camps if you are interested in attending summer soccer camp in Cohasset this August.

Both camps and all four camp programs are filling quickly. To be assured of participation, immediate registration is advised as the number of those who may participate will be limited.

Registration forms appear in both camps' brochures, if you do not have a brochure/application form, you may obtain one at the window outside of the recreation department office in the lobby of Cohasset Town Hall's new wing at any time.

To register, simply complete the form (one form for each child) in the appropriate brochure, make out a check, payable to Town of Cohasset, for the $40 deposit (except $15 for the V.I.P. ABC Program), and either drop it off at the recreation office or mail it to: Cohasset Recreation Dept., Town Hall, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Camp programs are as follows:

100 residents petition against new cemetery

Although a study committee estimated Cohasset will run out of gravesites within two years, some residents are less than anxious to see a new cemetery built in their backyard.

Neighbors of the proposed cemetery at Smith Place and Pleasant Lane gathered at least 100 signatures on a petition opposing development of the new cemetery.

Linda Keller of 2 Cushing Drive presented the petition to selectmen May 21, telling them "there is widespread support for investigating a little further and not just rushing into something."

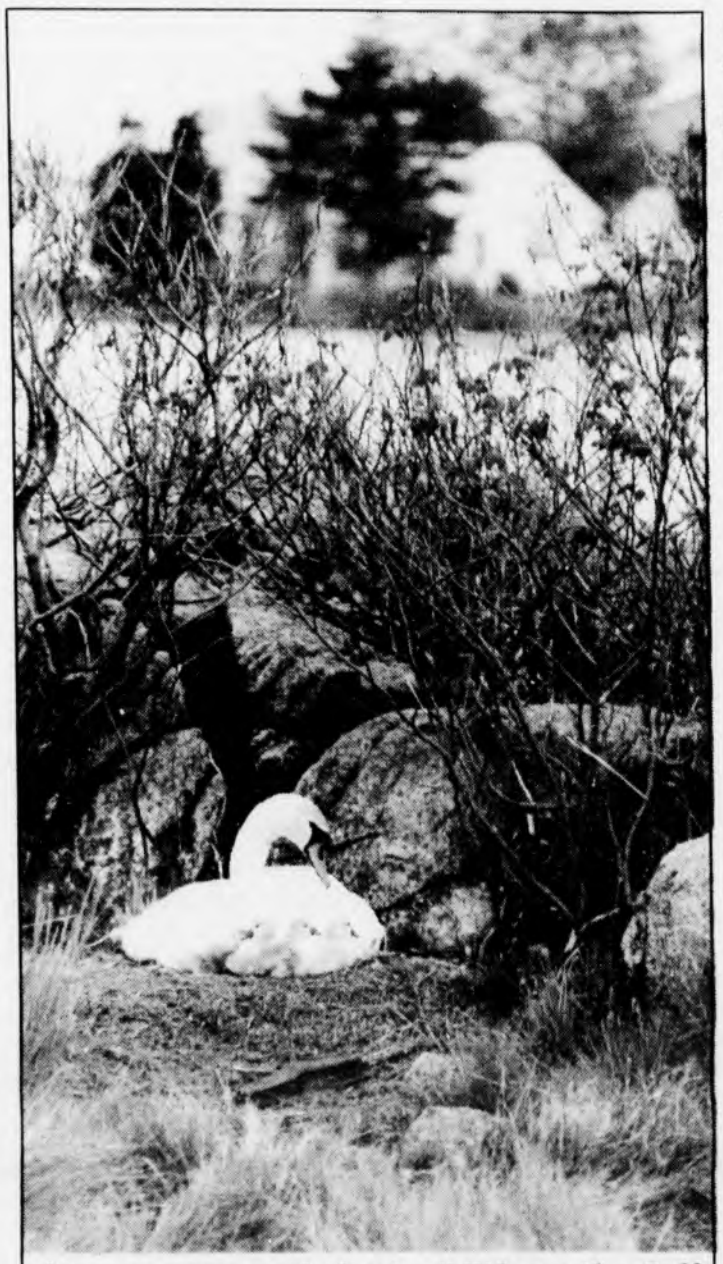
The petition requests expansion of the cemetery committee, exploration of other sites and cost estimates for development of each site, a thorough accounting of current gravesites that may be available to the town, and a feasibility study of increased use of cremation and burial of the ashes in a columbarium.

At the April town meeting, selectmen requested an indefinite postponement of an article authorizing a $100,000 loan for the first phase of cemetery construction. Selectmen wanted to give the cemetery committee time to respond to concerns about the location.

At that time, Keller's husband, Ralph Kidder, raised objections about the inadequacy of cost comparisons with other sites and encroachment on wetlands.

The proposed expansion of Beechwood Cemetery will meet town needs, at least temporarily, while an acceptable permanent solution is sought.

Selectmen satisfied one item on the petition by expanding the cemetery study committee by three members. The committee will have five members.



New members of the study committee are Nancy Snowdale, 52 Mill Lane; Gerard Deveney, 95 Pleasant St.; and Jane Hamilton, 244 Beechwood St. The selectmen also named former selectmen chairman Burt Pratt as a consultant.

The petition asks the committee to report their findings and recommendations at the April 1991 town meeting.

The cemetery study committee will hold an open meeting for public discussion of the issues and concerns at 7:30 p.m. May 31 in town hall.

In other business, the selectmen:

• Voted to disband the hunting control committee and the Straits Pond management committee. Both committees are inactive.

Are you concerned about wildlife on the Gulf River? You can learn more about it at the Gulf Association's next meeting June 13. (See Page 2 for details).

• Appointed Ernest J. Sullivan as a non-voting retired employee representative to the health insurance advisory committee.

• Accepted, with regret, the resignation of David Chittim from the South Shore Regional School District Committee.

• Noted that more than 40 new and reappointed members of boards and committees have yet to be officially sworn in. The selectmen requested all such members see Town Clerk Frances Marks for the ceremony.

Selectmen sign training contract with hospital

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Eighteen months ago Cohasset voted to purchase defibrillation equipment and train firefighter/EMTs in life support services. On May 21, selectmen tentatively approved a contract with South Shore Hospital to provide the training.

Fire Chief Dan Brock characterized the agreement as an "intent to participate" rather than a binding contract. He said if the document was signed and delivered the week of May 21, the training program would start the first of July.

Selectmen agreed Cohasset needed to provide residents with better life support services, but worried about some of the provisions in the contract.

"I am concerned about the contract implications for the eight firefighters who are not EMTs," Selectman Diana Kornet said.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby singled out two provisions as particularly troublesome.

The first provision requires Cohasset to increase coverage by "at least one EMT credentialed at the enhanced Life Support Level" from 12 hours per day for 365 days per year to 24 hour coverage within one year.

The second provision commits Cohasset to participate in the development of a paramedic Advanced Life Support system, preferably on a regionalized basis.

Gjesteby wanted to review the agreement with the personnel committee before signing.

Selectman Ned Tebbets wanted detailed information about the incremental costs of the project and time demands on staff as a result of participation in the defibrillation training, while Selectman Jane Goedecke expressed concern about the amount of paperwork to be processed.

Brock countered that this is merely a tentative proposal and Cohasset retains the right to get out of the program with 60 days notice after getting in to the training program. He also assured the selectmen that once the formal proposal has been drafted he could tack on the information about hours and costs.

"It's the greatest thing for saving lives," Selectman Chairman Rocco Laugelle said. "All I hear is money . . .money . . . Let's think about the residents of our town."

In the end, Laugelle's arguments and Brock's assurance that this merely signalled Cohasset's intent to look at the formal proposal swayed the board. The selectmen approved the agreement unanimously.

Selectmen also tackled Brock's contract negotiations again, but were unable to come to a resolution. They plan to review the proposed contract and discuss it again May 28.

Brock's contract expired 18 months ago and the town has been unable to negotiate a new contract since that time.

"This is a contract that's been dragging on too long," Laugelle said.

Issues to be resolved center on provisions for appointment of a temporary deputy chief in the absence of the fire chief, applicability of the salary ratio and the town's share of health insurance benefits.

Chris McElroy soars to Eagle rank in Cohasset Boy Scout Troop 28

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Chris McElroy will graduate from Cohasset High School June 3. Eight days later he will become an Eagle Scout.

"Chris is what scouting is all about," Scoutmaster Earle Bestick said about him. "He is a wonderful boy — young man, really — to work with.

"I just can't say enough good things about him."

McElroy has been working toward this day since he was a 9-year-old Cub Scout in Bayside, N.Y. Scouting was a constant in his life.

"My dad was in the army so we moved around a lot," McElroy said. Chris has been a member of troops in New York, Virginia and Massachusetts. For the past five years he's been a member of Troop 28 in Cohasset.

To become an Eagle Scout, Chris had to pass through six ranks of scouting and demonstrate his mastery of various skills and his leadership ability. Each rank required completion of community service projects.

"The higher up you go, the more you have to do," he said. "You find something that needs to be done in the community, and do it."

Some of the projects Chris worked on included cleaning the town dump and roadways, painting buildings, and completing erosion prevention projects for scout camps.

"It takes a lot of time and commitment," he said.

Would-be Eagle Scouts choose their own final project. Chris tackled the chore of rehabilitating 50 or 60 secondhand filing cabinets the town of Cohasset bought.

Chris removed rust, primed the metal and repainted the cabinets. He estimates it took him more than 100 hours. Burt Pratt, former selectmen chairman, supervised the project.

"He is a very conscientious boy," Pratt said. "He carried it all the way through with really very little supervision.

"He spent far more time on the job than was actually required for his project. "

But scouting is definitely not all work and no play, according to Chris.

"I enjoy the activities," he said. "We go on a lot of trips.

"I get away from home for a weekend," he joked.

In addition to summer camp, Chris attended a national jamboree in Fort Hill, Va. Scouts must apply for the limited campers hips at the jamborees.

Septic system draws fire

The septic system at the town-owned duplex on Government Island gave selectmen more trouble May 21.

Selectmen voted to pay Ernest W. Branch, Inc. $1,275 for designing the system previously authorized. Selectmen will ask the advisory committee to transfer an identical sum from the reserve fund to cover the expense.

"I want to register some consternation about why design figures were not included originally," Selectman Jane Goedecke complained.

Goedecke did not relish going to the advisory board for transfer of more money from the reserve fund to cover the new bill.

"The work has to be done," Selectman Diana Kornet said.

Executive Secretary Greg Doyon told selectmen most of the cost overruns were caused by the location of the work and the existence of ledge. Buying fill and trucking it in to the site has been expensive, he explained.

The cost overruns might have been more palatable if the rents were closer to market rate and if they were actually being paid, Goedecke said.

Selectmen said tenants claimed they were withholding rent payments because repairs have not been made.

Goedecke supported the repair work, but requested the town conduct an analysis of rental property in Cohasset to determine a fair market rent for the duplex.

Early release day

May 24 will be an early release day in the Cohasset Public Schools. There will be no afternoon kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

SCHOOL	BUSES DEPART
Junior/Senior High School	12:00 p.m.
Deer Hill School	12:40 p.m.
Joseph Osgood School	12:50 p.m.

Lunch will be served in the elementary schools and food service will be available at the Junior/Senior high school.

This early release day has been approved by the Cohasset School Committee to allow the staff to review curriculum and to prepare for accreditation.

766 screening planned

The Massachusetts Special Education Law (Chapter 766) provides for the screening of three and four year old children whose parents feel may have a special need which might interfere with their future educational progress.

The screening process includes a parent interview as well as a health, vision, hearing, motor and language screening.

Parents who feel that their child might have such a special need should contact: John Leary, Jr., Director of Student Services, at 383-6104

What's open, closed on Memorial Day

- liquor stores are closed, but taverns and bars will be open
- banks are closed, as are stock markets

Wildlife lecture June 13

Have you ever wondered. . .

•where the Buffleheads come from and where they go?

•whether eels have left the Gulf forever?

•if there still is salt hay in the marsh?

•whether trenching hinders or helps mosquito propagation?

Questions like these and many others related to wildlife in the Gulf River will be addressed in an illustrated lecture by Robert N. Buchsbaum, Ph.D., coastal ecologist with the Massachusetts Audubon Society.

The meeting will be held Wednesday, June 13 at 7:30 p.m. at the Parish House of the Unitarian Church on Cohasset Common. It is free of charge and open to all.

Dr. Buchsbaum is an expert in salt marsh ecology. He conducts applied research in marine and coastal habitats and provides technical support and public education on environmental issues. His field work has included vegetation mapping and fish surveys in salt marshes of Massachusetts and New Jersey, collection of plants and observation of associated marine animals in eelgrass meadows, and assessment of water quality impacts on waterfowl in urban harbors.

If you wish to attend, please let the association know. Drop a card to P.O. Box 140, North Scituate, MA 02060, or call John Hartshorne at 383-0317.

VFW posts phenominal growth

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Cohasset is rather like a small frog pond. On the other hand, Cohasset's Veterans of Foreign Wars Post is a very big deal.

The Post is only four years old, but its growth has been phenomenal. They organized in March 1986 with just 11 members. Today, there are 197 veterans who belong to Post 9146.

That growth earned them first place in the district, second place in the state and fourth place in the world, according to Donald Staszko.

Staszko and his fellow veterans attribute the burgeoning membership to their commander, Ralph Perroncello.

Perroncello returns the compliment.

"I attribute all our success to the members," he said, "especially the officers who are very very good."

Perroncello explained the reason for the growth of the Post is really very simple.

"When I find out a person is a vet, I'm not ashamed to go over and ask them to join," he said. "It makes them feel good to be asked to join the VFW."

Seventy-five percent of the members of the Post are new members or had belonged to another post in the past, but dropped out.

Several of the members were born and raised in Cohasset, but now live elsewhere. Perroncello said there are many members from California, New Jersey and Florida.

Membership hinges on serving in the armed forces on foreign soil.

In addition to veterans of World Wars I and II, Korea and Vietnam, veterans who served in Grenada, Lebanon, Libya, the Persian Gulf and Panama are eligible for membership. Post 9146 has quite a few Vietnam veterans and some who served in Lebanon and Grenada.

Perroncello reaches out to younger veterans whenever he can.

"I'm trying to see if I can get a lot more younger veterans signed up," he said. "They're the ones who will take over from the World War II vets who are getting older."

There are no members who served in World War I. Perroncello said it's getting more and more unusual to find the old-timers in any Post.

Perroncello is proud of the accomplishments of his Post, but not everything is ideal.

"This is an outstanding Post, but we don't have a place of our own," he said.

The Post holds their meetings at the American Legion on the third Tuesday of the month. Perroncello is grateful to the Legion.

"I can't say enough for the Legion, but we'd like a home of our own."

With a place to call thei. own, the VFW could provide more services and programs for members. Even without a home base, they aren't idle.

Ralph Perroncello

The Post donates two scholarships of $500 a piece to Cohasset High School. One scholarship is given to a boy and the other to a girl.

They sponsor a Little League team, donate flags to various organizations and provide charitable contributions. One project Perroncello singled out was the gift certificates the VFW gives to needy families at Christmastime.

And, of course, the VFW devotes a lot of energy to Memorial Day activities. This year, Memorial Day will be held Monday, May 28.

The Post decorates the gravesites of all deceased veterans. Perroncello said this year they will distribute more than 600 flags.

All the members are expected to turn out for the cemetery visitations and parade. The VFW marches to each cemetery and honor roll with color guard and firing squad to pay tribute to Cohasset's veterans. Perroncello said the veterans will begin at Legion headquarters at 8:30 a.m.

McElroy soars to Eagle rank...

He'd love to be part of the next world jamboree. The last world jamboree was held in Australia several years ago.

Scouting enabled him to learn skills and do things he might not otherwise have experienced.

"My family doesn't camp at all," he said. "And I really enjoy that."

Chris is an accomplished camper. He's proud of the fact that he can go camping in the pouring rain and not get wet.

When he talks about camping, he's not talking posh facilities with heated cabins and hot showers.

"I went to Philmont Scout Camp in New Mexico," he said. "You go on a trek for 10 days and carry everything you need in a backpack."

It's definitely a survival trip — his group hiked 80 to 100 miles from the base. He also went white water rafting while at Philmont.

Treking through the desert was one extreme — winter camping was the other.

This winter, Chris went to New Hampshire as an assistant scoutmaster to a group of Cohasset scouts. A Norwegian exchange scout leader trained the boys in survival techniques for one day. The second day they got up at 7 a.m. and skied into the wilderness.

The first task was to set up camp. They didn't pitch tents, though. They shoveled snow.

"You pile snow into a mound taller than you are and let it sit for a few hours," he said. "Then you dig it out and live in there."

He said the night he spent in his snow fort was "a lot of fun." He also said he was his only source of heat.

"Once you're properly dressed, you're not cold," he claimed. "Most of the time you're hot."

His mother knew where he'd be spending his night on this trip, he said.

"She always lets me try things."

Although neither of his parents had a background in scouting, they've become active through Chris's involvement.

Of all the skills he's developed through scouting, he said his favorite merit badges are the swimming and waterfront ones.

Earning a life-saving merit badge is an Eagle Scout requirement. Chris earned badges in rowing and canoeing, too.

"It's fun," he said. I learned what to do and what not to do. I learned how to refloat a canoe when it capsizes.

He was stymied when asked which merit badge was least enjoyable. After giving it some thought, he singled out the personal management badge.

"It was the very last requirement to be an Eagle Scout," he said. "It was at the end of the path blocking me."

He also confessed that although he could build a camp fire without matches and rustle up a meal, cooking is "not my personal specialty."

Chris already is passing on the skills he learned through scouting. Since he turned 18, he's been volunteering his services as an assistant scoutmaster. He plans to keep doing it even while attending Boston University.

"I enjoy helping out," he said. "I'll help out with the troop if I have free time on weekends and vacations."

As demanding as the path to Eagle Scout has been, Chris had plenty of time to pursue other activities. He was a member of the varsity football team, lacrosse club team, varsity track team and an award-winning member of the debate team at C.H.S.

As much as he's looking forward to his graduation and Eagle Scout Court of Honor, Chris is already on to his next project

"I'm looking for a summer job," he said. "I'd like to find something in Boston so I can have a job during the school year."

Selectmen withhold payment for transfer station

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Selectmen voted to withhold payment of $10,200 of the $25,264 balance owed to Sciaba Bros., contractors for the transfer station. The action was taken to ensure completion of several items at the landfill.

According to Anson Whealler, chairman of the transfer station building committee, the contractor must repair scratches in the paint caused by rolled up fencing leaned against the building, provide drawings showing how the building was actually built, and complete the third wall of the baffle in the trailer pit.

The remaining item on the punch list is to cover any damage from new leaks in the building.

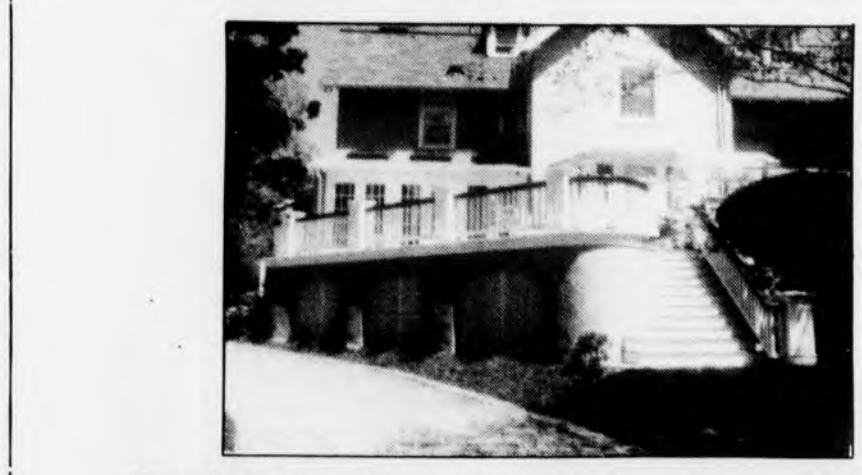
According to Whealler, the contractor failed to properly attach a panel on the left side of building's front. After a snowstorm, the building leaked.

Whealler said the contractor has been unable to duplicate the conditions that led to the leak so it is impossible to say if the situation has been fully corrected.

According to selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle, the bill will be paid in full when the job is completed to the satisfaction of the engineer and the committee.

"The end is in sight," Selectman Diana Kornet remarked.

"Maybe," Whealler replied.



In other business, the selectmen:

• Approved New England Telephone's request to install a connector terminal and 45 feet of underground conduit at a town-owned triangle of land at Jerusalem Road and Red Gate Lane. Approval is subject to the terminal being appropriately landscaped at the expense of the telephone company.

• Agreed to hold a hearing on a request by Bert Paley to install a blinking yellow light at the intersection at 399 Jerusalem Road. Paley told selectmen he would pay for the light if the town approved it.

Sailing club embarks on 30th season

The Cohasset Sailing Club began its 30th season recently with the election of officers and the return of the club's floats to Cohasset Harbor.

Officers for the 1990 season include Ray Kasperowicz, commodore; Roger Crafts, vice commodore; Jeff Bettinger, treasurer, and Robert Davenport, clerk.

According to commodore Kasperowicz, membership applications for the 1990 season should be returned by June 1 to avoid paying the $10 late charge. Applications recently were mailed to town residents, however, you may obtain additional forms at the harbor master's office, the town library and the recreation commission office at town hall. You also may obtain forms from membership chairman, Kevin O'Connor, 383-1290.

Junior training classes begin Monday, June 25.

The Cohasset Sailing Club is a non-profit organization founded in 1960 and open to any town resident. It offers a complete program of sailing instruction with six levels of training from junior beginner to adult intermediate.

Junior sailors can choose from four levels of instruction based on age and sailing ability. Classes are held for two hours three days a week, and include classroom instruction on seamanship and in-the-boat instruction on sail handling, docking and racing.

Juniors do not need sailing experience, however, they must have completed the fourth grade by June 1990 or be at least 10 years old by Labor Day 1990.

Adult training is scheduled for three hours on Saturday for beginners and three hours on Sunday for intermediates.

For the racing family, the Stanton Series allows parents and juniors to share racing competition on Wednesday evenings.

All instruction takes place in the club's fleet of 10, 15-foot Mercurys and six turnabouts.

In addition to sailing instruction, club membership allows free use of the boats anytime they are not being used for classes. Generally this is after 4 p.m. weekdays and after noon on weekends. Dingy space also is available to members.

This soon will be a familiar site, as the sailing club begins its 30th season.

Ambler reception planned

A "meet the candidate" reception honoring state senatorial candidate Robert Ambler is scheduled for Friday, June 1, at 7:30 p.m. at the Hingham Community Center, 70 South Street, Hingham Square.

John Pitts, C.E.O. of Pitts Plumbing Co., and chairman of the Plumbers for Ambler Committee is organizing the event.

Pitts said, "We are planning a fun evening for all, as well as the opportunity for folks to informally talk over the issues with Bob Ambler. Everyone's invited, Democrats, Independents, Republicans — everyone."

There will be entertainment, hors d'oeuvres and door prizes. For further information, call Mr. Pitts at 335-0925 or call vice chairperson Julie Rodick at 337-8538.

Ambler pans state on CHI

State Rep. Robert Ambler (D-Weymouth) condemned the state for its handling of the siting process for the proposed Clean Harbors, Inc. hazardous waste incinerator.

Ambler's statement came in the wake of an announcement by the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs that the Clean Harbors supplemental environmental review had met preliminary approval.

"The local assessment committees have been so disadvantaged in this siting process, while the proponents have been allowed to steamroll right over them," Ambler said.

Ambler and several other South Shore legislators have made numerous attempts to halt the siting process only to have their initiatives killed in the Senate. "We will continue to fight this proposal on the legislative level and will attempt to attach language to the FY '91 budget which will bring some semblance of fairness to this matter," Ambler added.

While he agreed with the state's environmental chief that the siting process is faulty in that the decision as to site suitability came so late in the process, he questioned the administrations' sincerity.

"The administration has had ample opportunity to correct the inequities in this process, only to turn their backs on the anti-Clean Harbors forces on the South Shore. I don't think that the state's effort to accelerate the site suitability determination is designed to benefit the residents of the affected communities," he said.

Members of the South Shore legislative delegation all have denounced the East Braintree site as one unsuitable for this type of health and environmental hazard.

Flynn backs budget

Rep. William J. Flynn, Jr., candidate for state senator in the Norfolk/Plymouth district, made the following remarks regarding his voting for the 7/12th's budget on May 15.

"I was one of only two Democrats who voted for the 7/12th's budget so called on May 15, because it was a sincere, credible attempt to balance the FY '91 budget and without the necessity of any new taxes including the $1.3 billion tax package that passed the House of Representatives last week, but without my vote.

"This 7/12th's budget had many excellent restructuring provisions and made good fiscal sense.

"It was a serious attempt to put the fiscal brakes on an administration that has shown no propensity at all to curtail its insatiable spending ways, even when confronted with a serious fiscal crisis. Moreover, it would avoid the real possibility of spending all or a large portion of a 12 months budget in a seven-month period, thus leaving an incoming administration in January 1991 with the need or excuse for yet more taxes.

Moreover, I think it makes great sense to make the budgetary cycle coterminous with the governor's four-year term, because it lets a new administration start with a fresh slate. Finally the 7/12ths budget had many excellent restructuring reforms such as:

a) Encouraging people to take early retirement and reducing our work force by another 4,000 workers;

b) Cutting "07" accounts;

c) Reinstating legislative oversight of fees, etc., so that we can reduce fees where a reduction is called for;

d) Privatization of certain state functions;

e) Tax incentives for home care and co-payments on optional medicaid benefits so that we can try to get a handle on their cost;

f) Repeal of Universal Health Care, not because it is not a worthy goal but because we have not yet figured out how to fund it properly.

"We are dealing with a real fiscal crisis in this state and pride of authorship should not carry the day but rather the merits of the proposal should be the standard by which we legislate.

I voted for the 7/12ths budget because it was a real opportunity to pass a partial FY '91 budget without the necessity to raise taxes again to the tune of 1.3 billion dollars. I believe I made the right vote and the responsible vote in this regard."

McDonald opposes hike

Brian McDonald, Weymouth Democratic candidate for the Norfolk and Plymouth state senate seat, speaking at a coffee at the home of Michael Boluch of Scituate this week, said he is opposed to the income tax hike passed by the House and sent to the state senate last week.

McDonald said he opposes the income tax increase because it would place an unfair burden on middle income taxpayers.

The income tax, he said, is regressive and most harmful to low and middle income citizens.

"If taxes are going to be increased, then it should be done in a way that is fair to all the people of the commonwealth.

"The income tax is the least equitable way," he said. "It should, at the very least, be accompanied by an exemption for married couples filing jointly and making less than $40,000 and for single taxpayers who are heads of households and making less than $20,000," McDonald said.

McDonald also suggested that it would be fairer and more equitable to consider the sales tax as an alternative to the income tax. "The sales tax is more equitable than the income tax.

"Because food, clothing, medical supplies and other necessities are not taxed, it's less burdensome for the vast majority of Massachusetts taxpayers. In addition, sales tax is derived from those who are from out of state as well as from residents," he said.

"Obviously, the current crisis in state finances highlights the need for a total restructuring of state government and the delivery of services at both the state and local level.

Guilifoyle nominated for business award

The National Awards jury of the Freedoms Foundation has received three nominations naming Dick Guilfoyle of Cohasset to receive their "1991 Businessman Award."

Smithsonian magazine. The National Flag Foundation, and The Newcomen Society all named Guilfoyle as their nominee for next year's commendation, citing his efforts in helping America's schoolchildren to better appreciate the origins of our nation's freedom.

Before he retired in 1988 as president of The Sturges Corp., his firm placed 50 full-size authentic replicas of America's Liberty Bell at prominent locations across the nation. Under his direction, arrangements were made through chambers of commerce, bicentennial committees, and corporate sponsors for the installation of these symbolic bells. They were cast by the Whitechapel foundry of London, makers of the original bell, back in 1752.

Guilfoyle's company also placed thousands of replicas of the famous Paul Revere/Old North Church lantern, and the renowned Independence Hall Inkstand (used to sign the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution), on display in schools, libraries, institutions, museums, and government offices throughout the USA.

The firm also designed numerous "commemoratives" for non-profit organizations, including the United States Capital Historic Society, the John F. Kennedy Library, and the Sons of the American Revolution.

For the past 42 years, the Freedoms Foundation has recognized individuals and organizations who have made significant and positive contributions toward the strengthening of our free society. The awardees will be honored at a special ceremony in February, 1991.

Previous awardees of Freedoms Foundation have included such notables as John Glenn, Paul Harvey, George Foreman, Eric Hoffer, James Schlesinger, Dr. Wernher Von Braun, John Wayne, Alexander Solzhenitsyn, Bob Hope, Patrick Buchannan, Stan Musial, as well as others representing a cross-section of leadership from the business, educational, entertainment and civic communities.

Japanese students adjust to life in our foreign land

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Three thousand miles is a long way from home. For 30 Japanese teenagers who will visit Scituate this summer, the greatest distance to cross will be the language and cultural barrier.

Maureen Campbell knows they'll make it.

Campbell is the teacher-coordinator for the Scituate program of the Cultural Homestay Institute. The non-profit intercultural exchange program has been operating in Scituate for 10 years.

Families in Scituate and Cohasset host the students during their three-week stay. So far nine families have signed up. Campbell hopes more will call her soon — the students will arrive July 30.

Volunteering to be a host family is a piece of cake, according to Campbell. Unlike some other exchange programs, families are not expected to entertain their guests morning, noon and night. The program is perfectly suited for working parents.

Students attend classes in English as a second language four mornings a week. Afternoons and a fifth day each week are reserved for field trips. Host families are invited to participate in the trips.

Campbell hasn't finalized the itinerary, but she plans to include Plimoth Plantation, the Museum of Science, the John F. Kennedy Library, the Museum of Fine Arts, the mansions of Newport, R.I., Marconi Station, Cape Cod National Seashore and the tropical rain forest exhibit at Franklin Park Zoo.

But the most important part of the stay will be in the small, day-to-day exchanges between student and host family.

While the Japanese students have studied English for three to 10 years, it is textbook English. American slang and common expressions leave them at a loss.

Campbell said students are puzzled when asked to "make your bed" or told that they will be "picked up in time for dinner." As Campbell says, if you think about the literal meaning of the phrases, it's no wonder the teens are mystified.

Everyday language isn't the only surprise.

American kitchens, bedrooms and bathrooms are surprisingly different fromthe Japanese counterparts. Baking chocolate chip cookies or brownies is totally alien — they don't bake in Japan.

Casual socializing is another new experience for Japanese teens, Campbell said.

"Sleepovers and dropping by to visit friends are Western customs," she said. Japanese students get up very early and have a long school day. Typically, they don't return home until 6 or 7 p.m., and then they have several hours of homework.

Although there are many differences, the teens share many things in common. Popular music is a major international link.

Families who have participated in the program in the past find it extremely rewarding. Some of the families have maintained a close relation. One former exchange student will be spending the summer with her old host family while she attends summer classes at a nearby college.

For more information about becoming a host family, call Maureen Campbell at 545-4268.

The party will be held from 6 to 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, May 29.

This is a new "tradition" and the sponsors hope all parents will be able to go and take pictures and enjoy the kids.

The Scouts work long and hard in their efforts to recycle and make a little money for their organization; it is a shame that someone cannot appreciate it. They keep having to spend a portion of their money repairing their building. Please, whoever you are, put a little effort into their cause. Spend your time collecting cans and present them to the Scouts instead of trying to ruin their efforts.

nations in many places of business. Proceeds from the poppy sale, will benefit homeless veterans, Veterans Hospital and disabled veterans.

Wear your badge of caring this week, purchase a poppy.

• Congratulations go to Heather Murray and Heather Najarian, both of whom recently graduated from Notre Dame Academy.

• We hear that Emily Reardon, daughter of Susan and Norbit Reardon, was wonderful last week in her solo from "Les Miserables."

Emily is a student at Thayer Academy and she, along with the Thayer Academy singers, paid tribute to Irving Berlin. We suspect that Emily will be receiving many standing ovations during her singing career.

• Cohasset should be proud of its students, and here is another reason why. 11 of them recently were inducted into the National Honor Society.

We salute Billy Baird, Melissa Cristoffel, Caleb Slotnick, Nicole Geeco, Kristen Martin, Anna Sandell, Tara Volungis, Michael Cisnerao, Sophie Redfilds, Jennifer Plante and Doug Moe.

• AFS members are looking for at least two families to host exchange students for the 1990-1991 school year.

They have two applicants right now, a boy from Sweden and a girl from France.

Both of these students would be seniors next year, and speak some English. It isn't necessary to have students of that age in your home, or any students, in order to qualify. If you would like to host a student, call Carol Beggan at 383-6473 or Mrs. Dwyer at 383-1654.

• Happy birthday to Ann Pompeo. Although the calendar says she is getting older, Ann looks younger every day. Have a great day, Ann.

• Michelle Meagher recently performed at various sites throughout New York City during a concert tour this spring.

Michelle is a soprano in the Boston University Music Organization's Coral Union. She is a sophomore at BU, majoring in English, and a 1988 graduate of Cohasset High School.

We'll bet she has lots of great stories to tell about that experience.

• Mark your calendars right now for a super day. The student council and the Friends of Cohasset Sports are going to hold a fund-raiser, selling chair shares at South Shore Music Circus and a fun fair for the whole family.

The chair shares will be sold just like the land plots, with the winner receiving $3,000.

Ed Kasses has been kind enough to offer the grounds at the circus for a fair for the whole family. Details will follow as they become available; watch for them.

• That's all folks, keep me informed of your doings and I'll be happy to write about them.

Something else to remember

On Memorial Day, the unofficial beginning of summer, many of you will be taking to the water. Yes, it's time to go boating again.

So, on this Memorial Day, when most of us take the time to remember those who fought and those who died to keep us safe and free, you might also take the time to remember something else.

You should remember the things you can do out there on the water to ensure that you and those around you will remain safe and free.

Cohasset policeman Richard Abbadessa, a member of the Bare Cove Power Squadron in Hingham, is spokesman this year for that organization's Safe Boating Week observance June 3-9.

He offered a number of tips, presented here, so that you can get an early start on your personal safe boating observance:

• When you haul your boat out of mothballs for the season, check that there is no corrosion through the hull, props, shafts, zincs, struts and bearings, or through the fastenings on wood hulls. Inspect your engine mounts, rudder and rudder-control mechanisms.

Also, make sure that your hull is clear of any restrictions, such as barnacles, marine growth and bores, and that your sea valves on through-hulls at or below the waterline are inspected regularly.

• Lightning protection—radio antennas should have transmitting type arrestors or a gap in the coil; wooden masts should have metalic fittings connected to a grounding conductor (heavy copper cable); metal masts and rigging should have the same grounding conductor leading to a hull ground plate.

• You should have an adequate number of automatic bilge pumps with manual back-up; your bilge should be clean with clear limber holes; remember to check your boat periodically — don't depend on automatic pumps.

• You should make sure your fuel system is grounded, that it's not rusty or leaking, and that the fuel tank is secure and insulated. The engine compartment should be clean and free from any flammables such as oily rags.

Also, you should have a shut-off valve both at the engine, as well as accessible in a separate compartment.

• Make sure your batteries are in non-corrosive, liquid tight containers with non-conductive covers, and that they are well secured and vented.

• You should be sure that you have an adequate number of personal flotation devices aboard, and that they are clean and sound, and accessible.

• Are your lifelines in good condition and properly secured, and are your non-skid surfaces still non-skid? Do you have a back-up anchor?

• You should check to see that you have suitable fire extinguishers accessible to the area of possible need, with at least one located above deck.

• Do you file a float plan and have adequate and up-to-date charts?

• Your guests and crew should know where the fire extinguishers, life preservers and first aid kit are, and should know how to use the radio for an emergency distress signal; they also should understand the importance of not using themselves as boat hooks or fenders.

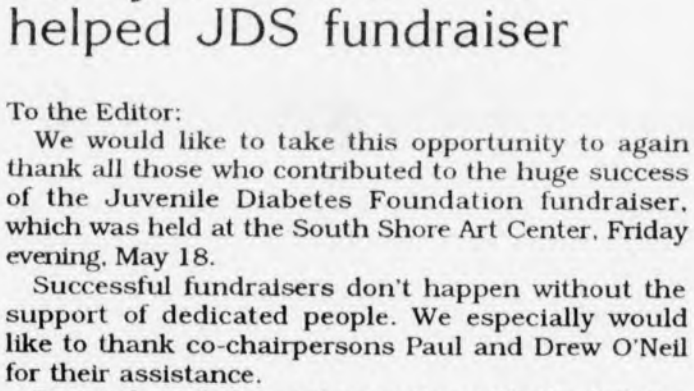
• You must carry visual distress signals unless during daylight hours: your recreational boat is less than 16 feet, you are participating in organized eventss, such as races, regattas or marine parades, you're in an open sailboat with no propulsion machinery and are less than 26 feet, or you are in a manually propelled boat. All boats should carry signals at night.

NOW FOR THE OBVIOUS

Out on the water, the Coast Guard is the police. If you're hailed, heave to so they may board your vessel; they may board and examine your vessel whether it is numbered, unnumbered or documented.

• You should know and adhere to the numbering requirements; the Coast Guard may impose a civil penalty up to $1,000 for failure to comply, failure to meet equipment requirements andfailure to report a boating accident.

And if you don't comply with the unified Inland Rules of the Road, they may slap you with a $5,000 fine.



• Improper use of the radiotelephone is a criminal offense. The use of indecent, obscene or profane language is punishable by a $10,000 fine, imprisonment for two years, or both.

You should be aware that channel 16 is a calling and distress channel and should not be used for conversation or radio checks.

• It is now a federal offense to operate a vessel while intoxicated; violators are subject to a civil fine of up to $1,000 or a criminal penalty of up to $5,000, one year imprisonment, or both.

If that doesn't scare you, consider the higher cost. Last year in the United States, 473 drunk boaters lost their lives.

For grossly negligent operation which may endanger lives or property, the operator may be fined up to $5,000, imprisoned for one year, or both.

The following constitute negligent or grossly negligent operation: operating a boat in a swimming area; operating while under the influence of drugs or alcohol; excessive speed in the vicinity of other boats or in dangerous waters; hazardous water skiing practices; bowriding, riding on seatback, gunwale or transom.

The Bare Cove Power Squadron will offer boating classes again this fall. If you would like more boating safety information, you can call the Coast Guard toll free at 1-800-368-5647 or the National Safe Boating Council at 1-800-336-BOAT.

Have a happy and safe Memorial Day.

One of the smallest senior classes in decades will celebrate its senior prom May 29.

Leahy's laud all who helped JDS fundraiser

To the Editor:

We would like to take this opportunity to again thank all those who contributed to the huge success of the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation fundraiser, which was held at the South Shore Art Center, Friday evening, May 18.

Successful fundraisers don't happen without the support of dedicated people. We especially would like to thank co-chairpersons Paul and Drew O'Neil for their assistance.

Drew's knowledge and expertise with the fashion show proved to be a great help. Friends and family of the O'Neil's and Fairclough's can be very proud of the contribution made on Drew's behalf.

We want to say a special thank you to Drew, The Hingham Conservatory of Music and all those who participated so much in our effort.

Sincerely,
Robert and Jane Leahy

Wheeler thanks co-workers who helped after fire

To the Editor:

I want to express my deepest appreciation to the employees of the town of Cohasset, and a special thanks to the people I work with at the water department.

They were all so kind and compassionate after the tragic fire in Scituate, March 26, in which my family and I lost everything.

I am proud to work with such a wonderful group of people.

A special thanks to Bill McAuliffe for starting a trust fund for my family so we could start over again.

A very special thank you goes to my mother, Betty Maree, who helped me out so much and was so loving and understanding during our tough time.

Sincerely,
Ann Maree Wheeler

Lyme Disease forum set

On Thursday, June 7, at 7:30 p.m., in a joint venture, the Norwell Visiting Nurses, Inc., the First Parish and the New Nursery Schools, will sponsor Karen Vanderhoof-Forschner, founder and president of the National Lyme Borreliosis Foundation, Inc.

Vanderhoof-Forschner, a Connecticut businesswoman, contracted Lyme Disease while pregnant. Two years later she discovered that her now-handicapped son and family pets had the disease. Karen has given up her career and donates her time to run the Foundation. This non-profit national foundation is the international leader and central coordinator of information and support on Lyme Disease and related disorders. It is the only organization devoted to prevention, education and treatment of all aspects of the disease.

Lyme disease is a serious and world wide health threat. It is only in the past decade that Lyme Disease began to be accurately diagnosed. The disease can manifest itself throughout the body — no organ is spared. Lyme diagnosis or treatment knows no season of the year. Anyone can be bitten at almost any time.

Protect your family by learning about prevention, early identification and current treatments for this important health issue.

For more information, call the Norwell Visiting Nurse Office at 659-2342. Donations for the Foundation will be accepted at the door. The program is June 7 at 7:30 p.m. at the Norwell Junior High School, Route 123, Norwell.

Join the early birds

You can join interpreter Jerry Flaherty on Saturday, June 2 from 5 a.m. to 9 a.m. for an early birders car and walking tour to see migrating species.

The early risers will leave from the Wompatuck State Park Visitors' Center in Hingham.

Birds begin migrating in early March and continue through June. The area from the coast of South America to Northern Canada is named the "Atlantic Flyway."

The Atlantic Flyway is used by about 50 different species of land-breeding birds in New England, as well as many different types of ducks.

Birds may fly singly or in groups. Some species flying in groups you may see are chimney swifts, crossbills and crows.

The program is free and accessible to the public. Wompatuck State Park is located off Route 228 in Hingham.

Swing for those unable to "Take A Swing for Someone Who Can't" is the theme of the third annual Arthritis Foundation Golf Tournament which is scheduled for Monday, June 18, at the Marshfield Country Club. All proceeds from the tournament will benefit the Arthritis Foundation in Massachusetts.

A full day of activities is planned starting with registration and buffet lunch at 11 a.m. A long drive exhibition will be conducted by Marshfield Country Club's golf pro, Jimmy Dee at noon, which will be followed by a shotgun start of the foursome best ball tournament at 12:30 p.m. Awarding of golf and door prizes and an auction will take place at dinner following the tournament.

A special feature of this year's tournament will be the awarding of 1991 Chevrolet Caprice Classic automobiles, donated by Best Chevrolet of Hingham, to all hole-in-one winners on the par three ninth hole. All car winners automatically qualify to play in the $100,000 Tournament of Aces Invitational during March in Houston, TX. The prize for making a hole-in-one at the Tournament of Aces is $100,000.

Scott Shulman, president of Best Chevrolet, said, "The Shulman family is happy to be of assistance in this worthy activity for the Arthritis Foundation and hope that many holes-in-one are scored."

Young or old; male or female, arthritis discriminates against no one. It is debilitating and crippling. The Arthritis Foundation is doing more and more to uncover its mystery, but that requires funds for research and public education.

More than ever, with the economic climate in Massachusetts being something less than torrid, the need for individuals and corporations to come forward is critical. This "Take A Swing for Someone Who Can't" golf tournament is a way to provide help while at the same time have fun.

Co-Chairmen of 1990s golf committee are Walter Erwin of Hingham and Don Greenlaw of Marshfield. Celebrity Chairman is Mike Lynch, Winchester, Channel 5 sports anchor. Members of the committee are: Steve Freyer, Danvers; Bill Huntress, Jr., Melrose; Don Kennedy, Wayland; Al Longo, Danvers; Tom Nash, Wellesley; Bob O'Brien, Hingham.

The tournament is limited to 26 foursomes. Interested parties should contact Judi Elkin at Arthritis Headquarters 617-244-1800.

Chiropractic for Health
by Dr. Debra M. Tranberg & Dr. Susan Emmer
Chiropractors
PAST TENSE
Whether caused by tension or poor posture, muscles can become so overworked that they become permanently contracted. A person feels this sort of muscular tightness when his shoulders tense up while sitting in traffic. A typist may experience contracted neck muscles as she hunches her upper body over a typewriter or keyboard. As these muscles struggle to maintain body stability, they become overwhelmed by their own waste product, lactic acid. A muscle in this state can hardly relax and thus becomes tense and weakened. Exercising such muscles may produce inflammation and pain. A more effective route to relaxation can be found in massage and manipulation. These techniques, as practiced by the chiropractor, can help remove toxins, stretch muscle fibers, and release pent-up energy.
We offer the chiropractic applications that can address the daily discomforts of life as well as those long lingering problems which have been plaguing you. For a more relaxed, comfortable, pain-free and total state of well-being, we invite you to call DR. DEBRA M. TRANBERG, SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, 80 Front St., Scituate, 545-7388, and DR. SUSAN EMMER, CHIROPRACTIC & FAMILY WELLNESS CARE, 87 Sohier St., Cohasset, 383-1330. By appointment. Workers Comp. cases and most insurance plans accepted.
P.S. Emotional tension not only affects muscles but the circulation of blood which both nourishes and cleanses tissues.

Parents share experiences

The support group for parents of pre-teens and teens sponsored by the Social Service League of Cohasset recently enjoyed an informative book review evening conducted by Betsy Detweiler, owner of the Buttonwood Book Shop in Cushing Plaza.

While sharing anecdotes and tips she learned while raising her own five boys, Detweiler introduced about 25 books covering a wide range of topics of interest to parents of this age group.

Several recently published books she recommended were Children of Fast Track Parents and I'm On Your Side.

The group also discussed samples of good books written for teens such as Growing Up Feeling Good.

The group also reviewed books on special subjects, such as Surviving the Break-up (divorce), Successful Single Parenting, and Winning Weight Loss for Teens.

The parent support group meets monthly during the school year at the homes of its members. Carolyn Housman, the social worker at the Social Service League, is the group's facilitator, and this year the topics covered were communications, anger, pressures, mood swings, losses and depression, teens and the local party scene, and setting up a "Safe Homes" program.

Cohasset recycling news . . .

By Alix White
Special to the Mariner

"It was just a drop."

Have you ever told yourself that while changing the oil in your car and some spills? Or the fuel oil tank for your heating system drips a little? Or the water faucet leaks . . . just a little, until you get your water bill and realize that you've let thousands of gallons of fresh drinking water dribble down the drain unused?

Well, that's exactly what happened at Northville Industries of Setauket, Long Island, Baird & McGuire of Holbrook, Mass., and Hooker Chemical of Buffalo, N.Y.

All were in the news this week, and it was "just a drop" that got them there.

Northville Industries of Setauket, Long Island, N.Y. discovered three years ago that for more than a decade it had a pea-sized hole in an 8-inch pipe at its storage terminal.

More than 1 million gallons of leaded gasoline dripped from that hole, infecting a 30-acre site with gasoline seven feet deep in some areas and one hundred feet below the surface.

Gasoline was floating atop an underground aquifer threatening a portion of Long Island's only source of drinking water.

Benzene, a known carcinogen and by-product of gasoline, has been seeping through people's backyards and basements, causing many families to evacuate.

Camp, Dresser, McKee, environmental engineers from Cambridge, were hired to clean up the underground spill. (We know this company here in Cohasset because they have done tests at the commercial landfill on Route 3A, Cohasset Heights Ltd.)

They have had to create technologies to clean up the underground spill. It is one thing to scoop up a floating oil spill like the Exxon Valdez; it is quite another to clean something you can't see. It has scooped the floating gas in the aquifer; it has burned off the methane gas, and it has created a water treatment system from technology used in landfills.

What is the cost for just a drip in a leaky pipe? Northville Industries has recovered 470,000 gallons of leaded gasoline at a cost of $10 million.

Many residents of the Storybook subdivision have had to move because their homes are contaminated with Benzene fumes. Northville has offered to buy their homes at peak market values if they will only withdraw from the $200 million lawsuit that 240 residents have filed against Northville Industries. Most homeowners have refused the offer.

The former Baird & McGuire chemical plant of Holbrook was the site recently of a groundbreaking ceremony on an $11.3 million water treatment plant. It is being constructed to clean the ground water polluted, it is assumed, by the chemicals disposed of by the company in its backyard.

They used to make pesticides, weedkillers, disinfectants, soaps, and waxes. Next will come the incinerator to burn the equivalent of 16,000 truckloads of contaminated dirt from the site, and it could be used to burn the sediment from the Cochato River.

This source used to empty into the Richardi Reservoir, which serves Holbrook, Braintree and Randolph. It was placed off limits in 1983 when a wastewater lagoon from Baird & McGuire ruptured and 10,000 gallons of contaminated wastewater was released into nearby wetlands.

What is the cost of leaks, spills, and dumping such as this? Baird & McGuire went bankrupt in 1984 after 70 years in business. The federal government now will be paying an estimated $80 million for a clean-up that will take approximately 10 years to complete.

The most tragic cost, however, is the loss of human life. In 1980, Joanne O'Donnell lost her son to adrenal cancer. Her youngest daughter has severe fertility problems. This family lived a half mile from the plant and routinely played in the pasture by Baird & McGuire.

John Gaffney's wife, who grew up down the street from the plant, contracted Hodgkin's disease and their son was born with no left thumb. There are lawsuits against Baird & McGuire, however, as it is bankrupt, the plaintiffs' only hope for compensation is the insurance companies. This plant has been deemed the nation's 14th worst hazardous waste site.

Love Canal, a suburb of Buffalo, N.Y., is more famous for its chemical leaks than William Love's 1890s proposed use, which was a water link to create a model city. The project was soon abandoned.

From 1947-1952, a new use was found for the six-block-long pit: it was used as a dump for 22,000 tons of toxic waste by the Hooker Chemical Company. When it was full, the pit was then covered over and a new use was applied to this land. This time, houses and a school were built around the pit with their backyards directly over the canal.

Cohasset Agrees CARE to Recycle Everything

By the 1970s the drums began to leak; the chemicals began to migrate up through the earth and into people's basements. In epidemiological surveys, the state found high incidences of miscarriages and other health problems. People living close to the canal were evacuated. The dump was covered with clay, and 200 homes closest to the pit were demolished.

Residents living farther away from the pit, Love Canal, led by homeowner Lois Gibbs, insisted that chemicals also had migrated through sewers, dried-up creekbeds and ditches into their homes a few blocks away. Their homes, too, were evacuated.

What has been the cost of a cheap place to dump hazardous waste? N.Y. state and the federal government have spent more than $275 million studying the site, cleaning it up and buying homes abandoned by residents. Now in 1990, the state wants to sell 236 houses two blocks away from the pit that were abandoned by residents more than 10 years ago. Prices are 10 to 15 percent below market value.

These three communities have suffered great losses because of a little leak here and a little dumped there. The bigger reality is, of course, that we all lose.

The people living near the manufacturing plant, the homeowners putting themselves at risk using the products, and the people living next to the landfills.

These communities are simply examples of why we have to think about what we buy, use and throw away.

Students provide views on Earth day

As part of Earth Week activities, eighth graders participated in an essay contest. Based on the topic, "Earth Day begins in my bedroom," the entries were judged by professionals from the business community in Quincy. Second place winner was Steven Chipman. The first place winner was Marisol Perry.

By Marisol Perry

What a stupid assignment, I thought. How many recyclable or reusable things can be found in my room?

But with a little thought and effort my eyes could see objects from a budding environmentalist's point of view. Unfortunately, I was able to come up with many more negative practices than positive ones.

Throughout the winter more blankets are put on the bed instead of using an electric blanket or turning the heat up. Pens and pencils from the desk are used until no longer usable.

Old homework papers could be used as scratch paper but usually aren't. Those extra sweaters that are never worn but remain in the closet, should be taken to Goodwill, but laziness is the cause of the task not being done.

Leaving on an unused radio or light for even a short time helps to use up electricity and bulbs. That bulb appears to be a simple product, but the time, energy, and supplies taken to produce millions of that one project don't seem so simple after all.

Unfilled school papers are usually tossed in with the regular trash that is trucked away from Cohasset. Trees that at one time helped produce the oxygen that gives us life, were chopped down to use for the tissues next to the bed. The use of a handkerchief would help reduce the number of deforested acres.

However, living in a wasteful society, where things come and go like the New England weather, those thoughts don't enter my head every time I step into my room. Nor the fact that it took billions of years for the earth to form, but to destroy it will be a small fraction of that time.

By Steven Chipman

Earth Day begins in my bedroom in a number of ways, most of which are the little things that rarely get noticed. Earth Day is mainly focused around trying to conserve the earth's resources and trying to find new ways of taking care of the planet Earth.

At first glance, you might not notice any acts of conservation in progress, but if you were to study my bedroom for a minute, you would start to notice things. For instance, you wouldn't see any aerosol sprays (deodorant, hairspray, Lysol) because they are harmful to the ozone layer.

You would also see that there are no recyclable materials lying around on the ground because they are all put in separate canisters located in the corner. Those canisters are so full of glass, paper, and plastic by the end of the week, that I have to take them down to the dump along with the rest of my family's garbage.

The statement, "Earth Day begins in my bedroom," does not have only its literal meaning; it also means that the preservation of Earth starts with me as a single person. It means that the Earth is going to be destroyed unless more people like me will start doing their part to take care of their environment.

If a million people do just a little bit each, then that could result in something on a large scale.

So, I will do my part to help complete a seemingly overwhelming task by picking up trash I see around my home and school, using recyclable materials, and recycling whenever I can, using products that are not harmful to my environment, disposing chemicals properly so they won't end up as toxic waste, and I will try my best to find information on what my state is doing to help the environment by writing to government officials, and, finally, I will try to get other people involved so they, too, can help save our planet.

Chittim leaves Vo-Tech

David Chittim, Cohasset's representative to the South Shore Vo-Tech school committee for the past six years, has asked selectmen not to re-appoint him to another term.

In his letter of resignation, Chittim said it was satisfying for him to work with "a fine administration and staff.

"South Shore Vo-Tech is a great asset to our region educationally, economically and socially," he added. "I do regret that more Cohasset students have not chosen this very relevant and valuable option."

The selectmen hope to appoint a successor before June 20.

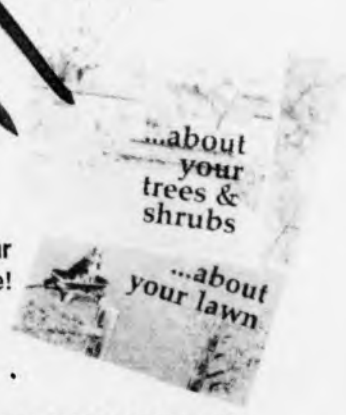
How much money is planted in your yard ?



Count it up. A couple of flowering shrubs, a hedge and a maple tree from the nursery could amount to as much as $600. You've probably made a considerable investment, in plants alone. A living investment that needs attention to grow.

Take this little quiz, to find out if your landscaping investment is increasing or decreasing in value:

- ☐ Are any of your bushes yellowish?
- ☐ Do any of your trees or shrubs have dead or dying branches?
- ☐ Did your flowering shrubs fail to bloom as well as expected ?
- ☐ Are insects nibbling holes in the leaves ?
- ☐ Are the leaves and branches sparse or stunted ?

If you answered yes to any of these, call us for a free , no-obligation survey and price quote. Our ornamental tree and shrub inspection, pest control and fertilization programs are designed to promote healthy and attractive plants. And healthy landscaping means a healthy increase in your property's value.

Evening registrations will be held Thursday evening, June 21, from 5 to 7 p.m.

Summer fliers, depicting information for all programs will be available at the recreation office after June 1, and will be sent home via school, for preschoolers through sixth graders, during the first week of June. Copies also will be available at the library and at all the schools.

The cost of the programs are as follows: 3- and 4-year olds, $75. For seven weeks, 5- to 12-year-olds, $100 for seven weeks; $15 per child family discounts for second and subsequent children registering in the same program are available. However, discounts between programs are not available.

The summer program will be directed by Ted Carroll and a staff of 10 counselors, and a number of volunteer junior counselors, and is based upon a day camp format, allowing children wide exposure to many types of activities, games, events, sports, and crafts.

From time to time on a weekly basis, optional, special activities/events/trips will be offered and the cost of these special programs will have to be passed along on a per/capita fee charge basis.

Each Thursday, children will have the option of registering $4 per person, for Music Circus children's performances and details regarding this are included in the flier.

The 5- to 12-year-old groups will have recreational free swim from 11 a.m. to noon, Monday, Wednesday, and Friday mornings, and any child (both programs) who has a swim lesson during the time of playground, will be walked to and from his lesson.

The Osgood School will remain the primary site for playground, and detailed information regarding rainy day schedules will be explained in the 1990 summer flier.

Parents, should plan to register children in person, as the registration form asks for detailed and specific information about each child. Also, parental permission via signature of parent or guardian is required.

TENNIS LESSONS

Youth tennis lessons will be conducted again this summer for children six through 18 years of age.

Youth tennis is a seven-week program, that will begin the week of July 2, and end Friday, Aug. 17, and the fee is $30 per participant with a $10 per person family discount offered to second and subsequent siblings.

Lessons are established on a Monday-Wednesday, Tuesday-Thursday schedule, with Fridays reserved for special clinics and tournaments. Participants meet at the same time regardless of days. That is, should your lesson be 10 a.m. on Monday, it also will meet at 10 a.m. Wednesday, and likewise for the Tuesday-Thursday groups.

All classes are an hour long and are scheduled between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. throughout the seven-week period. Flexibility to work around an other schedule exists and should, for example, you be unable to attend class on scheduled days, the recreation department can arrange for you to take an alternate class on a different day than the established norm.

Derek Lacks and Frank Willshire will teach classes again this summer. Any youth who is not available during day class times may register for the adult evening classes. Evening classes are based upon a five-week session, meeting one hour weekly and the fee is $40 per session.

Both day and evening classes will include instruction for beginners, advanced beginners, intermediates, and advanced players. Advanced level instruction, both day and evening, is aimed at tournament level play, teaching both concept and strategy.

SPORTS CAMPS

Sports camps for soccer (four programs) offered by two camps, South Shore Soccer Camp and V.I.P. Soccer Camps, and baseball will be offered this summer.

Registrations for soccer camps currently are being accepted and the recreation department advises that you register soon to be assured of a spot in the programs of your choice.

Details regarding a baseball camp will be forthcoming within the month.

BAND CONCERTS

During the summer of 1989, the recreation department provided three concerts on the common because of the generosity of the South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc. and American Federation, and Brockton Federation of Musicians.

Concerts for 1990 are solely dependant upon the continued interest and support of the South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc. and should funding become available, the Federation of Musicians will match those funds: projected concert dates based upon receipt of funding are: Saturday, June 23 at 3 p.m., Tuesday, July 24 at 7:30 p.m. and Tuesday, August 14 at 7:30 p.m., all at the town common.

OTHER PROGRAMS

During the summer months, the recreation department will offer various other programs, such as adult and junior golf lessons, meeting on Thursday evenings and Friday mornings; dog obedience classes, meeting on Wednesday evenings; aerobic exercise classes, which meet Tuesday and Thursday evenings; as well as intermittent registrations, as announced, for other activities and programs.

Should you be interested in any of the above programs, please call the recreation department office at 383-6791 for further information and details, or registration.

SUMMER WRESTLING CLINIC

The Cohasset recreation department will accept telephone registration for a high school, summer wrestling program, for grades 9 through 12.

The program will meet Monday evenings, from 6 to 8 p.m., beginning Monday, June 18, at the Cohasset High School's upstairs gym. (junior high school gym)

Paul Froio and Tim Pierotti will instruct the eight-week session.

The fee for this program is $16 per person, and you may register by calling the Cohasset recreation department office at 383-6791. Area wrestlers will be accepted upon a space-available basis, as the clinic must be limited in size.

Lacrosse team finishes second season with a winning record

By David McKee
Mariner staff

The Cohasset lacrosse team finished up its second season of action with a winning record of 4-3-1.

In the Skippers final two games, they lost an 8-4 decision to the Hingham junior varsity and then tied Boston College High 9-9 after four overtimes.

"Overall I am very pleased with how this year turned out for us," coach Ken Ekberg said. "The caliber of play was better this year and the participation was up and the enthusiasm was high all year.It was a good year for our program."

The Skippers ended their final week with a loss and a tie.

They opened up with a disappointing 8-4 loss to the Hingham junior varsity.

"We did not play a good first half against Hingham," Ekberg said. "They outscored us 6-1 and got a lead that we had trouble catching up to."

The second half began and the Skippers played better than in the first half. They outscored Hingham 3-2 in the second half, but the deficit in the first half was too much to overcome."

The Skippers had faced Hingham earlier in the year and had won 5-1.

Junior Travis Coley was in the net for the Skippers.

"We just didn't play well enough to win," Ekberg said. "We beat them in the second half, but we did not put out an intense effort in the first half and that was the difference. You can't play only one solid half and expect to win."

The Skippers followed the tough loss with a 9-9 tie to Boston College High.

The Skippers trailed 6-3 at the half, but rallied to tie up the game and send it into overtime. After four overtimes the game was still tied and the game ended by coaches decision.

"This was a team we should have beaten," Ekberg said. "We had many chances around the net but couldn't convert on them. Plus we did not have all

Skippers surprise opponents on the court

By David McKee
Mariner staff

The Cohasset High girls tennis team is surprising opponents throughout the South Shore.

The Skippers have jumped out to 6-4 mark and with four matches left, look to finish at 10-4.

By winning nine matches the team will qualify for the state tournament.

"We lost four seniors last year," coach Betty Zadel said. "So I kind of thought this would be a rebuilding year. But I have been very pleased with the tennis being played."

So far this year the Skippers have beaten Hanover (5-0), East Bridgewater (5-0), Abington (5-0), Hanover (4-1) and Carver (5-0).

Their remaining matches are against Carver, East Bridgewater, Abington and Norton.

"Because we have seen all of the teams I am confident that if we play to our ability we can end up 10-4 and that would be great," Zadel said.

The Skippers lost twice to Norwell, (4-1 both times) and to Scituate and Duxbury (both 5-0 defeats).

The Skippers are led by several solid players.

At first singles senior Michelle Massa has compiled a 6-4 so far this year and has played solid tennis.

"She was the number three seed last year and has really risen to the occasion," Zadel said. "She is great leader and has done everything we have asked of her."

Junior Sophie Redfield has compiled a 6-4 mark

Lacrosse team finishes with winning record...

our players there and that didn't help. But I guess a tie is better than a loss."

Junior Matt Marks led the way as he scored four goals.

Senior Jim Reidy also had a fine day as he chipped in two goals.

Eighth grader Brendon DeVoe was in the goal for the Skippers.

"He did a fine job considering he is only an eighth grader," Ekberg said.

Marks ended up leading the Skippers in goals as he scored 17.

Reidy was next with 10.

And eighth Charles Endriss with third with nine.

Reidy led the team in assists with 12.

Endriss was next with five.

Ekberg, who played lacrosse against football great Jim Brown, is optimistic about the future of lacrosse at Cohasset High School.

"We have a lot of kids who are going to lacrosse camp over the summer and that can only help them," he said. "Plus the talent on the junior varsity looks good. I'm very optimistic about the future of soccer here. Next years' team should be a lot better than this year's."

As for playing with Brown, who was an All-American at Syracuse in lacrosse before he went on to set rushing records in the NFL, Ekberg said, "He wasn't really a skilled player. But you don't see many 6'3" guys who weigh 230 pounds and can run a 4.3 forty yard dash play lacrosse. He was something to see."

Braves shine on diamond

The Braves, coached by Stan Walsh, Dave Leahy and Paul Cotter, have improved with each game. The team is currently in first place within the four-team minor league (age 10 and 11) division.

The Braves' success has been due to their diligence on the field. The Braves are an excellent fielding team. Helping the Braves ascension into first place have been the baseballing brothers, Patrick and Tommy Leahy, and Adam and Paul Sheerin. Pitcher Nate Cotter recently was voted the Mass. 4X4 Minor League player of the week.

Ted Reardon has played excellent second base and Dustin Pratt has shone at third base.

Leigh Atherton, Bob Buckley, Mya Coon and Brian Walsh have been providing the power hitting.

Team attitude and persistence also has been a factor in the improving performance of the Braves. All the players have contributed both on the field and in the dugout to a positive team attitude this season. According to Coach Walsh, "Everyone has played enthusiastic and intelligent baseball thus far this season."

Mets battle for first place

The Mets, currently in a battle for first place standings within the five-team Major League division, have received outstanding pitching from Eric Henry, Taylor Devin, and Eli Kahn, while speedy baserunning has been a Mets trademark once again this year.

Returning from injuries that halted his last baseball season is first baseman J.L Williams, who is expected to provide power hitting to the lineup.

Frank Abadie, who has lowest average of stolen bases per game in the league, has provided stellar catching.

Taylor Devin has scooped up the shots at shortstop. Third Base has been held by Ely Kahn, while Doug Cameron and Ted Hamilton have shared duties at second base.

The Mets' veteran 12-year-olds, Eric Henry and Kenny Leahy have produced fine leadership. Other 12-year-olds on the team are Andy Collins, Mike Kasmeyer and Ted Hamilton. The 11-year-olds on the team are Taylor Devin, Ely Kahn Frank Abadie, Doug Cameron, J.L. Williams, Jason Murphy and Sam Goedecke.

Rookies on this year's team have made a large contribution to the success. Both Mike Kasmeyer and Ted Hamilton have hit with power, while Fran Abadie is performing admirably behind the plate.

David Leahy, John Williams Frank Murphy and Bob Devin are coaching this year's Mets,which are sponsored this year by Dean Witter Investments.

Dodgers earn respect

The Major League Dodgers, newly added to the program last season, have steadily battled for improved league standing and team respect this season.

The Dodgers, under Coaches Rick Kondrat, King Bilton and Kevin Lewis also have steadily improved with each game.

The Dodgers were early season winners in the interleague play with their Scituate rivals and appear to be peaking once again.

Outstanding play by first baseman and pitcher Jamie Kondrat has provided the Dodgers with winning margins in several games. Rookies Matt Lewis and Greg Bilton also have made solid contributions.

The 'battling' Dodgers have to be reckoned with this year as they have nine returning veterans. The Dodgers success is based on the pitching ability of Jamie Kondrat, Matt Lewis, Greg Bilton and Grant Emde – all have exhibited fine pitching arms.

Aaron Coon has sparked the team from the catcher's position. Burke Davis has provided excellent defense in the outfield as have Rob Stansell, Dave Marr, J.P. Lacks and Matt Belson.

Heavy hitting is expected from Justin Buckley, Conor Mangan and Matt Conley ,while the Dodgers resume their quest for the league title this year.

The Dodgers have excellent team speed and all the boys have exhibited a winning spirit. The Dodgers should challenge for the title this season.

The Dodgers were sponsored this year by the Cohasset firefighters.

A's are raising wins on farm

The Farm League Athletics, under the coaching of Dan Duffy and Bill Grimm, have improved with each game. The Farm A's are one of 10 teams within the Farm (ages 6 and 7) League division.

The Farm A's have fun on the diamond. Excellent fielding is provided by Mike Kennedy, Danny Kinchla and David DeVito.

Speedy baserunning is provided by Kyle Kennedy, Morgan Hurley, Amanda Watts and Katy Grimm.

Power hitting is provided by Danny Duffy, Mike McMillen, Patrick O'Hayre and James Figuerido.

Ted Gledhill was injured before the season started.

Pony league teams are on a winning roll

By John Kinchla
Special to the Mariner

Pony League action

The Cohasset Pony League teams playing in a newly expanded Scituate Pony League program now have won five of six starts.

The Cohasset Heights Pony Yankees beat the Norwell Giants 9 to 3 on Monday, night May 7. Coach Brian Fahey reported "sensational pitching by Mike Riley, in his first Pony League start."

Mike pitched three innings and Jason Crossman closed with three innings.

The team played errorless baseball; eight different players had hits. Both Brian Pattison and Peter Fahey had two solid hits each.

The Sestito Landscaping Pirates beat the Scituate Tigers in an exciting 9 to 8 game decided in the final inning by an RBI single from winning pitcher, Jim Magner.

Saturday, May 12, the Cohasset Heights Yankees pushed their record to 3 and 1 with a big win over the Scituate Pony JC's by the score of 18 to 2.

Outstanding pitching was provided by Chris Rolandelli (six innings) and Scott Theriault (one inning). Scott struck out three batters in relief.

Brian Fahey reported that "this was a near-errorless game, solid defensive effort, tremendous offensive with 16 hits."

The following players carried the attack: Peter Fahey, four for four with two triples, two doubles and two RBI; Chris Rolandelli, three hits, two RBI; Chris Kondrat, three for three, two RBI; Mike Riley, two hits, one RBI; John Maynard, two RBI; Andy Kamatoris, three RBI; Patrick Reynolds, two for two, two RBI.

Major League action

Alco Oil players of the week awards went to The Dean Witter Mets rookie Frank Abadie, who blocked the plate and tagged out the tying run in the bottom of the fifth in last week's game with the Red Sox, and Spensley Chevrolet's Athletics Jonah Berger, who pitched a no-hitter against the Dean Witter Mets. Joe Magner of Leo's Exxon Red Sox hit the first homer of the season.

On Monday, May 7, the Dean Witter Mets beat the National Abatement Services Pirates. According to Coach Dave Leahy, "Eric Henry provided great defense at first base and a powerful bat. Frank Abadie provided solid catching and hitting. And right fielder, Andy Collins saved the win with an inning ending catch."

Tuesday, May 8, the Spensley Chevrolet Athletics beat the Cohasset Firefighters Dodgers 8 to 5. A's pitching was provided by Jonah Berger, Nevin Bunstien and Sean Norris. Dodger pitching was provided by Jamie Kondrat and Matt Lewis.

On Friday, May 11, The Mets got off to a fast start in this thriller with the Dodgers. Eric Henry pitched three shutout innings as the damage was done early by the Mets 9 to 6.

Saturday, May 12, the Spensley Chevrolet Athletics defeated Scituate's Lonborg and Feeney Major League team in a squeaker 12 to 11. Jonah Berger had an outstanding game both hitting and pitching.

Minor League action

Mass 4X4 Association Minor League player of the week award went to Nate Cotter of the Braves. Nate pitched the closing innings in the Braves 9 to 5 win over the Athletics. Nate also hit an inside the park homer to clear the bases in the final inning thus insuring the win.

On Saturday May 12, the Braves beat the Orioles 7 to 2. Great pitching by Bob Buckley and Tucker Gledhill and lots of good hitting by both teams but superior fielding by the Braves was the difference.

Skippers surprise opponents...

as well at second singles.

"She started at second double and moved up," Zadel said. "She is athletic and a very aggressive player."

Sophomore Nicole Bieryla has piled up a 5-5 record at third singles.

"She is only a sophomore but she is starting to get the feel of things," Zadel said. "She has been bothered by tendonitis in the elbow but she has done a great job."

At first doubles juniors Ellen Schramm and Rebeca Jordan have been getting the job done.

"This is a new team for us," Zadel said. "They are very aggressive and have come a long way over the year and do a great job at the net."

And junior Kara Manion and sophomore Kathleen Conroy have been getting the job done at second doubles.

"Right now Kara has a leg injury and they were playing solidly together until a few weeks ago," Zadel said.

Freshman Karyn Murray has filled in and done a nice job.

"We have been very fortunate that we have had the players there to pick up us when we needed help," Zadel said.

Junior Katie McNamara and sophomore Corrina Minnar round out the squad.

"Corrina has played one or two matches at third singles and has looked good," Zadel said. "Katie hasn't played in any matches yet, but is a fine player and is very important to the team."

In addition to the talent level of the Skippers, Zadel credits their work ethic for the teams' success.

"The key for us has been the hard work," Zadel said. "The kids have been real motivated and always work hard in practice. And they are always looking to improve on their games. They are never content."

The Skippers are looking to make it back to the state tournament.

Last year the Skippers were knocked out in the first round.

"I'm hopeful we can make the tourney and do well," Zadel said. "If we make the tournament I'd like to win in the first round. That would be a good goal for us. We are from a small school and it is really tough to compete with the larger schools in the post season. But I think we could surprise some people if we play our best and stay focused."

Meehan is a champion

Dawn Meehan, a seventh grade student at Cohasset High School, is the New England Junior Olympic Champion in figures and solo events in synchronized swimming.

She won two gold medals and has qualified for the National Junior Olympics to be held in Tampa in August.

This is the fourth year that Meehan has been both the New England age group and Junior Olympic champion. At last year's Bay State Games, she was awarded two medals.

Our heroes honored near & far

Crowds gathered Monday at Cohasset Common and at the Veterans Monument to remember the men and women who died in past wars.

Children, who have grown up in peace, watched veterans march.

The exercises are a Memorial Day tradition, beginning early in the morning as the veterans visit the cemeteries in town.

This year there was a delegation from the town of Souppes in France that came to place a wreath on the grave of Thomas G. Churchill, one of the town's World War II heroes.

Stephen Wigmore, commander of the American Legion Post, told the crowd that in 1944 General George Patton's soldiers were approaching his town to liberate it from the Germans. The Germans put the women and children of the town into the church and piled straw around it, preparing to destroy it. It was then that Major Churchill and his battalion arrived.

Henri Grampre, the man whose mission it was to keep the Germans from destroying the bridges into Souppes, delivered a brief address in French at the services at the Veterans Monument.

Grampre, whose remarks were translated by Jacqueline Dormitzer, thanked the veterans for their service.

Burtram Pratt, a veteran of World War II and local historian, gave the main address at the monument.

He pointed out that the history of Memorial Day goes back to a time when the veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic were first honored for their service to the country.

The men and women of Cohasset have always been quick to volunteer for service, Pratt said.

He told the crowd that three men from Cohasset were part of the group that threw tea into Boston Harbor in 1773. He said there was even a man from Cohasset who charged up San Juan Hill with Teddy Roosevelt and his Rough Riders.

"Cohasset was represented at Pearl Harbor, aboard the USS Missouri in Tokyo Bay and all the way in between," Pratt said.

"In 1950 many reservists who remained in the service after the ward plus many new recruits were sent to Korea.

"Finally today, we honor the fallen heroes of Vietnam."

Pratt said it was appalling that these veterans were not accorded the type of homecoming welcome given to the veterans of his generation.

"Their disillusionment is not without justification," he said.

He said each generation has had to cope with the loss of loved ones due to war. He said the enemies

Selectmen and fire chief ready to sign contract

Fire Chief Daniel Brock and the selectmen seem to be in agreement on the chief's contract.

The board voted Tuesday night to offer Brock a flat $49,045 salary for the present year. Town Counsel Richard Henderson said the wording would be ready for signatures within a few days.

Brock has been working without a contact since the beginning of the year.

The salary figure puts the chief's pay in compliance with the ratio law which pegs fire and police salaries on the same scale. Town meeting recently rescinded its acceptance of the ratio law.

After making her motion on the salary figure, selectman Diana Kornet said she did not want to get into a lawsuit over whether the ratio law applied.

No one offered any other numbers.

"This has gone on long enough," said selectman chairman Rocco Laugelle. "I think we have an agreement and we are going to move on it tonight."

The negotiations with the chief took place privately. A subcommittee of two members of the board — Laugelle and former selectman Burtram Pratt — met a number of times with the chief.

The first agreement achieved by the subcommittee was taken to the full board in May and subsequently rejected.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said the language of the first agreement was fine but the money was an issue.

A second agreement turned out to be a problem for Brock.

Apparently the problem was a communication one. Brock said he brought a written proposal to the session, detailing his request. The selectmen's subcommittee worked from oral proposals.

Toward the close of the session, Pratt said, "The rest will remain the same," Brock said explaining that he took that to mean the rest of his written proposal. However, the board assumed the rest of the old contract would be unchanged.

Tuesday selectmen deleted some language on who would run the department in the chief's absence, after deciding the wording belonged in the union contract rather than in the chief's.

Several other issues were resolved.

The wording on health insurance in the chief's proposal is the same as state law, according to Richard Henderson, town counsel. The board decided to reference the state law.

Another phrase dealing with what might happen if the chief were disabled due to a work-related injury was changed from wording that said the town would have the right to terminate the chief to wording that said the town would have the right to petition the Norfolk County pension system for his retirement if he were unable to perform his duties but did not petition for retirement himself.

The contract voted gives the chief 15 vacation days a year, the same as the prior contract, rather than the 20 days he requested.

While the board discussed the contract issues, the chief kept in contact with his department on a radio. The department was handling a cellar fire and an accident with injuries at the same time.

Old Colony rail plan still chugs along the same old right-of-way

The long awaited draft of the MBTA's Environmental Impact Statement on the rehabilitation of the Old Colony Railroad estimates that the Greenbush line would cost $40 to $51 million — without considering the cost of removing contaminated materials or encountering extreme soil conditions.

Cost for the three lines is projected at $562 million.

The capital cost includes land acquisition — 17 properties including one residence would be taken by the state during the proceedings; new track, stations, parking lots, and gates, flashing lights and bells for the 43 street crossings of the Greenbush line.

The time of public comment on the railroad plan ends July 2.

The study is available at the town clerk's office, the library and conservation office.

The Cohasset meeting is planned for 7:30 p.m. June 6 at Cohasset Town Hall. But the way to enter an official statement is by writing to Stephen J. Polechronis, MBTA, 10 Park Plaza, Boston, MA., 02116 or by attending one of the public hearings. The most local of the hearings is scheduled for 8 p.m. June 20 at Braintree town hall.

A sense of the Cohasset meeting will be recorded but stenographers will be present at the public hearings.

Peter Diamond, spokesman for the MBTA, said the public hearings are being held to meet federal requirements. He said comments would be accepted at the meetings as well as at the hearings.

Cohasset will be affected by any of the proposals under consideration — including the "no build" alternative. But the most direct impact comes under the proposals known as 3c and 3d, both of which involve the restoration of service on the Old Colony line to Greenbush.

The recommendation being pushed by the state would run the trains on all three proposed lines — from Boston to Lakeville, Plymouth and Scituate.

The report itself consists of two volumes that together are two-and-a-half inches thick.

The issues the report admits as unresolved include:

- The effect on historic resources including historic bridge structures, archaeological sites and Hingham's Lincoln National Register District.
- Traffic mitigation. "The most significant impact at grade crossings is expected to be road traffic delays during train pass-bys. On average, 7.5 percent of peak hour traffic using a grade crossing street would be stopped by train pass-bys. The average delay at most locations would be like that of a long red phase on a traffic signal, or about one minute."
- Replacement parking for Hingham Square and Cohasset Village.
- Coordination with property owners concerning mitigation of noise and vibration impacts.
- Financial analysis to demonstrate the MBTA's capacity to build and maintain the "preferred" alternative.

The actual process of studying the alternatives was instigated by the legislature in 1984. The first step of the study began in January, 1986. Back then a 35-member Citizens Advisory Committee was set up to oversee the study. Cohasset is represented by Debbie Cook and Martha Gjesteby.

Terry Fancher of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce chairs the CAC.

"The Old Colony study area includes 32 communities and extends from Braintree south towards Cape Cod Canal to Buzzards Bay and from

Changing lanes on 3A

Plans for a change in traffic patterns by Paul Duddy's service station by the lights opposite Stop and Shop were accepted by selectmen Tuesday, subject to the approval of Harold Litchfield, highway surveyor.

The change will allow the station a curb cut onto King Street which will be used for one-way traffic leaving the station.

Duddy said cars leaving his station are forced to cut into heavy traffic near the lights. Everyone seemed to agree the change would increase safety.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby moved away from the table during the discussion and vote, saying she had a possible conflict.

Dealers license numbered

Do the two used car businesses conform to their permits?

Selectmen wonder.

Both businesses have licenses allowing 20 used cars to be offered for sale on the property. One license allows 20 cars for sale. The other allows 20 cars on the lot.

Principal interviews set

At its June 4 meeting, the Cohasset School Committee will be interviewing three finalists for the position of Joseph Osgood School principal/ curriculum coordinator for K-6.

The interviews will be held at the high school home economics room.

The interviews will take place during the first part of the committee meeting starting with Mary Ann Morrissey at 5:30 p.m.; Kevin Cushman at 6:30 p.m.; and Linda Whitney at 7:30 p.m.

The school committee will then continue with its regularly-scheduled meeting following these interviews.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle, who said he counts the cars on a daily basis, said there have been violations.

Resignation expected

Selectmen considered accepting a resignation to the personnel board Tuesday despite the fact the written back up not actually in hand.

Charlotte Simmons has tendered her resignation orally but a written notice is required, according to selectmen.

Selectman Jane Goedecke suggested a letter be written for Simmons and brought to her home for her signature.

Selectmen approve transfer

The selectmen Tuesday approved a request for a transfer for $1,750 for a case involving the town hall's brick walkway.

It was half the amount involved in the suit.

Selectmen plan to ask the building inspector about the status of the new landscaping business on Route 3A after receiving a complaint about possible zoning violations.

New business questioned

If June 10 happens to be warm and sunny, there may be a problem parking at Sandy Beach, Greg Doyon, selectmen's secretary, said Tuesday.

He reminded the board that they have given permission for the parking of about 75 cars at the beach for a wedding that day. He said the space may not be available by the time the wedding gets underway if the weather is good.

Selectmen voted to allow parking at town hall in the event the beach lot is full.

Street closing June 16

On the request of Burtram Pratt of the historical society, selectmen voted Tuesday to allow Elm Street to be closed from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. Saturday, June 16, from Peterson's to the Cohasset Savings Bank.

The street closing will allow the historical society to display three restored fire engines in the street.

"This is in keeping with Village Renaissance," Selectman Diana Kornet said.

The vote is subject to approval by the police and fire chiefs.

Dog fines find prctest

The town's new bylaw that fines people who fail to renew their dog licenses by May 1 is causing some controversy.

The notices warning residents about the $25 fines were mailed after the May 1 deadline.

Greg Doyon, selectmen's executive secretary, said the town has already collected about $600 in fines.

Tuesday after listening to the complaint of Ruth Nedrow, the board voted to establish a policy that if a resident can show legitimate evidence the payment was made, the fine should be waived.

Health care issue needs new law

Town Counsel Richard Henderson says the town is legally bound to offer indemnity health insurance — like Blue Cross — to town workers.

He said the law provides no way for a town to escape the obligation.

Cohasset is one of 35 communities in the state facing a problem with this law due to the decision of Blue Cross to drop coverage for groups where they have less than 20 percent of the active, eligible employees participating in their plan.

Blue Cross has 13 percent of the work force.

Bay State Health Care, a health maintenance organization, has 70 percent participation.

Medical East, which is owned by Blue Cross, has the rest.

Carol Greenberg of Bay State told selectmen her company can do nothing to offer coverage for people living out of state. Bay State can only serve residents of this state.

There are provisions to provide unforeseen medical care for people who travel out of state. But regular care must be provided by the members of the network.

Richard Szabo, a Blue Cross representative, told selectmen eventually Blue Cross will increase the percentage figures required to maintain coverage.

"We call it the fairness rule," Szabo said. "It gives the company a chance to offset poor risk with good risk."

Recently Milton faced the same problem and decided to drop indemnity coverage after first being dropped by Blue Cross then finding no takers on a bid proposal for indemnity insurance.

"The biggest advantage we have is with complete transportability," Szabo said. "You have the same coverage in Massachusetts or Florida."

Another difference is Blue Cross covers chiropractic care.

Blue Cross plans to drop the town at the end of June.

Henderson said one answer would be to seek a change in state law.

Inspirations gives its case

By Alison Cohen

While selectmen meet with town counsel Richard Henderson to plan their lawsuit against her Route 3A business, Shirley Musto says she is frustrated and can't help feeling unfairly singled out.

Musto, who owns Inspirations Boutique, is under fire for alleged violations of town zoning regulations controlling outdoor displays of merchandise. Specific complaints center on her use of a mannequin next to her roadside sign and outdoor displays of plants and clothing.

"It's nothing different than any other business [along Route 3A]," Musto said. Musto has pho-

Sons of the American Legion reactivated

For the past 10 years, Thomas Wigmore has been decorating the veterans graves at cemeteries in town.

So his position in the line of march on Memorial Day didn't seem out of place, although at 26, he is too young to remember this country in wartime.

And after all, his father, Stephen, is commander of the American Legion Post.

But this Memorial Day Tom Wigmore marched as the leader of the town's newest service organization — the Sons of the American Legion. Wigmore was recently elected as the first commander of the reactivated organization. The actual installation of officers is planned for June 10 at the Veterans Monument.

Wigmore, a lifelong Cohasset resident, said he first joined the Houghs Neck Sons of the Legion about a year ago.

"Then one night when I was getting ready to go to Houghs Neck my father suggested it to me. He said why don't you reactivate the Cohasset Sons."

After doing some research, Wigmore discovered that all he needed were members to get the inactive organization back.

The Sons of the American Legion were chartered at the Cohasset post back in 1932 while the late Nathan Hurwitz (father of Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray) was commander of the post, according to Wigmore.

He had 10 of his friends sign the new membership cards to get the paperwork started. By now there are 15 members.

Thomas Wigmore

Wigmore is active in the Sons at a state level. Currently he serves as sergeant-at-arms to the state detachment. He said he will be chaplain next year.

Wigmore has been working on veteran's issues for years. The Sons of the American Legion provides help for projects normally undertaken by the members of veterans groups. The members visit veterans hospitals and get involved in projects.

This year Wigmore cared for the graves at Woodside Cemetery alone. Ralph Perroncello, commander of the VFW, took care of the graves at Central Cemetery. Ed Brennick cared for the graves at Beechwood Cemetery.

The officers who will be installed besides Wigmore are: James Burke, first vice commander; Jack Pattison, second vice commander; Ed Mulvey, finance; Paul Fiori, chaplain; Bob Silvia, historian, and Dean Williams, sergeant-at-arms.

There is already a Women's Auxiliary of the Sons of the American Legion, headed by Brenda Litchfield.

Wigmore said the requirement for membership for the Sons is that a prospective member must be the son of a man or woman who is a member of the American Legion.

Daughters of Legion members are allowed in the women's auxiliary, Wigmore said.

Memorial Day exercises: a day of thanks have been the "isms" — colonialism, Naziism, Fascism and communism.

But he said the goals of peace and goodwill may be about to be achieved.

He cited as positive examples of today: the unification of Germany, our trading with Japan and the apparent agreement in the Soviet-US arms talks.

"Next weekend the First Ladies of the US and the Soviet Union will take part in a commencement, held right here in Massachusetts, where it all began."

He said the changes show that the veterans did not die in vain.

"The fulfillment of the American dream may yet come to pass," Pratt said.

The Rev. John Keohane of St. Anthony's offered a prayer. Earlier in the day both the Rev. Gary Ritts of Second Congregational Church and the Rev. Edward Atkinson of First Parish Unitarian Church participated in other portions of the Memorial Day exercises.

The Kevin Barry Irish American Pipers of Malden played "Amazing Grace." The Deer Hill School band played the national anthem.

A color guard from the Quincy Civil Air Patrol took part, as did a contingent from the George H. Mealy American Legion Post and the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

A group of members of the veterans organizations served as a firing squad to salute the fallen soldiers and sailors.

Children tossed flowers into the water to honor those buried at sea.

The lengthy exercises ended officially to the sound of "Taps."

Metco equals friendship

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

When Cohasset High sends its seniors off to seek their fame, fortune and an education in the outside world, they'll be breaking up some very special partnerships.

Cohasset prides itself on matching up every METCO student with a host family. The host families give the METCO students another link to the community. And most families find opening their homes and hearts to METCO students enriches their lives as well.

You could say four of the 69 graduates are METCO students who happen to attend Cohasset High. Or maybe they're Cohasset High students who happen to live outside town.

Edith Saint Eloi and Karin Story have been a duo for the four years she's been a Cohasset student. When she isn't hanging around Karin's house playing cutthroat Monopoly games, she can be found at Patty Tolini's house.

Edith said she's spent so much time at the Story house that she is treated like one of the family. That seems to translate into having Karin's younger brother, Ryan, feeling free to bug her as much as he bugs Karin — and with the same result.

Edith ran on the track team, was a cheerleader and won the DAR's good citizen award.

Patricia Smith has been riding that impossibly early bus to Cohasset since the first grade. She and Kasey Smith share the same last name and a relationship that goes back three years. Pat bunked in frequently during basketball season and Kasey went on most of the METCO field trips.

Pat also was a cheerleader for Cohasset, while Kasey was honored a student of the month and art student of the month. Kasey volunteered to assist with junior high students in the art department and was the stage manager for Cohasset's drama competition entry, "The Miracle Play."

Kasey, Pat and Edith spent their spring vacation in Fort Lauderdale.

Pat also stayed at Patty Tolini's house from time to time.

Greg Thomas has been claimed by two Cohasset families — the Ritts and the Marsecs — in the six years he's been been a Cohasset kid.

Greg was in residence at the Ritts during the rehearsals and performances of "Bye, Bye Birdie." He played the bartender in the first musical production of the year.

"He lives there," the others chimed in.

"I used to," Greg said. "I used to come over every weekend. Now I've got a job."

Even the job didn't keep him away full time — he stayed over in order to participate in driver's ed. classes in the spring.

Greg said he knew he'd become a part of the family when he was assigned chores along with all the rest of the kids.

In addition to his acting career, Greg played football and basketball for Cohasset. Steve joined him on the football field, but chose the ice hockey over basketball.

Matt Silvia and Dudley Bryan are both crazy about art and computers. They've been a team since seventh or eighth grade.

Dudley is another veteran of the long bus ride. He's been coming to Cohasset since the first grade.

The students shared their plans for next year.

Mt. Ida in Newton Center is in Edith's future. She's keeping an open mind about careers, but leans toward social work, early education or human services.

"I want to work with children," she said.

Karin will attend Radford College in Virginia. She plans to major in interior design.

Patricia heads off to Brandeis where she will be a liberal arts major. She's keeping all her career options open for the time being.

Kasey thinks art education is the perfect field for her. She's been accepted by the Mass. College of Art.

Gregory is waiting to hear from his first choice college, North Carolina Central University. He may work before going to school. Greg's fantasy career is professional football player, but plans on a career in business.

Franklin Pierce in New Hampshire is Steve's destination. He hasn't committed himself to a career, but leans toward photography.

Dudley is joining Kasey at Mass College of Art. He wants to major in interrelated media. He has a special interest in film, videographics and music. His dream career is as a commercial cartoonist.

Dudley has a headstart on his career — he was featured in a 1985 Mariner story about a comic book series he was doing. Dudley has illustrated covers for the literary magazine, "Whispers & Shadows", and for the Mini-mag. Recently, he won a gold key and blue ribbon from the Boston Globe Scholastic Art Contest. Dudley's art work is part of a national exhibit.

When the senior class issued its own "awards", Edith was voted "class raver". The ebullient senior can't imagine why, but her friends think it was an appropriate award. Kasey and Dudley were tagged "most artistic."

Steve got the Spirit Award for football while Greg was voted "most improved player" in football. Greg also was named "reason why teachers go mad." Greg gave his most angelic smile and said it's because he is both mischievous and complex.

METCO coordinator Pat Brown's office filled with laughter as the METCO students and their host siblings celebrated good times and bright futures. And teased Greg Thomas mercilessly about a mysterious nickname they said he had been given.

Brown can't wait until they gather together at their first reunion to share old memories and new triumphs.

Time to comment on the Old Colony RR

Massachusetts Bay west to Route 24," the report states.

"In 1980, the total population was approximately 600,000 people. By the year 2000, the study area population is projected to increase by 15 to 20 percent. The growth rate is significantly higher than the expected growth rate for the Metropolitan area as a whole.

"The Old Colony study area work force has a strong orientation to Boston. A substantially higher proportion of the work force commutes to Boston and Cambridge for work than do their counterparts from north and west of Boston."

The study says 16 percent of total work trips are to Boston from the South Shore, while the percent from the north suburbs is 7.7 percent and from the west suburbs the figure is 11.9 percent.

It went on to explain that service on the Red Line cannot be increased due to the time needed between trains for safety's sake.

Among the other alternatives discarded before the study developed in depth were: trackless trolleys along the right-of-way; electric light rail vehicles; electric commuter trains (the pending proposal involves diesel driven locomotives); buses running on the right-of-way; extension of the Red Line along Route 3; terminals at halfway points on the line (Hingham was considered as a possible terminal under this proposal); a busway, and commuter rail service to Braintree and the Red Line rather than the South Station plan.

Alternatives studied in depth included the so-called "no-build" plan. This would have involved completion of projects now in the planning stages like the reconstruction of Route 44, widening Route 3 from Weymouth to Duxbury, increasing parking at the Quincy Adams Station (now full by 7:30 a.m.) and expansion of parking for the Hingham commuter boat plus other improvements.

The next alternative calls for express bus service to Boston and the construction of additional parking lots to promote bus ridership

The third alternative calls for restoration of the Old Colony commuter rail.

Under the heading of community disruption, the report points out that the traffic situation in Weymouth Landing would deteriorate as streets may be blocked from one to three minutes if long trains stop at the station.

"This occurs at other locations on the MBTA commuter trains and it has not caused an important impact," the report says.

"In Hingham Center (sic), employees of businesses park their cars on the state-owned right-of-way. This parking would no longer be available when rail service is reinstated on the Greenbush Line. Pedestrian traffic in the area would also be interrupted for 45 to 90 seconds as trains pass. Proposed mitigation would include construction of a parking deck over the existing parking lot behind the Hingham Institute for Savings between Main and Central streets as replacement for lost surface parking.

The report goes on to say that 29 buildings along the Old Colony right-of-way would experience "significant adverse impact" from noise under the plan to restore all three lines. Of those 13 would qualify for installation of noise barriers — something that will be discussed with property owners in the future. The rest of the 29 buildings would qualify for some form of mitigation such as double-glazed windows, air-conditioners or acoustical barriers.

There would be 1,068 buildings subject to what is called an annoyance level of vibration due to the trains. About 600 of those buildings are along the lines still running occasional freight trains.

"It is expected that the Greenbush line would have four adverse noise impacted residences and approximately 40 vibration impacted buildings among contributing properties in the Lincoln Historic District. These properties are candidates for noise and vibration mitigation."

Wetlands would be filled in West Hingham and at the Nantasket Junction area, off Summer Street, Hingham.

The report says the restoration of rail has the greatest cost effectiveness level. It predicts it will cost $13.97 per new transit trip for full restoration. It predicts a cost of $16.74 per transit trip for the express bus alternative.

Incidentally, the MBTA already has authority to float bonds up to $195 million for the project.

(Editor's note: more information from the study will be included in future issues.)

Brooke Anderson enjoys the ride

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Brooke Anderson has been on an exciting merry-go-round ride of activity for the past two weeks. Wednesday morning she reached for the gold ring. She didn't grab it this go round, but watch out next time around.

In addition to dancing the night away at her senior prom May 29 and getting ready to graduate June 3, the Cohasset High student also participated in the "Super Model of New England" search sponsored by Filene's, the Ford Model Agency, WCVB-TV Channel 5's "Good Day!" show and KISS 108 FM radio station.

Brooke entered the contest on a lark.

The woman making her prom dress told her about the model search. After a little nudging, Brooke and her mother, Mary Mulvey, picked up an application and had some photographs taken.

"We were the last people to enter," Brooke said. She said they drove to the Boston Filene's to drop off the invitation on the last day to enter. Brooke got her entry in just under the wire.

"When we got there, the promotion person was just leaving."

The entry period ran from May 4 through May 23.

Brooke was chosen a finalist by Eileen Ford, co-owner of the nationally known Ford Model Agency of New York. The winner goes on to an international competition and has a chance at a $250,000 contract with the Ford Modeling Agency.

Brooke got the good news while she was at a peer counselors' workshop in the middle of a quiet trust-building session. Her fellow peer counselors teased her about not paying her Filene's bill when she got the message that she had to call Filene's immediately.

"My brother, Michael, called and told me that Filene's called to tell me I'd won something, but he didn't know what."

When Brooke called back, "the lady was out to lunch."

When she got the official word, she was thrilled.

"I was bouncing off the wall, I was so excited about it," Brooke said. "I still can't believe it."

As a finalist, Brooke received a $50 Filene's gift certificate, a "head shot" by Boston photographer James Daigle and the opportunity to participate in a fashion show with the other four finalists on "Good Day!" on May 30. The winner, sixteen-year-old Tansy Young of Lexington, was chosen on the show.

Brooke downplayed the likelihood that she could win the contest. She barely seemed to be aware that she was chosen one of five finalists out of a big field of contestants throughout New England and New York state.

Brooke Anderson

"I think there were more like 600 [entrants] than 400," said Ford. "I had to look at all those snapshots."

Brooke was modest about her chances.

"I've never done any modeling", she said. But the idea of modelling — just for fun — is appealing. She's particularly drawn to the idea of traveling and meeting people.

Then she quickly said she wasn't apt to be the winner.

Before the big event she worried about whether she'd be able to stay awake during the live filming of "Good Day!"

"Tuesday I have a photo session at 7 a.m.," she moaned.

Other previous engagements included a pre-prom party at the South Shore Arts Center from 6 p.m. to 7:30 p.m., followed by the prom. The traditional senior breakfast was served Wednesday morning at 3 a.m. — after all these festivities, Brooke grabbed an hour of sleep before getting to the Needham set of "Good Day!" for taping at 7:30 a.m.

Brooke knew her competition would be stiff — she met two of the four contestants before the show.

"I feel like Miss little Minnie Mouse next to them," she joked. "They're really tall."

Brooke enjoyed the fittings for the outfits she modelled in the fashion show. Well, all except for the form-fitting lycra dress.

"I'm not used to those dresses," she said. Although the fitter told Brooke she looked wonderful in the dress, Brooke said it just wasn't the sort of thing you'd stroll down Cohasset's Main Street in.

Which is not to say that Brooke is narrow-minded when it comes to fashion.

"I like all different styles of clothes," she said. Her two senior prom gowns are very different — her favorite is white eyelet and elegant in a romantic sort of way. She's also at home in ratty football jerseys.

There is one exception — "I hate hippie type stuff. I could never wear that."

Brooke's interests and activities are as varied as her taste in clothing.

She was a cheerleader for both football and basketball from the ninth grade on and a member of a swim team for nine years.

She did gymnastics for a year and served on the yearbook committee.

This year she joined the peer counseling program. It meant a lot to her.

"I liked what they did," Brooke said. It was a special group to be in."

As a peer counselor, she was assigned to a seventh grade home room. She enjoyed working with the students. She also did some tutoring. It is an experience she thinks she would like to continue with in some way in her future.

Brooke is proud of making the high honor roll all four quarters this year.

"Math is my specialty. Math and Spanish," she said. "I loved all my teachers. They all were awesome."

When asked what was the worst part of high school, she pondered the question a while.

"I liked the SATs least," she finally said.

Brooke plans to major in business and minor in Spanish in college. Right now, she's interested in a career in sales.

"I want to do something where you meet a lot of people."

She was accepted at every college she applied to — Dickinson, Gettysburg, University of Maine at Orono, University of New Hampshire — but her top choice, Fairfield University, put her on the wait list. She's signed up for UNH, but her heart is still at Fairfield.

No matter what happens and where she goes, she said it will be a big step from Cohasset High's Class of '90 with its 69 students. Meeting Brooke, you know she'll make the leap with grace and style.

Spring baccalaureate and commencement services, combined into one event, were held in TCU's Daniel-Meyer Coliseum. Presiding was Dr. William E. Tucker, TCU chancellor.

The honorary Doctor of Divinity degree was conferred on K. David Cole, a Disciples of Christ minister who serves as moderator of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) in the United States and Canada.

Kirkendall, of 83 Atlantic Avenue, received a bachelor of science degree with a major in public relations/media emphasis.

❑ Dawn Meehan makes the news again, and again it is because of her swimming prowess. Dawn is the New England Junior Olympics Champion in figures and solo events in synchronized swimming, and the proud owner of two gold medals. Dawn will be in the National Junior Olympics that will be held in August in Tampa. On top of all that, Dawn has been the Junior Olympic Champ for the past four years! She has also been the New England age group champion. And, at last year's Bay State Games, she won two medals.

❑ Parents and students alike are really excited this week, and are looking forward to graduation. Mike Millbury has promised to be the featured speaker...bet there will be a sell-out crowd at that event too, but Mike is used to that!!

❑ That's the news from here, please call me with your latest tidbit of news. It could even make you famous!

tographs of neighboring businesses with boats hugging the highway, antique dressers at roadside and flowers closer to the road than the 50 foot setback.

According to Henderson, the lawsuit the town plans to file is based on zoning regulations governing retail operations in a highway business district.

The regulations state that retail shops in those districts must sell from within the building, with a few exceptions. One exception is that the main product of a business may be sold outside, providing it is set back 50 feet from the highway.

In Musto's case, the town charges she violated zoning regulations when she sold potted and hanging plants outdoors and displayed clothing less than 50 feet from the highway.

Musto argues that her business and the outdoor displays must be grandfathered because she rents a non-conforming building. The building itself is less than 50 feet from the highway.

She also contends that prior businesses in the building were permitted to display their products outdoors.

"When I rented this building, I was under the impression I could continue doing business as Farmer's Pride and the yarn shop had," Musto said. Both businesses displayed their wares outdoors.

Musto said she moved her business to the present site from Cohasset Village on December 1. She made the move to secure additional parking space for what she described as a very successful business with a loyal clientele.

"I rented with the intent to sell clothing and flowers," Musto said. She also said she spent considerable money remodeling the premises to upgrade the appearance and condition of the exterior and interior of the building.

In December, she sold Christmas trees outside the building.

"The building inspector wanted the Christmas trees set back 15 feet from the road," Musto recalled. She complied. Musto's understanding based on conversations with the building inspector, Robert Egan, was that there would be no problem as long as there was a 15-foot setback.

"I was not contacted by anyone from town hall except the building inspector," Musto said.

Musto's problems came to a head when the building inspector wrote her a letter May 7 putting her on notice that she could not conduct outside sales. Musto went ahead with her displays of plants and clothing for Mother's Day.

Musto's display particularly infuriated Melinda Mincolla, owner of the neighboring Design in Bloom florist shop.

Mincolla appeared before the selectmen at their May 14 meeting and complained about the way the town allowed Musto to flout the rules. Characterizations of Musto's displays by Mincolla and the selectmen troubled the boutique owner.

There were no truckloads of flowers, Musto countered.

She said she only brought the plants to the business in her Cadillac and only made two trips. In addition to a small assortment of potted azaleas, chrysanthemums and geraniums, Musto had 30 bouquets and some hanging plants displayed near the shop, she said.

Musto says she can't believe there were complaints that her display blocked visibility for motorists entering and exiting Brewster Street.

"There were only three or four plants on the stone wall," she said.

Musto said the clothing displays are primarily restricted to a display rack under the shop's awning with a few items displayed on the awning itself.

Musto's mannequin came in for comments about skimpy bikinis that mystify her.

"My clientele ranges in age from 25 to 75," she said. "I sell the bikinis to women between 40 and 45. They are very tasteful.

"It's nothing you wouldn't see on the beaches of Cohasset."

She hopes to negotiate a mutually agreeable solution with the town.

"I'm just trying to do business," Musto said.

Henderson said the town is always open to a settlement that benefits the town. If the parties are unable to come to an amicable resolution, Henderson said the town will file suit in Norfolk Superior Court. Henderson will ask the court for a permanent injunction against outside displays and sales and may seek imposition of fines that could go as high as $100 a day for each day Musto violates the zoning laws.

Historical society opens June 16

The Cohasset Historical Society will open its summer museum season at Cohasset center with an open house at the Capt. John Wilson Historical House and the Maritime Museum, Saturday, June 16.

The two Society museums will be open each afternoon except Mondays from then until Sept. 30. Regular admission to each of the museum buildings will be $1.50 except opening day when the public is invited to visit free of charge. (Historical Society members and their guests are entitled to admission without charge during the entire season).

The Capt. Wilson House is an 1810 Cohasset Sea Captain's home now furnished as with early artifacts and artwork from the old homes of the town, and the Maritime Museum contains extensive collections relating to Cohasset's "Age of Sail" when this seacoast village was a fishing and mercantile port.

This summer a museum shop will be maintained in the Capt. Wilson House, selling a number of interesting items produced by the Society and relating to Cohasset's history. Included will be both volumes of the town history, a biographical paperback of many of the town's "Deep Sea Captains," also Pairpoint glass cup plates of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse, and other unique items. Orders will be taken for special reproductions of major Society artworks showing Cohasset paintings and prints. At the Society museums, special group tours may be arranged. This summer a volunteer committee at the Capt. Wilson House will be available to guide visitors through the early home.

The Historical Society's museums on Elm Street at Cohasset Center present a view of Cohasset as it was in the past, an age dramatically different from our own modern age.

Changing times

Every ending is a beginning. And sometimes lives move full circle.

This is a time of endings and beginnings for the Cohasset Mariner.

Readers don't usually like change in their newspapers. So we handle change slowly and cautiously because we value our readers.

Still some changes are unavoidable.

John Magadieu, who has worked at Mariner Newspapers for four years and served as editor of the Cohasset Mariner for four months left the paper last week.

Magadieu decided it was time for his career to move along a different course. We wish him well.

Patricia Desmond was appointed immediately to fill the position by Robert Flavell, the executive editor of the Mariner group.

She officially took her position at the close of the business day last Friday. Saturday morning someone from Cohasset telephoned her home in Hingham to make sure a press release would be printed.

This is Desmond's second time as editor of the Cohasset Mariner.

She began her career in journalism in 1966 at the Quincy Patriot Ledger. In 1981 she was editor of the Cohasset Mariner. She left the Mariner group back in 1983. The newspaper she created after leaving the organization, The Woman's Journal, no longer exists. In 1985 she became assistant editor of the Hingham Journal. From 1986 to 1989, she worked on the features desk of the Boston Herald as a copy editor.

She has been back at the Mariner, working as a reporter out of the Marshfield office since last October.

Over the years, she has changed and grown. She looks forward to renewing old friendships in Cohasset and to meeting the current community leaders.

Desmond loves writing. She loves working in the field of newspapers.

She also loves her family.

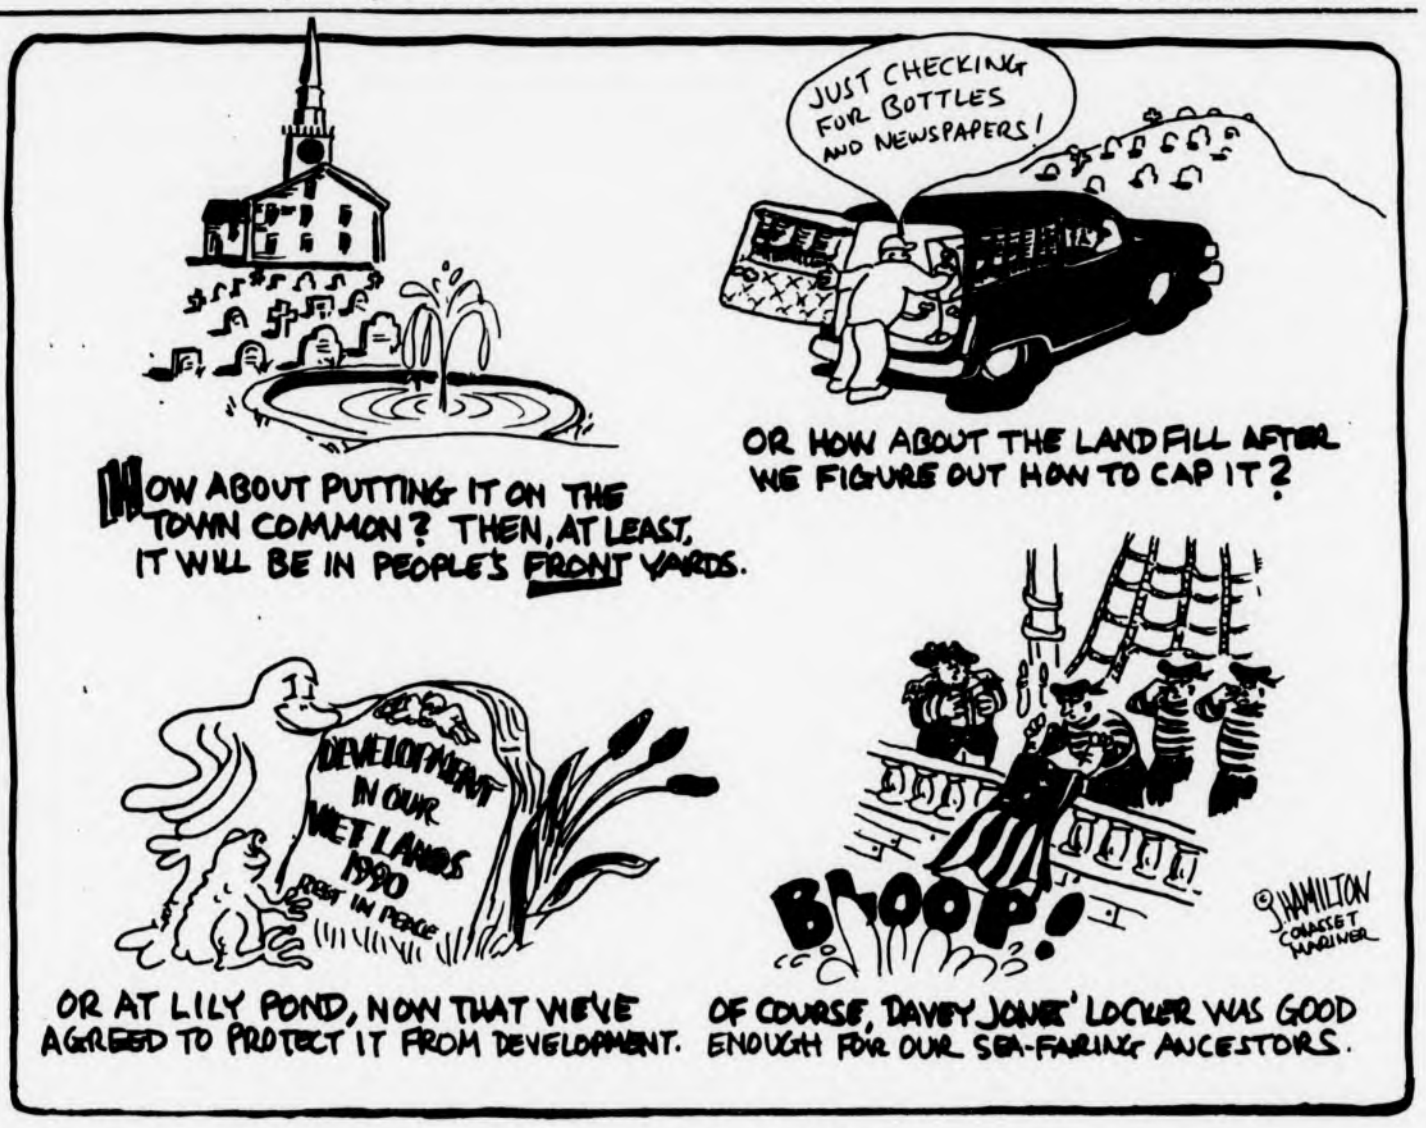
Her daughter June is a 1988 graduate of Hingham High School. June is now living in Weymouth where she works as a nanny.

Desmond's son, Tim, is in grade 5 at Foster School in Hingham. His activities include the study of kung fu at the Wah Lum Academy in Cohasset.

Desmond plans few changes in the way the newspaper operates and those few changes are being implemented to improve on what the Mariner has been trying to accomplish since it began — to keep the community informed and provide a forum for different viewpoints.

Letters to the editor from people in town will always have a place. Good taste and court rulings on libel will be the prime consideration in editing any controversial letters. On occasion, letters and other copy from the community will be edited to fit the space.

There's an old joke about financial reality in the news business that takes the legendary motto of the New York Times "All the news that's fit to print," and turns it slightly about — "All the news that fits."



Newspapers are indeed a business.

Sometimes we can't devote as much space as we'd like to an issue or a story. But we do the best we can.

Even an editor with the best possible intensions can make an error.

People make mistakes. That's how you know they are human.

But we promise to do our best to continue a tradition that's built on a firm foundation of caring about Cohasset.

An open meeting and public discussion will be held in Town Hall tonight concerning alternate sites for the proposed new cemetery. It seems that there are enough residents that don't want a new cemetery in their back-yards.

Letters

Some people do care

To the Editor:

Recently a request was made to Mr. Donald Staszko of the chamber of commerce to have a handicapped space assigned at the Super Stop & Shop to accommodate a van with a lift. This requires two parking spaces.

Some wheelchair users who need a mechanized lift to assist them will be thrilled to see that Mr. Staszko did arrange for this space, near the left entrance to the store.

The family and friends of the physically handicapped are grateful to Mr. Staszko and the town departments who made this space available.

Now, there is a need for the public to be aware of the importance of this gesture to the handicapped — by not leaving shopping carts in these spaces and by not parking there, live or otherwise, unless they are eligible.

It is a way of showing the handicapped that there is concern for their needs and that we do care.

Batting 1000

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

The season is just beginning and it's 0-2 for the Batboy's team.

Last year he was on a farm team that couldn't lose. This year he's moved to the majors and a team that needs at least one more pitcher.

Standing around the sidelines, I get to hear the other parents grumbling.

I've said it before and I'll say it again: I don't understand this whole sports thing.

My son loves to play baseball. He has ever since he was two. He's just been deprived as an athlete because he has a mother who would rather sit at home than on the bleachers.

But I'm trying. I know 11-year-old boys should be involved in sports. I understand there's a time and place for everything — and my time to read and be warm will come after this macho season.

Other mothers yell things like "good cut" when some kid strikes out. By the end of this season I want to yell something dumb like that at least once. It must have some meaning.

It's at a time like this that I wish I were married. Now this is not an idle wish. I've wished it actively almost since the day I took Batboy home from the hospital. I want someone else to sit in the chilly spring weather and watch Batboy play while I process words on my computer or curl up in bed and read.

Do I think someone else really would take over a big chunk of my childcare? Not in this lifetime. Hey, I'd probably be married if that were a realistic possibility.

Now it's not that I don't enjoy being with my Batboy. I like the Science Museum and take-out food as well as anyone I know.

It's just that over the years Batboy and I have grown in different directions. He likes video games, warfare and sports. I like classic rock, live theater and walking in the sunshine.

I don't expect him to come along with me. But he's not old enough to go his own way. And I know that when he is old enough to be on his own, I'll be crushed.

When I was young I expected my parents to watch my activities.

I was just about Batboy's age when I played the villian in a production of Pinochio. (I played the Red Fox.) My parents had to listen to my simple lines over and over and then I expected them to tell me they were proud. I remember fishing for the compliment I longed for until I got my father to say he thought the play went well.

My father wasn't the sort of man who parted easily with compliments. I know I wanted him to offer one just once without being coached.

I hope my Batboy understands that I may not enjoy baseball but I'm very proud of him.

Did I mention he got on base both times he was up at bat this week?

Mary Jeanette Murray offers her views on budget

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset, on the floor of the house of representatives last week said, "I am tired of adjectives including the word 'Gimmick' for every tax cutting proposal in this budget. I have heard from my people who are opposed to new taxes, especially without cutting first.

"It is time for all my colleagues to listen to the people and support this Amendment. Those who do not support cuts and this 'mini-Gramm-Rudman' amendment should recall what Ted Koppel told the man in the corner office — 'You just don't get it, do you?' "

House okayed deficit buster plan a budget-balancing amendment that would require the Legislature and the Governor to maintain a balanced budget or face automatic, across-the-board cuts.

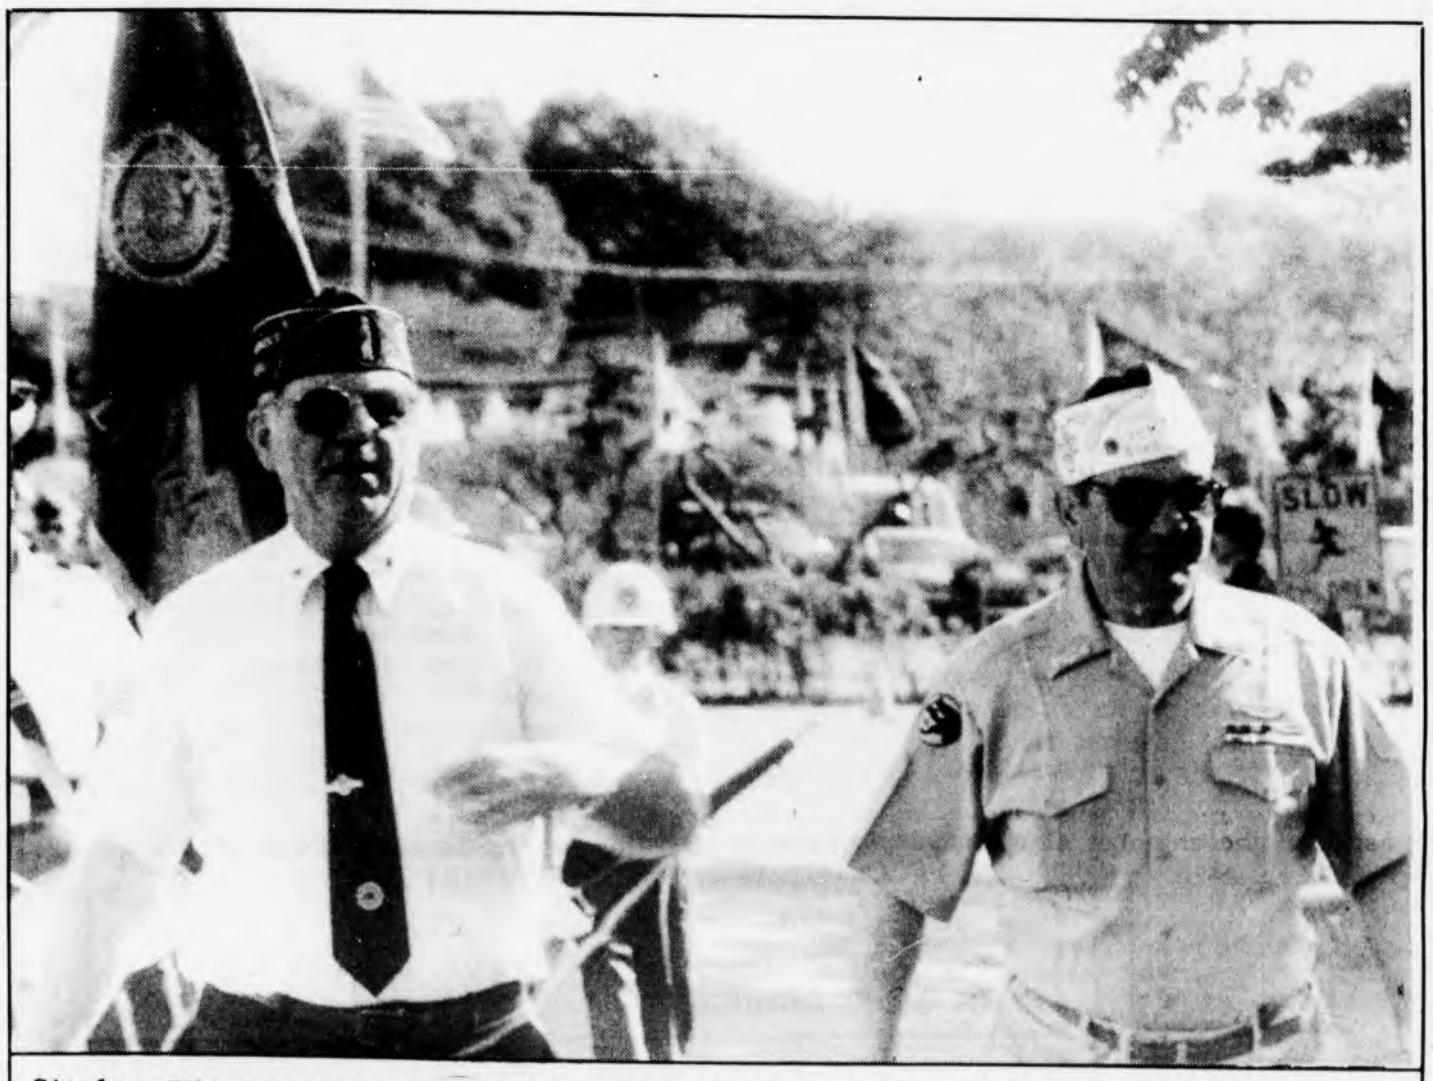
"The so-called 'mini Gramm-Rudman' amendment, modeled after federal budget-balancing legislation, was included in the FY '91 state budget. The amendment which is identical to legislation I co-sponsored," stated Rep. Murray. "It was adopted on a voice vote when the Democratic leadership realized it was destined to prevail, if the roll were called. The leadership's hope is that the automatic cuts will be removed in the conference committee on the budget."

However, the Senate version of the tax bill contains a comparable automatic cut under which the Legislature would be forced to vote again on the laws that create the so-called budget-busters, if their spending goes beyond a fixed cap. The House has not yet voted on the Senate tax bill.

Under the amendment, co-authored by Murray and Rep. Richard T. Moore, D-Uxbridge, a reconstituted Revenue Advisory Board would review spending and revenue each quarter of the fiscal year. If revenue did not meet spending, the board would indicate the percentage cut that would restore the balance.

The auditor would review that, and make his own recommendations. The governor and legislature would then have 30 days to raise revenue, borrow, or cut the budget in order to avert the automatic cuts.

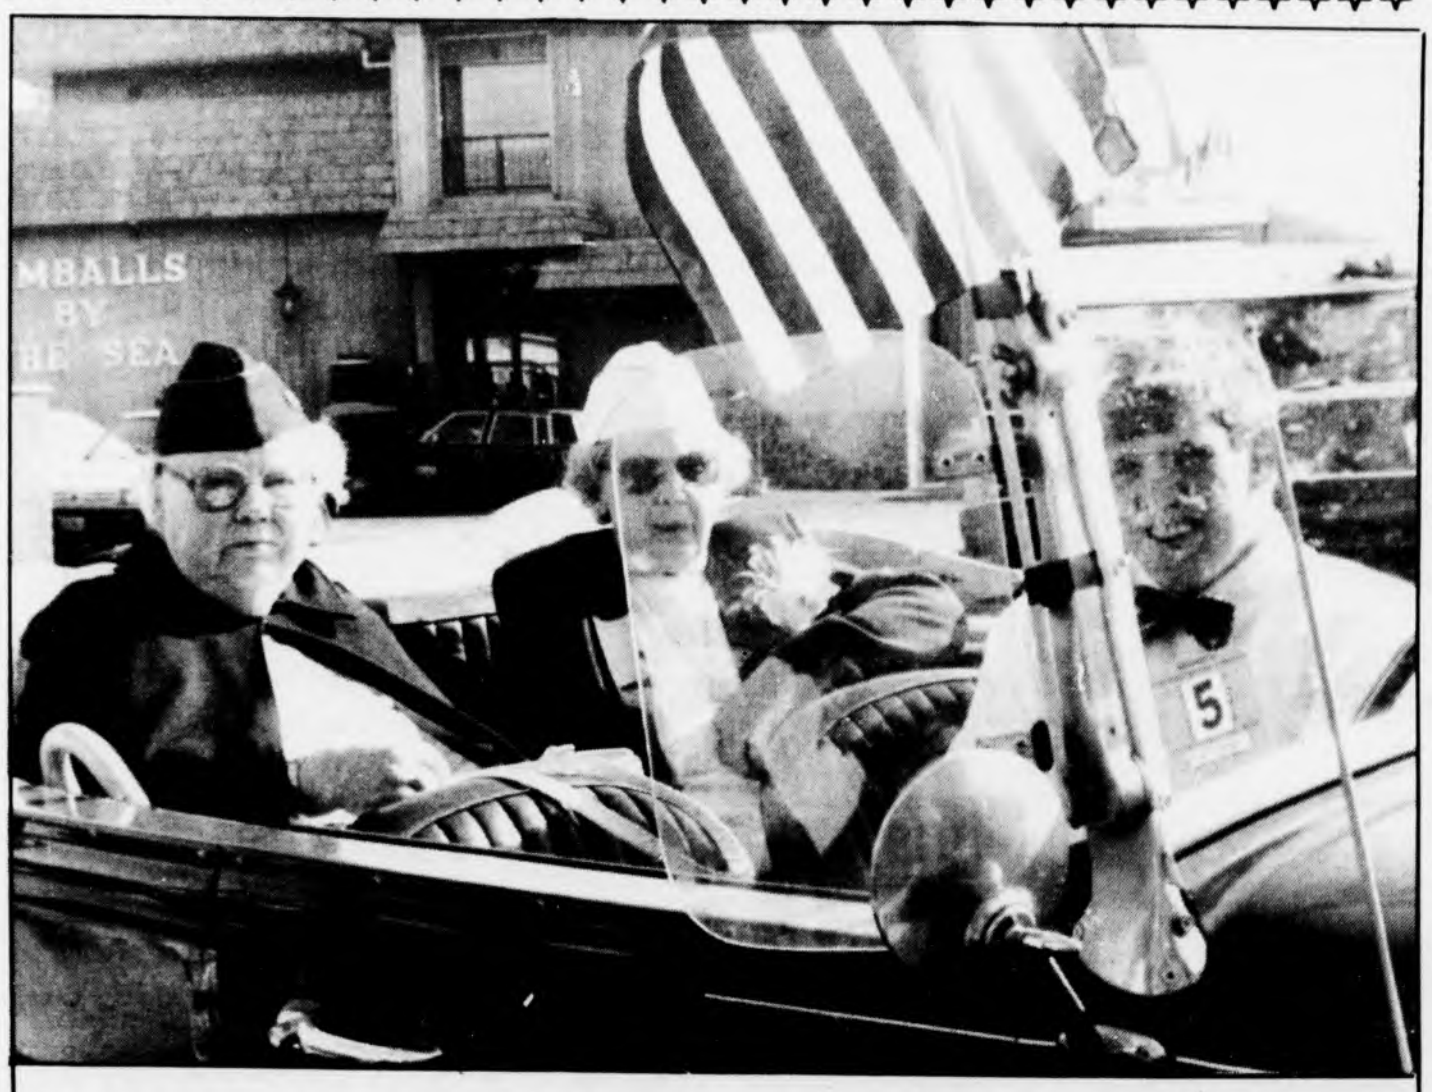
If revenue is higher than projected, it would go into the commonwealth stabilization fund.



Moore said in debate that aid to cities and towns and debt service would be exempt from the cut.

House Minority Leader Steven D. Pierce, R-Westfield, supported the amendment. He said it may not be perfect, but "We've got to start managing the budget process and stop reacting to budget crises."

In an interview after the vote, Rep. Murray said it was not expected that the automatic cuts would apply to those entitlements mandated elsewhere in state law. She agreed that such a limitation would exclude almost half the budget, which is now at $13.3 billion.



Also, Murray said to the automatic cuts, "The hope is you'd never get to actually let the across the board cuts take effect, but it would act as a kind of threat that there will be cuts the people really don't want to live with."

While she conceded that the amendment could be dismissed by the budget conference committee, she expressed the hope that it might be married somehow with the concept contained in the Senate tax bill.

Postal workers worry about the loose dogs

Every day is dog day to the people who bring mail to your door. Almost 3,000 letter carriers were attacked by unrestrained dogs last year — nine attacks every working day. Boston postmaster Tom Ranft relates several such incidents that prompted headlines around the country.

A letter carrier in Fort Worth, Texas, was mauled a year ago by a 100-pound rottwieler dog. The attack occurred while she was delivering the mail at a home she passed every day. Normally behind a fence, the dog was standing on the porch that day. The dog attacked "out of nowhere" and began chewing on her elbow. It took 150 stitches to repair her arm.

A letter carrier in Mt. Clemens, Miss., needed about 30 stitches in her legs, arms and chest after she was attacked by a 150-pound rottwieler dog about three years ago.

A letter carrier in Chattanooga, Tenn., was bitten on the ankle by a small gray Terrier. Because the dog escaped before it could be tested, the carrier had to undergo painful rabies shots.

In Abbeville, La., a carrier was delivering a certified letter when a German shepherd dog leaped between its owner's legs, knocked open a screen door and bit the carrier on the arms as he tried to protect this face and throat. The wounds required 160 stitches.

"We've had enough such incidents in Boston and we don't want any more," Ranft says. "That's why we ask customers to keep their pets on a strong leash, behind a secure fence or in the house with doors securely shut when the letter carrier is in the area."

The problem is so serious the Postal Service is making a determined effort to find a way to provide home mail delivery without risk of life and limb to its employees.

Postmaster Ranft says a letter carrier may withhold mail if threatened by a dog. In some extreme cases, mail has been interrupted for an entire neighborhood.

In addition to letter carriers, many other citizens, including children, also suffer from bites inflicted by pet dogs every year. The National Safety Council in Chicago reports 132 deaths from dog bites in 1987, the latest year for which information is available.

"Our carriers are very much aware of the danger of dog bites," says Ranft. "They learn to stay alert and to protect themselves under attack. But in the long run, we must rely heavily on the support and cooperation of the community to help end these painful and costly injuries.

New Wave makes music at CHS

A new musical group has emerged at CHS this year. They call themselves the "Waves" (Meredith Hanson, Barbara Migliaccio, Maggie Moore, Carole Smith, Erin Sutherland and Ali Welz). Under the direction of Bryan Marks they have been performing for Cohasset audiences this spring. Their repertoire has something for everyone from classical to Broadway and pop — add some choreography and a touch of humor and you get an idea why they have been so well received. They will soon sing for the Rotary Club on June 11.

The Plymouth County Education Association recently held their annual awards banquet. Those from Cohasset that should be congratulated for their contributions are as follows:

Honorary life membership were Delia DiBenedetto, Keardin Dunn, W. Thomas Hughes, Edwin Leach and John Leary.

Professional service award recipients were John C. Creamer and Patricia Wunschel.

Waves make music at CHS...

sparked the fast-paced cabaret style presentation. This has become a favorite of many concert goers.

The CHS music department also recently held separate vocal and instrumental concerts. Both evenings ,showcased the truly fine musicians Cohasset can boast about.

The Spring Choral Concert featured the 50-voice Jr. High Chorus, Barbershop Chorus, and award-winning Sr. High Chorus, who recently took first-place in a festival competition in Maine. One judge scored the chorus at 96 of a possible 100 points.

The instrumental concert featured the wind ensemble. They performed a greatly varied program with outstanding musicality and ensemble sensitivity. Also featured was the fun-loving jazz ensemble who performed toe-tapping tunes in their fluorescent socks.

Directors Miss Foley and Mr. Marks wish to thank the Art Boosters, parents, students and community for another successful musical year.

For anyone interested in viewing the parent workshop held on May 16, Talents Unlimited will be happy to know that the discussion was video-taped and available for loan in the school libraries at both the Osgood and the Deer Hill. Talents Unlimited is a program which utilizes creative thinking skills to accentuate the talents each child possesses. Half the teachers at the two elementary schools have taken the training and the other half will be able to take it in the fall.

Drains Run Slow?

You'll never have a slow running, or clogged drain again! The secret? Clean drains don't run slow.

Slow drains, or periodic clogs, are SIGNALS that a thick layer of GOOK is choking your pipes. Grease, hair, and other waste stick to your pipes, with every use. This gook deposits along the entire length of the pipe. It chokes your pipes gradually, as it gets thicker and thicker.

Conventional drain openers can't fix slow drains. They react chemically on the surface of the gook. To be effective, they must remain in contact with the waste. Even a small tunnel through the gook lets them flow out to the sewer, leaving the gook behind.

In the past, the only way to remove this build-up was to rooter your pipes. An expensive, temporary measure.

Now, with just a few minutes each month, you can easily clean out your pipes... and KEEP them clean with Plumb Clean. Its totally unique formula clings, and penetrates deep into the gook. That is what allows it to liquefy even years of build-up. Plumb Clean will clean the entire length of your pipes. It will make your drains run like new, when used as directed. This penetrating action is so revolutionary, we stand behind Plumb Clean with a money-back guarantee!

Saves Money. A 1 lb. container of Plumb Clean holds up to 41 drain treatments. Even if drain openers could fix slow drains, it would take over 10 quart bottles to get the same number of treatments. Plumb Clean costs about 35¢ per treatment. We don't know of anything that cleans drains for less.

Safe Too. Conventional drain openers are dangerous chemicals. They can injure eyes on contact. They can release deadly vapors, in some situations. Some may damage your fixtures. Plumb Clean will not burn skin, or eyes. It will not release harmful fumes. When used as directed, it is 100% safe for people, and of course, all plumbing.

So, if your drains are giving you a SIGNAL, act now. Get safe, guaranteed Plumb Clean today!

Girl Scout leader thanked

Cohasset Girl Scout Volunteer Rebecca Bates-McArthur recently received the Thanks Badge from Patriots' Trail Girl Scout Council. Created in 1912, the Thanks Badge is the most prestigious award in Girl Scouting. It is awarded once in a lifetime and honors individual members whose service is so significantly above and beyond the call of duty that no other award would be appropriate.

Bates-McArthur has been dedicated to Girl Scouting for most of her life, serving the town of Cohasset and Patriots' Trail Council in many ways. She has been a leader as well as a Service Unit and Cookie Chairperson. Through the years, Bates-McArthur has always inspired Girl Scouts to excel; she continues that tradition today as a Cadette and Senior Troop leader.

Candidates to square-off

The Republican convention endorsed candidate State Representative Peter G. Torkildsen and State Senator A. Paul Cellucci will face-off in a debate in their race for Lt. Governor of Massachusetts on Pierson to Person, Thursday, May 31, 8 to 9 p.m. on Continental Cablevision.

The program is hosted by Wigmore A. Pierson who will moderate the discussion on the full range of issues including PROP 2 1/2, new taxes, affordable housing, and the restoration of the Old Colony rail line to the South Shore.

Persons wishing to attend this debate should be at the North Scituate studio by 7:30 p.m. For further information call Robert Belliveau at 545-0643.

Pierson to Person is aired live on Channel 53 in Hull, Hingham, Hanover, Norwell, and Scituate on Channels 3 and 53 in Cohasset each Thursday, 8 to 9 p.m.

Bloodmobile set for June 5

The next Cohasset Community Triannual Red Cross Bloodmobile will be held on Tuesday, June 5, from 2 to 7 p.m. at the Unitarian First Parish House, 23 North Main St., Cohasset.

Groups that will participate, as in the past, and their donor promoters are Seavey Engineering (Gayle Seavey); Webb-Norfolk (Peg Faletra and Bill Handrahan); Rotary (Wayne Robbins); Masons (Don Harrold); Legion (Steve Wigmore); Unitarian First Parish (Susan Grant); Second Congregational (Vi Tuthill); St. Stephens (Karen Gammon); St. Anthony's (Carol Riley); Independents (Mary Brennock); Glastonbury (Pat Hammond), and school teachers (Carol Riley); and other miscellaneous donors who donate for specific units.

Any other groups in town that are interested in becoming active participants in this life giving community service would be more than welcome.

Please contact Chairman Al Odermatt, 383-1283 or 878-3954, or Corinne Cahill, Coordinator, 383-9265.

All persons in good health, age 17 or older, weighing more than 110 pounds should consider being a part of this worthy service; and enjoy the pleasure that comes from giving their blood to save the life of another.

This is a good opportunity for those whose relatives or friends have recently received blood to replace it so that blood will be available for others.

Loan services offered

Premiere Funding, Inc., is offering assistance in identifying the most attractive sources of loans for refinancing present mortgages and for obtaining financing for new mortgages.

Premiere Funding works with approximately 20 national and regional lending houses to locate rates and terms that best suit each client's needs, and to find funding for borrowers with varying credit ratings. The borrower pays minimal fees to Premiere Funding, since the firm is paid through commissions from the lending institution.

Premiere Funding was founded by Richard Lahar of Quincy and Mary Fairman of Cohasset. Lahar had spent 18 years in the banking industry prior to starting Premiere Funding. Fairman has been in the mortgage consulting business for the past seven years.

Fairman is vice president of Premiere. "We can save people a lot of 'shopping' for rates and programs," she said. "And since we are paid by commissions from the lending institutions, there is no reason for people not to make use of us. About the only fee that is given directly to us by the borrower is the small application fee that pays for the credit report and appraisal, something they would have to pay anywhere."

For more information about the mortgage consulting services of Premiere Funding, or for a brochure, call 383-2212.

Genealogists meet

The South Shore Genealogical Society will meet Saturday, June 9, at 1:30 p.m. at the James Library, West Street, Norwell.

Topic: Genealogical Fun. Following the meeting those who wish may do research in the James Library. The public is invited.

For more information call Susan Painter (617) 878-8247.

Daffodil sales help ACS

Scores of volunteers, businesses, hospitals, schools and professionals in nine communities teamed up to achieve a record-breaking greeting for spring on the South Shore by buying nearly 130,000 golden daffodils and raising over $50,000 for the American Cancer Society this year.

That was the result reported by Pauline and Dennis Sweeney of Quincy, co-chairs of the cancer society's South Shore unit Daffodil Days, embracing the communities of Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Scituate and Weymouth.

"This was our most successful Daffodil Days ever," Pauline Sweeney said, "and we were tops in the state among some 40 units of the society. I just can't say enough thanks to all the people who worked on it and to the many businesses and institutions that supported it so generously. Altogether we sold 259 boxes of 500 blooms each, making nearly 130,000 blooms."

The Sweeneys singled out for special thanks the following in Cohasset: Cohasset Savings Bank, Cohasset Schools, Michael Gill, Pilgrim Cooperative Bank, Rockland Trust Co. and Al Odermatt.

Pack 38 attends Scout Day at Fenway

Pack 38 was represented at the Scout Day at Fenway Park. The scouts included: Mark Equi, Evan Murphy, B. J. Butman, Justin Maitland, Todd Bestick, and Boyd Stepan. It was a 4-2 win for the Red Sox vs. the Milwaukee Brewers. The scouts had a grand time especially doing the "Wave."

Cohasset is going to be known for its racers. Some of the scouts who participated in the District Pinewood Derby in Whitman won. The packs from ten towns comprised the District Derby. In the Wolf division James Simon placed second and Stefan Vanderweil placed third. In the Bear division Mark Equi placed third. In the Webelo division Dan Preston was third.

Advancements: Den 3 Justin Maitland: Bear, 1 gold and 1 silver Arrow.

Den 1 Kevin DeVito, Jaoh Paul Laugelle, Greg Boyne, Ben Ketchem, Luke Caldwell, Andrew Sorrentino and Ronald Nicycski all have earned their Wittle and Chip.

Congratulations to our Scouts advancing and participating in Pack 38's Cross-Over Ceremony. Our Tiger Cubs are: Justin Pratt, Jay Rasmussen, Grant Harmon, Michael Sanchez, Nicholas Lavigne, Brendon Smith, Eric Shea, John Crowley, Jin Figuerido, Pat O'Hayre, Chris Golden, Doug O'Brien, Matt Woodworth, Andrew Dennis, Andrew Kinch, and Jeoffrey McWilliams. They are now the Wolves. Our present Wolves will be working towards the Bear and the Bears will be working towards the Webelos.

The second year Webelos who enter Troop 28 B.S.A. are: Sean Cogill, Frank Judge, Anand Merchant, Dan Preston and Jerry Cogill.

A special thanks for the organization of the cross-over ceremony, is for the Bestick family — Carol, Earle (Scoutmaster Troop 28) and Earle Jr. BSA. Tom Judge has helped the Webelos advance to Boy Scouts.

Thank you to all our devoted Den Leaders and Assistants who donated their time to Pack 38. Without their efforts and support we would have no Cub Scout Pack. It was their commitment and the den meeting planning that enabled the Scouts to earn their achievements. In recognition to the dens for their leadership are: Den 1 Bonnie DeVito and Karen Laugelle; Den 2 Pat Baird; Den 3 Elaine Smoot and Heidi Maitland; Den 4 Tony Bruzzone and Den 5 Velma and Kevin Begley and Webelos Tom Judge. Den 3: Mrs. Olney.

Thanks also to Linda Farrag, who writes the newsletters and helps to coordinate the meetings. All of us thank the head of Pack 38, our Cubmaster Jeff Forsdick. Jeff helped Merle Brown and the Council at the District Pinewood Derby Race.

We would like to see our den leaders this year in September to begin our new registration. Pack 38 welcomes all parents who would like to become leaders or assistant leaders to notify Carol Bestick (1410) or Linda Farrag (9519). Teaching programs are given through the Old Colony Council and books and training materials are provided for from pack 38. We need your support and scouting is fun!

Dates to remember:

Pack 38 Summer Pack meetings:

June 27 (Wed.) . . . Picnic and archery at the Deer Hill School 6-8 p.m.

July 25 (Wed.) . . . Olympics at Deer Hill School 6-8 p.m.

Deer Hill students find new ideas in recycling

This week I have invited the fifth grade class at Deer Hill School to speak about their recent visit to the Recycling/Transfer Facility. We enjoyed having them. It is a great way to teach and to learn.

We are looking forward to having the sixth grade class of Deer Hill on June 4 at 10 a.m.

If your group would like a guided tour of the Recycling/Transfer Facility, please give me, Alix White, a call at 383-1829.

TROUBLESHOOTING AT THE RTF

Vandalism: There has been increased vandalism at the RTF: broken locks, damaged gates, stolen bins, plantings and broken bottles are just a few of the chronic acts of vandalism that go on at the RTF. A few weeks ago, someone even smashed through The Boutique's wall to steal returnable bottles that the Boy Scouts collect and redeem for their special projects. The cost of the stolen bottles: about $2. The cost to repair the broken wall: approximately $80. The plain and simple fact is that RTF money could be spent in better ways than repairing the damage of a few carousers. Don't trash the trash. If you hear any suspicious noises at the RTF during off hours, please call the police.

WHERE HAS ALL THE TRASH GONE

By Catie Campbell and Jennifer Byrnes
Grade 5
Deer Hill School

The fifth grade went on a field trip to the Cohasset Recycling Transfer station on May 7. It was the most unusual field trip we have ever been on. The first person we talked to was Ms. White, who told us that not all plastic can be recycled.

Mr. Hubbard told us that the soil produces its own heat. He put a thermometer in the soil to see if it was the right temperature. If it is over 140°C then you can't use the soil.

Mr. Laugelle and Mrs. Kissane let us shred up plastic containers in the machine. It was really fun, but some people thought they would get their hands caught. Mr. Laugelle told them they wouldn't.

Mr. Bigley told us that no bottles or hard covered books go in with the newspapers. Bags of newspapers should contain only newspapers.

Mr. Lehr told us about glass bottles. You shouldn't leave the caps or rings on the bottles. You also have to remove all metal from the bottles.

Before recycling, you could see every kind of trash. Now, with recycling, people ask "Where has all the trash gone?" Hopefully, in the right place!

The fifth grade would like to give a special thanks to all the people who took the time to show us around the Cohasset Recycling Transfer Station.

HELP SAVE TREES

Dear Readers:

Today, I would like to encourage you to save trees. Did you know that a stack of newspaper three feet high is actually one tree? Therefore, we must recycle newspapers. When we lose trees such as fir, birch, ash, pine, spruce, cedar and maple, we loose wood for our children's toys and sleds, wood for our houses, pianos, pencils, skis, boats, tennis rackets, and so on.

People in the rainforests are beginning to die because the trees for medicine are being chopped down. Because the rainforests are being cut down, animals are losing their homes and will become extinct. Please help our environment and the people and animals in the rainforests. It is up to us.

There is a recycling center at the Cohasset Landfill. Please recycle products such as newspaper, glass, bottles, and plastic.

Thank you,
Billy St. Croix

By John Kinchla

Pony League Action Week 3

The Cohasset Pony League Teams suffered some setbacks in week three of the season. But the combined teams in the program are still playing over .600 ball.

The Cohasset Heights Pony Yankees lost to Scituate 12 to 3 on May 22. Patrick Reynold made his first start of the season and lasted three innings. Mike Riley followed with two innings. Pete Fahey pitched the final inning and provided an RBI double. Coach Brian Fahey reported that the boys' woke up late in this one; and their mood may have been reflected by the weather.

In a battle taking place tonight, the Sestito Landscaping Pirates will be playing the Cohasset Heights Yankees in the "Pony League baseball battle for Cohasset."

Major League Action Week 3 Report

Alco Oil Players of the Week Awards went to Spensley Chevrolet's Athletics Jonah Berger who pitched his second no-hitter of the season in a 13 to 0 win against the Cohasset Firefighters Dodgers. According to umpire Jeff Bryant, "Jonah was unbeatable; and the A's were powering the ball against excellent Dodger pitching." (See May 24 recap below).

Friday, May 18, The Dean Witter Mets got off to a fast start in this thriller with the Leo's Exxon Red Sox. The Mets premier pitcher Eric Henry was pitted against the Red Sox's 11 year old ace, Joe Magner. The Sox lost in a squeaker 3 to 2.

Saturday, May 19 the National Abatement Pirates were defeated by Scituate in a battle 11 to 8.

Wednesday May 23, the Leo's Exxon Red Sox avenged their loss against the Mets by beating Spensley Chevrolet Athletics 6 to 0. Red Sox 12 year old ace, Greg Stevens pitched the shutout. Nevin Bunstein usually the A's catcher pitched good ball for the A's despite the loss.

Thursday May 24, the Spensley Chevrolet Athletics beat the Cohasset Firefighters Dodgers by an 13 to 0 score. A's pitching was provided by Jonah Berger. Jonah also hit a base-clearing to ensure the win. Dodger pitching was provided by Grant Emde and Matt Lewis.

Minor League Action

Mass 4X4 Association Minor League Player of the Week Award goes to Dave Gomes of the Athletics. Mark's tag at the plate of a tying run in the A's game against the Braves preserved an 8 to 6 win. Mark has also been swinging a big bat for the A's as they charge to the front of the 10/11 Minor League Division. In this game the sister combo of Sara and Heather Proctor sparkled at the plate and on the field.

Saturday May 19, the Giants beat the Braves 4 to 1. Great pitching by Bob Moody, excellent catching by Sean Cogill and plenty of timely hits together with superior fielding by the Giants was the difference.

Thursday, May 24 the Giants beat the Orioles 6 to 1.

Farm League Action

All Farm League Teams played last week. There were too many stars to report.

Please report all game results by calling 575-4208.

battled for improved league standing and team respect all season. The Giants under Coach Lot Bates have also steadily improved with each game. The team has been winning and now are challenging for the top spot. They appear to be peaking for a final run at first place.

First baseman and pitcher Robby Moody has contributed as has catcher and third basemen Sean Cogill. Larry Adams gives the Giants two way firepower. Larry plays first base and bats fourth. Josh Flanagan holds down second base, while Jacqueline Hurley patrols centerfield and hits with power. Slick Ryan McWilliams is at shortstop and Billy St. Croix alternates with Sean Cogill behind the plate.

The battling Giants will have to be reckoned with this year as they have depth in all positions.

Charles Toppan plays the left field power alley, Brian Hurley is in right field, Patrick Ridge plays both shortstop and outfield as does James Drybanski. The Giants have a bright future as their success has been provided by an excellent defense.

Profile on the Cohasset Minor League (Dean Witter) Mets

The Minor 8/9 Mets, are currently in a battle for first place standings within the six team minor league division. According to all reports the Mets have not lost a game.

The Mets success has been due to their pitching and speedy base running.

Pitching outstanding ball for the Mets have been Mike Baird, Steve Kovach, and Bill Good. Catching has been provided by Jay Whoriskey and Steve Kovach and Andy McAuliffe.

Infield duties have been held by several Mets including Andy Curran, Sean Parkinson, and Mike Baird. Other Infielders playing outstanding baseball are Charles Dean, Greg Parkinson and the speedy Bill Bood.

Playing great ball in the outfield have been Elizabeth Pierson, Andy Kinch and Maura Duffy.

Coaching this year's Mets are Bill McAuliffe, Charles Dean and John Whoriskey.

The Mets were sponsored this year by Dean Witter Investments.

Profile on the Cohasset Minor League (Cohasset VFW) Pirates

The 8/9 Pirates, under the coaching of Bob Leahy and Bob McDonald are rebuilding and are currently tied for third place within the six team minor 8/9 league division.

The Pirates success has been due to their diligence on the field. Speedy centerfielder Ben Peterson covers a lot of ground for the Pirates chasing down fly balls. B.J. Butman, Chris Olney and Garrett Williams play either left or right field and provide the Pirates with a fearsome outfield corps.

The Pirates are improving and should play better than .500 ball within the next few weeks. Adam Leahy has been pitching strongly. First baseman Pete Minnar makes no errors. Jamie Simons at second base and Bob McDonald at shortstop are a smooth double play combination.

Mark Equi anchors homeplate at catcher and has been booming the ball. Patrick Gaughen and Jamie DeMichele have been pitching. The team started the season with five veteran third graders and six rookie second graders.

Team attitude and persistence have also been a factor in the improving performance of the Pirates. All the players have contributed both on the field and in the dugout to a positive team attitude this season.

Lafayette Hotel executives Keith Polak, Bryan O'Connel of Cohasset, center, and Kevin Giannino view the Stanley Cup and other hockey trophies during last week's playoff action. The Stanley Cup is the large one.

Youth soccer team trounces Hanover

By Carol Riley

Sunny skies brought success to many of Cohasset's Coastal Youth Soccer League teams last weekend. Here are the results from some of the participating teams:

The undefeated Boys Under-14-1 squad scored a 4-2 triumph over Hanover, with sixth grader, Eric Henry scoring a hat trick (one goal headed in after a throw in from Chris Kondrat); and the fourth goal scored by Chris Kondrat.

Boys Under 12-1 team lost to Pembroke 3-1, with Joey Magner scoring the single goal for Cohasset. Kevin McKenna, as always was outstanding in goal, while Taylor Devin was especially strong at midfield. Last Saturday, this team defeated Hull 3-1 in a friendly non-league game at home. Goals were scored by Brian Riley and Dylan Walsh (2). Matt O'Connor and Matt Rossi were strong at midfield; Justin Buckley made many professional moves defensively.

Boys Under 12-2 team whipped Hingham on their home turf 3-0, with goals scored in a heavy downpour by Tom Greco, and Pat Reynolds (2). Greco recovering from a broken arm played an excellent game. Also playing well were Jon Hislop, Kennie Leahy and Chris McKenna in goal. The previous weekend this team lost a close one to Marshfield 2-0. Tobey Horn, Kevin O'Donnell, Dean Volungis and goalkeeper, Chris McKenna were the stars of this game, according to coach Stanko Bubanja.

Boys Under 10-1 triumphed over Duxbury last Saturday 9-2 with goals scored by: Greg Bilton (5), Nate Cotter (2), Pat Hurley and Matt Verrochi. Andrew Singleton was very strong at forward and Brian Donovan shone on defense to aid in this victory. The previous weekend this team beat Middleboro on their field 1-0 with Colton Ralston scoring the game winning goal. Michael Rossi was strong and halfback, while Morgan Sandell played superbly at forward.

In girls soccer action, the Girls Under 16-1 team lost to Duxbury 3-0 on the weekend of May 19. Outstanding play was seen by Colleen Fitzsimmons on defense, midfielder, Tracy Reardon and goalkeeper, Jennifer Knowles.

Girls Under 14-2 team overpowered Plymouth 3-0 last Sunday with goals by Megan Rhodes (2) and Erin Murphy. Melinda Johansen was a constant threat at forward, while Jill DeMoulin played great defense. Martina Snyder and Liz Corcoran dominated the midfield. This team scored a huge win over Pembroke 8-0 with goals by: Erin Murphy (3), Megan Rhodes (2), Melinda Johansen (2) and Andrea Mercurio. Jessica Jenkins was outstanding at midfield; Jessica Snow and Jemilah Afshar played great defense. In heavy rain this team lost to Hingham 2-1, with Erin Murphy scoring the lone goal for Cohasset. "Andrea Mercurio and Amy Silvia played strong defensively; Jessica Connor was superb at midfield," said coach Nino D'Urso.

Girls Under 12-1 team had a make-up game with Marshfield in the pouring rain on Wednesday, May 16. Although the game was tied 1-1 until the very end, with Cohasset's goal scored by Megan Fahey on an assist from Catie Campbell, the undefeated Marshfield team won with a final score of 2-1. It was an outstanding effort by the Cohasset girls, "all the players should be commended, especially the goalkeeper, Caroline Delima," said coach Sandy Theriault. This past weekend, the Girls Under 12-1 team in their next to last game of the season suffered a tough defeat by Middleboro. Final score: 2-0. Cohasset showed strong defense from Laura Slotnick and midfielders Jayne Singleton, Megan McNamara, Nicole Peterson and Chloe Chittick did their very best to hold back the Middleboro team.

Girls Under 10-2 team lost an away game to Pembroke 4-2, with goals scored by Jill Magner and Alexandra DeRosa. Goalkeeper Katie Donovan was brilliant in stopping a penalty shot; Kerry Dwyer and Jennifer Meehan were strong at forward.

John Hubbard, Ellery Clark and George Keating display the medals the won competing in the Senior Olympics. The three won 11 medals, eight of which were for power walking. Hubbard competed in the 65-69 age group, Keating in the 70-74 bracket and the elder statesman Clark walked in the 80 plus division.

Art Center member wins recognition

The collaboration of Hingham artist Syma and Boston architect Richard Bertman of Childs, Bertman, Tseckares, and Casendino Inc. recently made national news.

Two terra cotta colored precast concrete low-relief sculptures of winged dancers, each weighing two-and-a-half-tons, were hoisted by cranes to the 13th floor to become part of the exterior facade of Boston's newest office building, 116 Huntington Ave. The May 1 installation was covered by independent photographers, The Patriot Ledger, The Boston Herald, Channel 7 TV, and United Press International.

The 12-foot-tall Art Deco style figures are Greek-inspired 20th century caryatides dancing on top of waves that represent the water that once covered Back Bay.

South Shore dancer/choreographer Nikki Hu had posed as model for the initial sketches for the panel designs. The panels were fabricated from Syma's 12-foot-by-5-foot paper templates at PreCon Co. of Brampton, Ontario. The office building is the property of JMB/Urban Development Co. of Boston, developers of Copley Place.

This collaboration, as well as Syma's sculpted panels in Davis Square and on Symphony Road was created with architect Vcevold Strekalovsky (Strekalovsky and Hoit Inc.).

A member of Boston's Art and Architecture Committee, Syma was a speaker this April in Miami – as part of a forum on the possibilities and problems of linking art and architecture. The Miami Ceramics League also sponsored Syma's workshop on "Personal and Architectural Masks and Tiles," and she was guest artist at Miami Community College.

Rebecca Bates-McArthur was recently honored by the Patriots Trail Girl Scout Council for her work as a volunteer.

How much money is planted in your yard ?

Count it up. A couple of flowering shrubs, a hedge and a maple tree from the nursery could amount to as much as $600. You've probably made a considerable investment, in plants alone. A living investment that needs attention to grow.

Take this little quiz, to find out if your landscaping investment is increasing or decreasing in value:

- ☐ Are any of your bushes yellowish?
- ☐ Do any of your trees or shrubs have dead or dying branches?
- ☐ Did your flowering shrubs fail to bloom as well as expected ?
- ☐ Are insects nibbling holes in the leaves ?
- ☐ Are the leaves and branches sparse or stunted ?

If you answered yes to any of these, call us for a free , no-obligation survey and price quote. Our ornamental tree and shrub inspection, pest control and fertilization programs are designed to promote healthy and attractive plants. And healthy landscaping means a healthy increase in your property's value.

And, a champagne preview reception will be held Thursday evening at the Bancroft Invitational Gallery featuring artist Kay Brown and the Martin Street Collage Dance Company.

Tickets are also required for this special event. The show will remain on display through July 26.

A juried art exhibit, a juried photography exhibit and a children's art exhibit will be exhibited throughout the festival, while members of the South Shore Art Center will concurrently exhibit their work in the Dillon Gallery at the center.

Members of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset will hold a flower show, "Visions," Friday and Saturday, and on both Saturday and Sunday, an organ recital and several carillon concerts will be held at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church.

Some of the best regional craft artists have been invited to demonstrate their skills during the show.

For children, there will be drop-in workshops where youngsters can create their own piece of art.

For further information, call the art center at 383-9548.

Livingston Taylor to perform at art festival

Livingston Taylor will perform a benefit concert at 8 p.m. Friday, June 22, at the Nickerson Theatre in Norwell as part of the South Shore Art Center Festival.

Appearing with him on stage will be Leah Kunkle, sister of Mama Cass, who is a guest performer on his most recent album, "Life Is Good" on the Critique label.

Taylor recorded his first album"Livingston Taylor" in 1970 under the direction of producer Jon Landau who later found himself guiding Bruce Springsteen's career.

Taylor's gained recognition with the simultaneous success of his brother James.

In fact, all Taylor siblings are musical.

Kate and Alex have numerous records to their credit and Hugh, the youngest, is lead singer with Hughie and the Beaumonts.

Liv Taylor cut a second album in 1972, "Liv," and a third, "Over the Rainbow," in 1974.

He says he learned to play music on a guitar his brother Alex painted blue — because Elvis played a blue guitar — and has been playing ever since following in the footsteps of Alex and James who formed their first band, the Corsairs, in the late 1960s.

Livingston Taylor is a prolific composer of his own songs and of television themes and commercials.

His most recent album features guest performances by brother James, John Sebastian and Leah Kunkle.

For ticket information about the concert, call 871-2400.

McDonald joins CHI battle

Brian J. McDonald, Democratic candidate for the Norfolk and Plymouth state Senate seat will participate in discussions with the Attorney General regarding the battle to stop the siting of the toxic waste incinerator in East Braintree.

"I have been in contact with Attorney General Shannon and his staff since early April regarding the unfairness of the process, the unsuitability of the site and the need for the Commonwealth's top law enforcement officer to intervene on behalf of Weymouth, Quincy, Braintree, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Milton and the entire South Shore to help in our effort to stop the CHI incinerator planned for our densely populated area. Jim Shannon has been responsive to my request to review the proposal and the Site Safety Council's actions in this regard and for that I am extremely thankful." McDonald said.

According to McDonald, the Attorney General offered to review the process after a discussion on the subject in early April.

Since that time, McDonald has been in contact with members of the A.G.'s staff.

Also, McDonald said that the Attorney General was going to officially remove himself from further activity on behalf of the Site Safety Council. The A.G. is by definition legal counsel to state agencies in any legal action brought against the agency, the same as Town Counsel represents the Town in legal activity.

Recycling tax break sought

Brian J. McDonald, Democratic candidate for the Norfolk and Plymouth state Senate seat, has called for the elimination of the sales tax on all paper products which are comprised of recycled paper.

McDonald said he supported eliminating the sales tax on other recycled products, but felt that much research would have to be done before implementation, while recycled paper products were easily identified and could be implemented without difficulty.

According to McDonald, government needs to do more to stimulate the use of and demand for recycled products. He indicated that it made economic sense as well as environmental sense to bring about greater conservation of all of our natural resources.

McDonald has served as Vice-Chairman of the Weymouth Solid Waste Task Force. In addition, McDonald was a member of the South Shore Coalition Sub-Committee on Solid Waste that screened, interviewed and selected the consulting firm that is currently examining how the South Shore can best implement a comprehensive integrated solid waste management plan for the entire South Shore region.

Ambler questions new taxes

At a recent coffee hour, State Rep. Robert Ambler (D-Weymouth) stressed the need to make all necessary cuts in the state budget before looking at the possibility of increasing revenues.

"Raising taxes when the economy is flat is the wrong way to go,"Ambler said, noting that there are increasing signs that the Bay State economy is flattening out.

"You do not stimulate a lagging economy by raising taxes. That only depresses the economy further and may lead to less, not more, revenue coming in."

Rep. Ambler said he is taking the opposite approach in the area of car sales. He has filed a bill that would reduce the sales tax on motor vehicles from six to three percent.

"The legislation I have proposed is a 'win, win' proposition,"Ambler said. "The buyer wins because he or she pays less; and the increased sales will bring greater tax dollars into the state coffers."

Revolving funds addressed

"The issue of Revolving Funds has been before my Committee on Local Affairs for the past twelve years," Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset, said at a recent hearing of that Committee.

A general revolving fund bill drawn up and submitted by the Committee on Local Affairs was discussed in the executive session of the committee. The latest revolving fund bill allows all boards and committees to set up such a fund.

"I will support this bill as long as salaries cannot be used from this fund and that an annual authorization must be made at each annual town meeting so the voters of a Community are aware of these funds and the purposes for which they are expended," Murray said.

She moved favorable on this legislation once her concerns were addressed.

Revolving funds were first approved for recreation committees.

Request from most of the state's communities for additional revolving funds for other committees and boards have been placed in a study for the last ten years.

"Due to the necessity for money for engineering and other purposes for the various boards and committees, the time has arrived for revolving funds. Although I have opposed such methods, in the past, the revolving fund will see savings in the cities and towns," Murray concluded.

Creed holds fundraiser

John Creed, Democratic candidate for the Norfolk/Plymouth Senate seat, held a fund raiser at the Fairview Inn in Marshfield.

Supporters from all over the district came to help Creed kick off his campaign.

In his remarks, he told the audience that his first priority is public education from kindergarten through college and he is willing to support a one percent tax dedicated to that. Creed pointed out that he feels we have to do something for the Community Colleges and the State Universities.

The Marshfield School Committee member stressed that for many parents, their only hope of providing their children with a college education is through a state college program.

Creed also reaffirmed his commitment to bring the Old Colony Railroad back to Greenbush to help the traffic jam to Boston each work day.

Flynn seeks aid increase

Rep. William J. Flynn, Jr., candidate for state senator for the Norfolk and Plymouth district, says he intends to file a resolution which would order that the state budget for fiscal year 1991 contain at least $3.34 billion in local aid money, of which $210 million would be restored to cities and towns in the same amounts as it was removed by gubernatorial veto.

Flynn said, "After talking to local officials, I learned how devastating the cuts in local aid, set out in the governor's FY '91 budget, would be to cities and towns. As a direct response to these legitimate concerns, I intend to take a positive step by filing this resolution.

"The purpose and intent of this resolution is to send an early message that an acceptable FY '91 budget should have a direct local aid component figure not less than $3.34 billion.

"We should not try to balance the state's budget on the backs of cities and towns, who have in no way contributed to the present fiscal crisis," Flynn said. "I stand committed to work hard for more money for local aid to cities and towns who desperately need it."

'Close Ties' is true to life

Play review

(The North River Community Players production of 'Close Ties' continues May 25, 26 and June 1 and 2 at the North River Community Club, 513 River Street in Norwell. The curtain rises at 8 p.m. Tickets are $8 and may be reserved by calling 826-4878.)

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

The play 'Close Ties', a three-act drama written by Elizabeth Diggs, is a story which runs very close to real life.

It's a story about family, and the love and the conflicts that bind families together.

The North River Community Players have mounted a flawless production of the drama which is set in the family summer house in the Berkshire Mountains of New England.

The story surrounds three sisters, a brother, their parents and their grandmother, who is becoming senile. There's also a boyfriend who turns up unexpectedly and adds a spark of humor to a difficult situation.

'What to do with mother' is the underlying theme. Although, one hopes that in the end grandmother will be fine — the play stays true to life and the family has to deal with sending their beloved matriarch to a nursing home.

The North River Community Players should be congratulated for undertaking this serious drama. The actors portray their roles with remarkable believability and passion.

Dorris Pizzotti of Norwell plays the grandmother, Josephine Whitaker. At one moment Josephine is ornery, nervous, frightened, confused — and the next moment, she is loving and warm.

Rose Duggan of Weymouth portrays Josephine's daughter, Bess. Bess is caught in the middle. She has to deal with a range of emotions about her aging mother — and in the end has to find the courage get her mother the help she needs.

Bess' husband, Watson Frye, a lawyer, who must put up with some of Josephine's abuse, is skillfully portrayed by Stan Burgess of Kingston.

The real treasure in the play is the relationship between the three daughters: Anna, Evelyn, and Connie, who are portrayed by Susan Darnell of Norwell; Katie Erickson of Quincy, and Mary Duffey of Scituate.

The three women capture beautifully the love/hate relationship that can thrive between sisters. The sparks that fly between the sisters allow all of us — lucky enough to have sisters — to laugh, and think about our relationships.

As the eldest, Anna — (Susan Darnell is a natural on stage) is calm, cool and collected. She's too perfect for the middle sister, Evelyn, a divorcée who blames her unhappiness on everyone around her.

Evelyn's boyfriend, Ira Bienstock, portrayed by David J. Madden of Weymouth remains fascinated with Evelyn and all her moods. Madden's Bienstock is entirely human, funny, and provides the catalyst in the play that keeps the action moving forward.

The director Joe McAlarney of Weymouth did a fine job. There wasn't a weak link in any of the actor's performances. The play is produced by Peg Traniello of Plympton.

The set deserves mention. The country kitchen setting was full of detail including old refrigerator, hutches, baskets, country curtains and more.

In spite of the seriousness of the theme, the play is not without humor.

The younger brother Thayer, played by Don Sheehan of Pembroke, is a true delight. His love for his grandmother is unconditional. Passionately, he volunteers to quit school, and stay with his grandmother so she can remain independent.

The North River Community Club is a lovely, quaint theater. The popcorn is both abundant and delicious. Members of the club dote upon the audience and make them feel truly special.

With fine acting, excellent directing and eloquent writing — a night out with 'Close Ties' proves to be a provocative evening.

Chiropractic for Health

by Dr. Debra M. Tranberg & Dr. Susan Emmer
Chiropractors

THE ARTFUL MANIPULATOR

The treatment technique with which the chiropractor is most closely identified is the adjustment. This form of manipulation is delivered to the patient's body by the knowing hands of chiropractor. Because many adjustments prompt a slight cracking sound, the uninitiated person might think that they are delivered with great force. In fact, though, the popping noise is merely due to an escape of gas from a joint, much as a knuckle "cracks" when bent. Adjustment also does not hurt. Therein lies the art of manipulation. The chiropractor is trained in patient positioning, leverage techniques, and hand placement so that he may deliver a therapeutic adjustment with a minimum of force. Knowledge and sensitivity are the hallmarks of the art of chiropractic and adjustment.

Chiropractic is a natural and drugless approach to adjusting the body's communication network, the spinal cord, so that a natural healing process may take place. You are invited to call to learn more about how chiropractic works and how it can be of benefit to you. Let DR. DEBRA M. TRANBERG, SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, 80 Front St., Scituate, 545-7388, and DR. SUSAN EMMER, CHIROPRACTIC & FAMILY WELLNESS CARE, 87 Sohier St., Cohasset, 383-1330, assist you. Workers Comp. cases and most insurance plans accepted.

P.S. It is precisely the physicial interaction between chiropractor and patient that many feel is sometimes lacking in the practice of traditional medicine.

Cohasset Mariner

Vol. XII, No. 37 | Thursday, June 7, 1990 | 1-800-874-6969 | 50 cents

Class president James Reidy delivers the address of welcome to graduates of Cohasset High School and their families. Seventy-two students received diplomas from CHS last Sunday.

CHS class of 1990 graduates 72

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Sunday, June 3 was a time of endings and beginnings.

Seventy-two students marched into the tent at the South Shore Music Circus as high school seniors. Less than an hour later, they marched out into their future.

There was no celebrity guest speaker. Apart from the invocation, benediction and brief remarks by Superintendent of Schools Stephen A. Hart, the students ran the show.

Although they came in to the strains of "Pomp and Circumstance", laughter and good humor ruled the day.

In his welcoming address, class president James Reidy gave thanks for the memories and friendships the students will take with them. Then Reidy introduced the salutatorian, Zachary Hochkeppel.

Hochkeppel said the term "salutatorian" was too common since thousands of students are named salutatorian every year. He also noted that two of his older brothers had served as salutatorians for their graduating classes.

"That's three salutatorians in one family and, you know, I just think that's too many," he joked. As the last Hochkeppel sibling, it was a hail and farewell performance for the clan.

Hochkeppel promised to give his fellow students "something more show business, more glitzy, more Vegas."

In Las Vegas, he said, comedians are known as comedic stylists, singers are really song stylists – so he billed himself as a salutatory stylist.

Taking off from an old saying that "life is a series of collisions with the future," Hochkeppel launched into an automotive analogy. His presentation was broken by frequent applause, laughter and whistles as he suggested the Class of 1990 was cruising down the highway of life in 1979 Lincoln Versailles.

Graduation, he suggested, was their first close encounter with the future – sort of like hitting future's tree. More obstacles, more collisions lie ahead.

"If I was going to give any advice to the class of 1990, it would be not to be too quick to get out of the Versailles," he advised. "Don't be in a rush to get into the Real World. Just wait for your exit and at that time, you'll be ready to get on and get into some serious collisions with your future."

Principal not yet named

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

On June 4, the school committee interviewed the three finalists for the combined jobs of principal of the Joseph Osgood School and curriculum coordinator for Osgood and the Deer Hill schools.

The committee will make the final decision June 7. The new principal will start work in September when long-time principal Jack Creamer retires.

The first candidate interviewed was Mary Ann Morrissey, assistant principal at Central Elementary School in East Bridgewater.

Government Island flies a new flag

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

One more link in the town's plans for a park at Government Island came together this week as officials gathered ceremoniously to raise a sharp, new American flag.

The flag and flagpole were given to the town by the Eagle Flag Co. of Weymouth. The owner of Eagle, Wallace St. John, is a Cohasset resident.

St. John and his wife, Nancy, attended the brief ceremony along with selectmen, members of the historic commission, historical society, the selectmen's executive secretary Greg Doyon and Harbormaster Irving Gadow.

Now a super size American flag flies in the grassy area beyond the small parking area.

The next link in this plan is already in the works – reconstruction of the top quarter of the Minot's Lighthouse which will soon be installed near the new flag pole.

Noel Ripley, member of the historical commission and historical society, said he hopes the lighthouse – now been put together in Quincy – will be in place sometime in July or August.

Most of what has already happened at the small park, which is a national historic site, has been financed through private contributions. A good part of the contributions have come from the South Shore Music Circus.

New England Steel Tank has donated a great deal of welding for the project.

Other companies have donated labor, steel even the use of a crane.

The park at Government Island is part of The

Cohasset's week

Volunteers honored

Three Cohasset women were among the volunteers honored by South Shore Hospital recently in recognition of the time they donated to the hospital last year.

Virginia Anderson, Alice Seavy and Gail Stevens all received awards for 100 hours of service.

The 365 hospital volunteers all received pins for their efforts. In 1989 the hospital received 77,700 hours of volunteer work.

Blood donors needed

Anyone wishing to donate blood for Joel Carpenter is welcome to do so at Children's Hospital blood bank.

Platelets are needed for Joel.

This is a two-hour procedure. An appointment is necessary for donors.

People wishing to give whole blood do not need an appointment but the hospital staff has told the family that an advance phone call would be appreciated.

The number for Children's Hospital blood bank is 735-6267.

Joel received his sister Kati's bone marrow recently. Both are doing well.

CHS orders new lockers

The school committee awarded a bid in the amount of $9,844 for the purchase of 160 lockers to Apex Storage Systems of Winchester.

"This is the first step of a general renovation in the locker room area," Supt. Stephen Hart said.

Hart said the funds for purchasing the lockers are coming out of operating expenses. Hart has long advocated renovating the locker rooms at the high school.

Frosh orientation trip set

The school committee approved plans for the third annual freshman orientation camping trip.

Fritz Pfaffman, chairman of the Harbor Committee, and Irv Gadow, harbormaster, hoist up the flag.

We have a new number

The toll-free number for our Marshfield office has changed. The new number is 1-800-649-6661.

The old toll free number will be discontinued, so please make a note of the new number.

Numbers for our community office here in town, as well the main number for the Marshfield office (837-3500) remain the same.

Focus on Education due

According to Director of Pupil Services John Leary, the last school system newsletter, "Focus on Education" is ready to mail.

This is the second newsletter to be sent this year. The school committee instituted the newsletter as a way to promote community awareness of the school system.

Cemetery plan dies before board

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

The most exclusive address in town continues to be a plot in one of the town's cemeteries. Space is so limited that no purchase of a cemetery plot is permitted until a death in the family occurs, but the cemetery study committee voted May 31 to table plans to construct a new cemetery on Pleasant Street.

Currently, the family of a deceased person has 72 hours to buy a plot. The town wanted to build a large cemetery on Pleasant Street to meet the town's needs. But at the April town meeting, selectmen requested indefinite postponement of an article authorizing a $100,000 loan for the first phase of construction. Selectmen said they wanted to give the cemetery committee time to respond to concerns about the location.

At the May 31, Chairman Glenn Pratt defended the site selection, saying, "The Pleasant Street site has the potential for a couple of thousand graves." Pratt couldn't sway the 40 residents who live in the area who attended to make it clear they would oppose any plans for cemetery construction on the site.

Residents are primarily concerned about drainage and traffic control problems.

The area is prone to flooding and residents charge that any construction would encroach on areas protected under wetlands regulations.

Residents also claimed the roads in the area are too narrow to support funeral processions and cemetery visitors.

The committee voted unanimously to re-examine sites previously under consideration.

Chapter I grant prepared

The school committee approved the Chapter I proposal for the coming year. Chapter I is a federally funded program serving educationally at-risk children.

According to Kenneth Ekberg, principal at Deer Hill School, this represents the only pool of money for remedial assistance for Cohasset children. Next year he hopes to receive $11,000 to fund 3 1/2 days of services at Joseph Osgood School and the equivalent of 1 1/2 days at Deer Hill.

The aides at Deer Hill will see children 3 half-days per week.

"We must see youngsters more than once per week," Ekberg said.

Supt. Stephen Hart said the committee should consider supplementing the Chapter I funds. Because Cohasset receives so little funding, only the most educationally needy children receive help. Children who would normally qualify are being excluded.

According to Ekberg, Cohasset is able to serve as many children as they do because people who are qualified to be paid at a teacher's rate are accepting aides status and pay.

Hochkeppel delivers CHS's salutatorian address

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Zachary Hochkeppel describes himself as a laid-back, procrastinating, free-flowing kind of a guy. He also said he was hard-working.

Somehow the combination of things worked — Hochkeppel ranked second in his class. On June 3, he delivered the salutatorian's address to Cohasset's Class of 1990.

Hochkeppel's humorous address centered on an inevitable series of collisions along the highway of life. In a perverse example of life imitating art, after he wrote his address, Hochkeppel's car died and had to be towed.

After the summer is over, Hochkeppel heads off to the University of Pennsylvania and the bright lights of Philadelphia. He can't wait to live in the city.

"It's boring in a small town," he said. He looks forward to the diversity and excitement of places to go and people to meet. Not to mention places that are open at 3 a.m.

Precisely what he'll study is still a mystery to him. He enjoyed all his subjects at Cohasset and is undecided on a career. He figures he has plenty of time to decide what to do with the next 70 or 80 years of his life.

And remember, he's a procrastinator.

"I never wrote a paper until the day before it was due," Hochkeppel said, "and I never started my required reading books until two days before I was supposed to be finished."

In addition to working best under pressure, Hochkeppel said he just knew what he had to do and did it.

One of the leading lights of Cohasset's drama club, Hochkeppel was actively involved in dramatic productions for all four years of his high school career. He was a part of the drama festival productions and won awards for his acting ability.

His interest in acting spans a wide range of roles, both dramatic and comedic. If he has a favorite playwright, it is probably Edward Albee.

Although his interest in acting continues, he's not ready to run off to New York or Hollywood to sign the standard rich and famous contract. He'll settle for a few good roles in college.

Although he likes to read, he said his studies at Cohasset High left him virtually no time to read for pleasure. The last book he remembers reading was "Mazes". He couldn't remember the author, whom he described as very strange. The book was a collection of essays and articles about scientific and mathematical things translated into non-scientific terms.

Politics and political comedy is definitely on his list of things to avoid. He hates political comedy — claims it's tedious and repetitive — and is bored by politics.

Hochkeppel enjoys movies. He likes strange movies like "A Clockwork Orange" by Stanley Kubrick and comedies, too. He doesn't watch them with a critical eye, but said he thought "Rainman" was overrated.

Much as he loves acting, he isn't interested in a career directing. Hochkeppel said he lacked the patience and attention to detail necessary to be a good director.

Although he enjoys sports, it's not his strong suit. He prefers swimming and hanging out at the beach in his rare free time.

Work cuts down on the amount of time he has. For the past year-and-a-half, Hochkeppel has worked for Talbot's catalog sales division. He said the work was easy and paid well, put couldn't expand past the 15 hours he's been putting in.

"I may be looking for something that has low work and high pay," he joked. Something involving getting paid to sleep would fit the bill.

"Sleep is good," he said.

Hochkeppel said his parents were supportive and gave him plenty of freedom to discover his strengths and talents. They encouraged independence and self-reliance.

"Everyone always had a job," he said of himself and his older brothers.

When he has time not consumed by work or studies, Hochkeppel can be found at the beach.

His idea of heaven is Philadelphia with Cohasset's oceanfront.

Meanwhile, whatever it is that he is meant to be and do is out there waiting for him to discover it. Zach Hochkeppel means to enjoy the search to the fullest.

"Captain's walk" benefits lighthouse

Captain's Walk, an ongoing project of the town's historical commission. The Walk includes 10 historical sites along the water's edge.

Donations are needed to complete the work, according to Ripley who said any contributions should be sent for Captain's Walk to the historical commission at the town hall.

The lighthouse restoration project began two years ago when the Coast Guard offered to give parts of the old Minot's Light to the town.

"They brought the granite pieces back one by one, by helicopter," Ripley said, pointing out the start of the project.

The replicated lighthouse will stand 28 feet high when it is complete.

During the 1850s, Minot's Light was assembled at the edge of Cohasset Harbor. The pieces were taken block by block from Government Island by boat to the permanent location two-and-a-half miles off Cohasset's shores.

Ripley pointed out that there will be some real differences between the upper lighthouse portion constructed near the spot where the lighthouse was first assembled over a 100 years ago.

The lighthouse on Government Island will not include the brass fittings that decked out Minot's Light.

"It's too expensive to use brass," Ripley said. "We're using steel."

Ham Tewkesbury pointed out that the1878 bell from Minot's Light is already permanently installed by the templates used for the original construction.

The bell is welded as part of the monument constructed by the town's historical society back in 1967. It is a National Historic Landmark. The only other in this area is the Granite Railway in Quincy.

Minot's Light was constructed between 1855 and 1863.

Ripley said there are several mechanical devices from the original structure that no one seems to know how to duplicate. He said the specifications for the fog horn and a rotating mechanism cannot be found in old records.

There are several holes in the original granite walls that have no known purpose, Ripley said.

Some of the holes were used for ventilation in the early days when the lighthouse was run by a kerosene fire.

Other holes were used to hold fittings that kept boats secure outside the structure. Those davits will be restored next year, according to Ripley's timetable. Railings are also planned in the future.

The outside of the lighthouse was granite. Inside the structure was lined with a wall of bricks.

"Eventually we'd like to have the bricks," Ripley said.

The lighthouse roof was copper, designed to withstand high winds and salt water.

The Captain's Walk itself was designed about three or four years ago to offer information about the community 100 years before.

Patricia Murphy, project manager of the Walk, sold stations to raise the initial financing. Ripley said the project cost about $10,000. The main expense was a series of signs identifying the sites on the Walk.

"Cohasset's historic Harbor, once known as Ship's Cove, has played a major role in the town's history almost from the earliest beginnings," according to a brochure developed by the historical commission.

"Family-owned stores and mercantile businesses lined the edges of Ship's Cove, and at one time, more than half the town's populace earned their living from the sea, either directly or indirectly."

The stations of the Walk begin at Government Island and dot the road around the harbor to the site called the New Shipyard, the old Cox estate.

Class of 1990 graduates...

Hochkeppel yielded center stage to valedictorian Suzzunne Nicole DeCruz.

DeCruz got her inspiration from the best-selling book, "All I Really Need to Know I Learned in Kindergarten" by Robert Fulghum. Both Fulghum and DeCruz agree that the first days prepare us for the last.

For Fulghum, the quintessential lessons are:

- Share everything
- Play fair
- Don't hit people
- Put things back where you found them
- Clean up your own mess
- Don't take things that aren't yours
- Say you're sorry when you hurt somebody
- Wash your hands before you eat
- Flush
- Warm milk and cookies are good for you
- Live a balanced life – learn some and think some and draw and paint and sing and dance and play and work every day some
- Take a nap every afternoon
- When you go out into the world, watch out for traffic, hold hands, and stick together
- Be aware of wonder

DeCruz went a few grades further than Fulghum.

"Cohasset High School is one that demands the most from those that are able to give," she said, adding, "We are all able to give."

She thanked her teachers for stressing and expecting excellence. After relating how their subjects made them better able to appreciate and respond to the world around them, she confessed, "calculus and mathematics exist to confuse us." Her audience clearly agreed.

DeCruz finished by saying Cohasset High School had prepared them well for future success.

Supt. Hart got some good-humored laughter when he confessed he, too, had planned to use Fulghum's book. When he learned late last week that DeCruz had dibs on it, he scrapped the original speech and began to look for a new theme.

Hart considered and rejected the traditional nautical theme, full of setting sails, hoisting anchor and selling off into the future. He chose, instead, educational philosopher John Dewey's thesis that education is fundamentally a method to achieve social progress and reform.

The purpose of education in the Cohasset school system is "not just to impart a considerable body of knowledge," Hart said, but to provide an environment where every student can grow to the maximum potential. Such an education prepares students to face the challenges that lie ahead, he said.

Hart identified two immediate challenges to society's wisdom, will and intellect: the destruction of the natural environment and the destructive rise of racial and ethnic hatred.

Noting the twentieth anniversary of Earth Day had just been celebrated, Hart asked the Class of 1990 to consider that each second of every day a portion of the rain forest equal in size to a football field is destroyed. When combined with unchecked global warming, acid rain and depletion of the ozone layer, Hart said the planet faces a dim future.

The rising tide of racial and ethnic intolerance is equally disturbing, he said. The tragic murder of Yusuf Hawkins in Bensonhurst was compounded by the resulting intensification of racial hatred.

Solving these crises, Hart said, will test the development of the Class of 1990 as educated, caring and committed citizens.

Following his remarks, Hart certified that the students were fully qualified for graduation.

In addition to the expected hugs and flowers from family, friends and fellow students, there were several touching moments.

Robin Haynes, a co-founder of the student volunteer group, received a kiss along with her diploma from school committee Chairman Barbara Bliss. Former Superintendent of Schools William Ripley, Jr. presented a diploma to his granddaughter, Carrie Ripley. He got a big hug in return.

Committee member Russell Reidy presented the diplomas and hugged his twin sons, James and Joel. Fellow member Nancy Sandell presented a diploma to the Swedish exchange student, Maria Mansson, she has hosted for the year.

Other foreign exchange students include Isabelle Ramallo Alcover and Maria Paz Vinals Zunica of Spain and Carole Biaggi of Switzerland.

Cohasset revealed itself as more like a close-knit neighborhood than a town – during the ceremonies, the audience clapped, cheered and celebrated every student's achievement.

Rev. Gary A. Ritts of the Second Congregational Church and father of graduate Steven Ritts delivered the invocation, while the Rev. Jean Edrix Saint Eloi of Dorchester and father of METCO student and DAR good citizen award-winner Edith Saint Eloi offered the benediction.

The students exited to an original musical composition, "It's Only the Beginning," written for the occasion by Robin Haynes. Haynes composed the piece for her senior project.

Of the 72 graduates, 60 will be pursuing further education, four will be working, two are entering the military and one student was unsure what she would be doing. Of the five who said they would be going to Europe, four are foreign exchange students.

At Vedanta Center, resources are recycled

By Alix White
Special to the Mariner

I recently visited Shuma Chakravarty, assistant minister of the Vedanta Center, to talk about her Earth pledges. As we sat looking out at the rain she told me of the principles of ecology that she and the community live by.

"We wish to live in ecumenical and ecological harmony," she began. "The community of the Vedanta Center learns not only through scripture but by example. The community is a sanctuary for all living creatures: a nature sanctuary, a bird sanctuary."

In the early 1950s there was a strong hurricane and many trees were blown over. Instead of seeing the wood as something to dispose of, the community built their temple from it in 1959. The temple is called the Temple of the Universal Spirit.

"There is no greed motivation here," said Rev. Chakravarty speaking of the earth around her. "We have a bio-dynamic organic garden following Rudolph Steiner's methods." Of course there is a compost heap and because the material going into the pile is not contaminated with chemical fertilizers, fungicides, the material coming out is organic.

In the home, the community leads a very simple lifestyle. "We are careful with our resources. We do not overuse them as that is a form of self-indulgence."

Nutrition is an important aspect of health maintenance. The community eats balanced, nutritious meals which are mostly vegetarian. I was surprised that the meals weren't completely vegetarian. "That is so people can be flexible and non-judgemental," Rev. Chakravarty assured me. "There is a balance between asceticism and hedonism."

"What about cars?" I asked. "They give people such mobility, but they cause so much isolation and loneliness."

"Here at the Center," Chakravarty said, "we have two cars for a community of 8 to 10 people. It helps in our spiritual life because it makes us less self-centered and more a part of our community. Ego-centricity breeds loneliness, and non-loneliness is respect for all life—not just other people."

TROUBLE SHOOTING

Steel/tin cans: We are having trouble with this container. A steel/tin can is only made of steel and coated with tin. It has been called a bi-metal can, or, as most of us know it—the tin can. A tin can is round and usually contained food. It is also magnetic making it easy to separate from aluminum which is not magnetic. O.K. if we all understand what a steel/tin can is, please do not throw toasters, hangers, mailboxes etc., etc. in the steel/tin can container. Thank-you.

Plastic: We are doing so much better on the plastic jug recycling. It has been a learning experience for us all finding the chasing arrows triangle on the bottom of the jugs and recycling only resins number 1 and number 2. Thank you, thank you, thank you. Please, just one more thing: take the caps off. You won't believe this, but the lids are often made of a different, non-recyclable resin. Also, all the caps have to be off before the jug is put in the grinder. If we don't do it at home, we are using our taxes to pay someone to do it for us.

Around town

❑ Jeffrey Treanor was graduated from Westfield State College on May 18, with a Bachelor of Science Degree in criminal justice. He will be working again this summer with the Barnstable police department. Jeff is the son of Ruth and John Treanor, formerly of Cohasset now residents of Cape Coral Florida.

❑ When you see Bob James smiling more than ever "around town" you'll know why now . . . his granddaughter, Carla James, just graduated from Simmons College, where she earned her master's degree in Political Science. Carla is the child of Phil and Cindy James.

❑ Beth Lincoln, granddaughter of Lillian Lincoln, received a paralegal degree from Cumberland County College. She is with the law office of Testa and Testa in Vineland, New Jersey.

❑ While we are talking about grandchildren, I took mine to Sandy Beach last weekend, and it brought to mind the letter that we all received from the Sandy Beach Association. The Beach is great, but it does need a lot of cleaning up!! Let's all answer the letter with a check, not to worry about the amount, to keep a well maintained beach that we can all be proud of!! Last year, only 17 percent of the people in Cohasset responded, let's outdo that number!!!

❑ Brian H. Leary has been commissioned a second lieutenant through the Army ROTC program, and earned a bachelor's degree from Holy Cross College, Worcester. Brian is the son of Wendell J. Leary of 96 Elm Street and Roberta K. Pappas of Croton on the Hudson, N.Y. He is a 1986 CHS graduate.

❑ Hats off to Tom Wigmore, he is responsible for starting the Sons of the American Legion. He has 15 active members! The last time the group was active was in 1932 . . . the group provides help for projects normally undertaken by members of veterans groups, and this year Tom's project was to care for the graves at Woodside Cemetery. Our admiration goes out to you Tom, and you are an inspiration to young men everywhere.

❑ We want to wish the Boys and Girls Tennis teams every success as they begin their tournaments this week. Win or loose, you had a great season and you should all be proud of your efforts . . . we sure are!!

❑ The Friends of Cohasset Schools Sports and the Student Council, under the direction of Jack Delorenzo, had put together a unique way to raise funds to offset costs of athletics, student council conventions and scholarships. They are holding a fun fair and a raffle on June 23 at the South Shore Music Circus. The first prize of the "Chair Share" is $3,000; the second prize is $1,000 and the third prize is a round trip ticket to Orlando, Florida. The raffle will be held at 4.

When you purchase your raffle ticket it entitles you to free admission to the Fair, which will be held from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., a good time guaranteed for all of the kiddos! If you wish to purchase a $10 ticket, see Clark Chatterton, John Conroy, Ken Ekberg, Steve Endris, Richard Henderson, Terry Kahn, Tim Marsac, Mimi Mulvey, Ginnie Nourie, Russ Reidy, Larry Shultz, Robin Suhrbier, Dave Terry, Pat Tolini or Peter Whitman; or you may contact Jack DeLorenzo at the high school and he will put you in touch with a student council member. Be sure to get in on this most worthy cause . . . you'll have a lot of fun as well as helping a most worthy cause.

❑ The Cohasset Community Center certainly has a lot to offer your young ones this summer; they are holding camp that offers ages 3-6 free play, music, creative activities, water play, exploratory nature walks, crafts, etc. They may attend Monday through Friday, eight-week sessions, from 9 a.m. until noon, starting June 11. There are many other activities, for youngsters of all ages, and the "line-up" promises to be a good one. Call the Center for more information at 383-0088.

Local gymnasts participated in the Cohasset Community Center's practice gym meet on May 19. Story page 12.

❑ This year's graduation seemed an especially beautiful one!! The day was perfect, the graduates all looked wonderful and the parents were especially proud and happy. We want to wish this year's class a grand future, you will be missed at CHS and "around town" . . . keep us informed as you begin the last leg of your educational careers!

School news

PSO describes outdoor school and other programs

On Friday, May 25, the sixth grade students at Deer Hill School enjoyed a day of "Outdoor School." Working in small groups, they were challenged by a variety of problem solving activities.

This day-long program was designed and organized by Jim Reidy as his senior project at Cohasset High School. The day began with all the students participating in some small group trust building games. The theme for all activities during the day was group cooperation and trust in each other.

The weather cooperated and all the students and teachers who participated agreed it was a very successful and enjoyable day.

Other Cohasset High School seniors who helped with the activities were: Juliann Chittick, Liz Buckley, Matt Silvia, Eric Theriault and Noah Hill.

Dates to remember: Move-up Day — June 15. This will be the last day for current kindergartners. Details to follow. Last day of school is June 18, early release.

ERB Testing for all second graders will begin June 4. We will make every effort to minimize any stress associated with these tests and simply encourage you to have your children enjoy a good night's sleep and come to school with their usual enthusiasm.

AFS — The American Field Service Chapter of Cohasset is in need of one or more host families for the coming school year. If you might be interested or know of someone who might be interested, please contact Carol Beggan, 383-6473 or Judy Dwyer, 383-1654.

Snappy Sneaker Field and Fun Day will be June 8 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. A detailed format will be sent home this week.

Students enrolled in grades 4-6 in the Cohasset Public Schools will soon be participating in a program designed to educate them about the changing human body during adolescence.

Puberty is a time of both physical and emotional change. Adolescents may feel anxiety over their bodily changes and they may experience conflict over becoming adults. A clear and complete understanding of the changes during puberty will help lessen fears and increase the young person's sense of control over his/her body.

It is quite common for students of this age to be at varying levels of physical and emotional development. Students need to be reassured that there is a wide range of normal development at this age. They need to be reassured that it's normal to have some worries and concerns, and they need to know how to go about getting help if they think they are experiencing abnormal growth and development.

The trained instructors will foster a comfortable, self-esteem enhancing environment by modeling a knowledgeable, respectful attitude, and by remaining sensitive to student's feelings of anxiety, confusion, or embarrassment.

Goals

To provide students with the information needed to understand their physical and psychological development as well as reproductive anatomy and physiology.

To encourage family involvement in the learning process so as to increase knowledge and understanding of the psychological, social, and moral aspects of sexuality and sexual development.

Wed., June 6, Grade 4 girls only — will view and discuss the film: "Growing Up On Broadway." The film addresses the subject of adolescent female growth and development with an emphasis on understanding menstruation. . .opportunity for anonymous questions and discussion with the health education coordinator and school nurse will be provided.

Fri., June 8, Grade 5 boys and girls — film: "Growing Up On Broadway." A small group discussion will follow with the health education coordinator and the school nurse.

Editorial

Good luck, graduates

What's wrong with kids today?

A cashier at a grocery store made the remark offhandedly after she finished bagging a food order because the assigned bagger got sidetracked.

"They just don't want to work," she went on.

"I've been working since I was 16. These kids expect to be paid just for being here."

Maybe she hasn't met the senior class at Cohasset High.

Maybe she doesn't understand that the world has changed quite a bit in the past few years — jobs are no longer plentiful, pressure is unavoidable, old maxims about success have a hollow ring.

Not long ago it was true that hard work was the key to success. It still may be a prerequisite, but it doesn't come with a money-back guarantee.

The seniors who just completed their course of study at CHS face serious challenges in the years ahead.

This group of bright young men and women have already demonstrated their ability to work.

They have demonstrated their ability to care about other people.

They have demonstrated academic talent, creativity and loyalty.

They have even proved to include a few skilled athletes — which for a school this size is no insubstantial feat.

This group of graduates is moving from a school system where they knew everyone and where flexibility was a byword into a world that holds harsher realities.

We hope they hold onto their positive attitudes and friendly appearances. We hope the foundation laid during their years in this community which cares about its children serves them well.

At the Awards Night for seniors last Thursday, Dorothy Bates took a few minutes to offer a few thoughts to the group of smiling and enthusiastic graduates.

She pointed out that while this class is the smallest is many years, there have been smaller graduating classes.

Indeed, one of her tasks that evening was to present a $300 scholarship from the graduating class of 1948. Bates said that class with its 16 members includes names well known today.

"You'd be surprised at how well they've done," she told the graduates.

Now it's time to watch and see how well the graduating class of 1990 will do.

The world out there can be a frightening place when you're still a teenager.

It's hard for young people who are forced to be dependent on their parents for basic necessities even after they've finished college.

It's hard for young people to plan career choices that make sense when most of the popular choices lead to economic insecurity.

But the 69 graduates of CHS have made a great start.

It's time for them to make their own mistakes — it's time for them to try to fly.

We wish them good luck.

We wish they didn't need it.

A Fairoaks Lane couple had to appeal their case to selectmen after they were assessed $25 for late payment of the town's $8 dog license renewal bill.

Letters

Town clerk takes selectmen to task

To the Editor:

As Town Clerk I feel it is my obligation to publicly write this letter in reference to licensing dogs and late fee payments. The bylaw states in Section 12, "(a) Any individual who has not licensed his or her dog by May 1, in any year, shall pay an additional late fee of twenty five ($25) dollars."

This bylaw was passed by a town meeting vote at Special Town Meeting on October 10, 1989. The previous year the same fee was in effect when we were licensing through the Norfolk County.

At the selectmen's meeting on May 29, a citizen appeared before the Selectmen with a complaint about his late fee. Because no actual proof of payment or documentation was provided a late fee was imposed and the bylaws should be enforced. After hearing the complaint, the board decided to waive the late fee charge and inject an amendment to the bylaw - which is not within their powers. The only way a bylaw can be amended is through a Town Meeting or Special Town Meeting and then only after a vote of the people. I suggest the Board of Selectmen re-acquaint themselves with the General Bylaws and policies in the future.

The Town Clerk's policy is to keep everything equal for all citizens of this town. It is difficult to enforce the bylaw with decisions being made by the board of selectmen when they do not follow procedure.

Does "policy" now dictate that dog owners who did in fact pay a penalty have the equal right to appeal? If this is the case, contact the selectmen's office and get a ruling if a refund is in order.

Frances L. Marks
Town Clerk

Commentary

CAC addresses rail restoration

The Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC), has worked closely with the MBTA in its conduct of the Old Colony Railroad Rehabilitation Project environmental studies and has reviewed all the materials prepared by the MBTA as part of the project. The CAC concurs with the substance and findings of the Draft Environmental Impact Statement/Report. (While reflecting the consensus of the CAC, each position indicated within the comment is not necessarily unanimous. Dissenting members' views are highlighted in a special section entitled "Members Exceptions".)

The concepts advanced in discussing the purpose and need for improving transportation to Boston are clearly stated and supported. There is a compelling need to improve transportation opportunities from the Old Colony area.

The MBTA has examined all reasonable alternatives. During the course of the study, some have asked for additional consideration of several alternatives. This work is adequately summarized in Chapter II. Improvements in express bus service as discussed in the Transportation Systems Management Alternative have been realistically considered. Any commuter rail alternative should provide service direct to South Station in Boston. CAC members have opposed the previously considered commuter rail alternatives that only provided commuter rail service to Braintree and that would have permanently required transfer to the Red Line for the remaining trip. The organization of the rail alternatives into various combinations of lines has been helpful in our understanding of all parts of the Old Colony area. The suggested commuter rail stations have been developed with considerable local coordination by the MBTA and with detailed review by the CAC. The CAC concurs with station locations for the rail alternatives as proposed, and is comfortable with conceptual designs and parking lot sizes as shown in Volume II. The CAC has encouraged continuing refinement of the commuter rail station plans for Route 3/3A in Kingston that would result in coexistence of the station and the L. Knife & Son beer warehouse, for the CAC strongly supports this coexistence. The CAC cautions that more parking than is now planned may be needed for some stations, and is pleased that the MBTA has identified future possible additional parking at many locations. CAC members have viewed first-hand existing MBTA commuter facilities and rail services. Members have seen these facilities meeting the needs of the communities they serve and have noted newly constructed stations on existing service routes and have seen how they are integrated into the community environment and infrastructures. Detailed CAC comments have served to correct omissions and have provided other important and pertinent facts about the existing environment in the Old Colony area.

Chapter IV, Transportation Impacts, required detailed CAC review and comment. We understand that there would be numerous important transportation impacts resulting from implementation of commuter

Valedictorian DeCruz delivers address to class

By Suzzunne Nicole DeCruz
Valedictorian 1990

Parents, friends, faculty members, committee members and fellow classmates — I am both proud and honored to stand before you today. There are many elements of my past that allow me this opportunity and if you will, let us travel back to the most fundamental one of all — kindergarten.

Nothing else is quite like kindergarten. Where else may you receive a gold star to place on your forehead when you behave? Where else do you take a catnap in the afternoon when Tonka trucks and jumproping have worn you down? Where else do you learn how to share and to receive and to make snowflakes out of white paper? I've experienced none of these things at Cohasset High School.

However, I have taken so much knowledge from my kindergarten days to aid me in my trek through my high school years. And as Robert Fulghum so skillfully and simplistically relays in his book, All I Really Need to Know I Learned in Kindergarten — our first taste of education allow us to savor what is to come.

Fulgham notes that kindergarten introduces us to those things that prepare us for life. To quote Fulghum, "All I really need to know about how to live and what to do and how to be I learned in kindergarten . . . These are the things I learned: Share everything. Play fair. Don't hit people. Put things back where you found them. Clean up your own mess. Don't take things that aren't yours. Say you're sorry when you hurt somebody. Wash your hands before you eat. Flush. Warm cookies and cold milk are good for you. Live a balanced life — learn some and think some and draw and paint and sing and dance and play and work everyday some," and his list goes on.

Suzzunne Nicole DeCruz

At CHS, I have so often called upon the knowledge of my younger days in order to persevere and succeed. Cohasset high school is one that demands the most from those that are able to give and we are all able to give. The faculty at Cohasset High school requires us to call upon our ability to think, to express, to share and to expand. Although we learned these skills in kindergarten, my years at CHS have enhanced every one of those skills. Science encourages us to view our existence on this planet from a new perspective. English and all languages permit us to communicate and to reveal our feelings and to understand those of others. Humanities show us the thoughts and feelings and actions of those past and present. And calculus and the mathematics exist to confuse us.

At a time when there seems to be decreasing support for our school systems, I would like to tell you that my education at CHS is the greatest gift that I have received. And although cutbacks are severe and quite detrimental to the system, I feel that the faculty at all of the Cohasset schools have continued to educate the students in a manner consistent with its past superiority. Cohasset High school has prepared us well fur further education — education which is so important to this age.

Whether or not my classmates intend to pursue further education, I congratulate you all and extend a special congratulations to Kerri Anglin and Scott Molinari — who to me, represent the most successful of us present today. Thank you!

CAC addresses Old Colony restoration...

rail alternatives. Providing greatly improved access to Boston for substantially large portions of the Old Colony area, and for its many citizens would be a significant transportation benefit. Travel time to Boston would also be substantially reduced for large numbers of residents in the Old Colony area. The CAC concurs that the commuter rail alternatives would provide the greatest reduction of highway congestion and greatest increase in transit patronage of all the alternatives. The CAC considers the projected Old Colony ridership estimate to be a fair indication of Year 2000 ridership. With the upcoming construction of the Central Artery/Third Harbor Tunnel; the growing number of jobs in Boston; and the residential, commercial, and industrial growth in Southeastern Massachusetts; the provision of transportation service on dedicated rights-of-way, unaffected by highway constraints and traffic congestion, will provide an important transportation option for commuters from the Old Colony area.

Boston is, and will continue to be, the major Hub of New England. The restoration of the Old Colony commuter rail service would reverse the increasing trend of isolation in Southeastern Massachusetts from Boston and would provide residents of the Old Colony area important access to jobs, schools, government services, cultural activities, and medical care without depending primarily on the private automobile for transportation. The CAC supports and recognizes the need for a regional, multi-modal network of transportation options including private bus, commuter boat, MBTA bus, BAT and GATRA bus, Red Line and commuter rail services for Southeastern Massachusetts.

The CAC, in consultation with local citizens and officials and other interested parties, concurs that the environmental impacts identified in Chapter V are complete and the assessment of impacts is adequate. Although wetlands impacts have been identified, the CAC expects that these will be properly addressed and mitigated through the planning and permitting process for work affecting wetlands, and particularly in watershed protection areas, in the Coastal Zone, and near Area's of Critical Environmental Concern. We are confident that the anticipated impacts at the Neponset River and at Bound Brook will be properly mitigated in accordance with this process.

The CAC recognizes the procedures for mitigating wetlands, noise and other impacts, and expects that this mitigation will continue to be developed during later stages of the project. The CAC concurs with the need for continuing coordination with appropriate federal, state and local officials, and with interested citizens and is assured and confident that this process will continue. Significant air quality improvements, important for attainment and maintenance of regional air quality, would result from the implementation of the commuter rail alternatives.

The CAC has found that the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs (EOEA) procedures allowing for consideration of projects under the Major and Complicated designation have been very productive for this project, inasmuch as they have enabled individuals with a variety of backgrounds, interests, and outlooks to have input, and that this input has made this a better project. The diversity of the CAC members' backgrounds and their critical examination of the environmental work have resulted in changes and improvements in the DEIS/R. Through this process members have made contributions that have helped to shape the DEIS/R and MBTA responses.

Though the environmental review of this project has been arduous and has required the commitment of significant amounts of time, energy, and intellectual resources of CAC members, members wish to express satisfaction in seeing the results of their work in the DEIS/R.

Members Exceptions

•New and approved future industrial development in the West Street/Plain Street area of Braintree, due to the construction at Tricon Park and at Commerce Park will add approximately 2.6 million square feet of industrial development which will result in additional traffic. I feel this issue has not been adequately considered in the traffic analysis. Therefore, I feel additional traffic analysis should be conducted for the West Street and Plain Street grade crossings in Braintree.

Carol Richmond

•Southeastern Massachusetts' economic vitality is dependent on good access to Boston. The area is now isolated by an unfair and inadequate transportation system. If this exclusion from job opportunities in Boston continues, the area will cease to be attractive and will lose its vitality. Commuter rail restoration on all three lines could provide the best improvements in access to Boston.

Richard Bowen, Paul Dello Iacono, William Grimes, Michael Williamson, Dan Crane, Marie Lovely, Maria White, Susan Bregman, James McGrath

•The alternative that would have provided commuter rail service to Braintree only and would have required a transfer to the Red Line for the remaining trip is preferable. To construct the rail line through Quincy and to build a new bridge over the Neponset River is too expensive, too disruptive and not cost effective.

I believe that the assessment of noise and vibration and air quality resulting from the proposed commuter rail service through Quincy has been grossly understated, is completely unrealistic and that the impacts are far greater than stated.

Because of the many Red Line and Old Colony train passbys, Old Colony commuter rail service would have a major detrimental effect on the quality of life of residents who live very close to the rail line.

I feel that the Adams Mansion property, which is on the National Register, would also be adversely affected by vibrations from the rail line.

Pat Toland

•Noise mitigation may be in order for Quincy.

Terry Fancher

•The MBTA should be directed by the CAC to careful planning to mitigate traffic and parking impacts in Hingham Square and the surrounding area. I urge the design of aesthetically pleasing fencing and landscaping in Hingham. I question whether the noise barriers are absolutely needed. If so, I urge the use of noise barriers that will be graffiti resistant.

William Grimes.

•The number of grade crossings and traffic impacts in Hingham and Weymouth, proximity of residential and commercial properties to the rail, and density of development due to the 30 year dormancy of the Greenbush Line, all raise serious questions about the safe operation of the line.

Although we strongly endorse the development of mass transportation service to meet the needs of the community population, fiscal responsibility is an over-riding concern and requires raising the project cost as an issue.

Elaine Cusker

•The material that was submitted to the CAC was fair and adequately presented. The economic well-being of the South Shore and New England would be adversely effected should this project not go forward.

Above all, the positive air quality impact and conservation of fuel associated with the commuter rail alternatives should be noted. In particular the annual diversion of 89.2 million vehicle miles under commuter rail alternative 3d is a significant ecological benefit.

James McGrath

•The Neponset River and Dorchester will be adversely affected by restoration of train service, especially by the resulting noise. The cost is prohibitive.

Barbara Tankle

•The noise from commuter rail service would have adverse affects in Dorchester. I urge that the MBTA expand its program for mitigating noise impact.

Considering the opportunity offered by the restoration of transit system, adequate parking to serve potential demand must be provided.

Susan Bregman

Own a piece of the circus

Own a piece of the South Shore Music Circus, if but for a moment. For a $10 donation, one can own a deed to a seat at the Music Circus. The Friends of Cohasset School Sports and the Cohasset High School Student Council are jointly sponsoring "Chair Share" a fundraising idea based on the concept of the Meadow Muffin Drop used successfully by other towns.

Cohasset's fundraiser revolves around the 2,250 seats at the Music Circus. Deeds are being sold to each seat with the winning seats being determined at a day of fun activities at the Music Circus on Saturday, June 23. Top prize in the "Chair Share" is $3,000 followed by a second cash prize of $1,000. Additional prizes include two roundtrip air fares on Trump Airlines to Orlando, Florida donated by TNT of Boston; a week-end package at the Boston Harbor Hotel including two nights accommodations with free parking and a complimentary Sunday breakfast; dinner for two at the new Chart House Restaurant of Cohasset; dinner for two at the Red Lion Inn in Cohasset; and a free tuition each for a boy and a girl to the South Shore Soccer Camp (boys, Aug. 6-10 and girls Aug. 13-17) in Cohasset.

The Friends of Cohasset School Sports was formed at the end of summer, 1989, for the sole purpose of raising $20,000 in an effort to keep the high school athletic user fees at $50 per sport per season. The "Chair Share" should bring the group's commitment up to the $20,000 goal.

"A tremendous effort has been put on by the Friends to raise the necessary funds in order to maintain a $50 user fee," Stephen Hart, superintendent of Cohasset Schools, said adding, "I am very impressed by the efforts of this group in support of all of the student athletes."

The Cohasset High School Student Council, in its joint effort with the Friends in the "Chair Share" fundraiser, will use its funds to support a wide variety of activities which benefit the entire student body. These activities include a Fall "back to school" breakfast, a student book store, free spectator buses to high school athletic events, and others.

Owning a deed to a chair at the Music Circus will permit the owner all the rights to an entry into the Fun Fair, of games and activities, at the Music Circus' parking lot. The fun fair will be held from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., Saturday, June 23, with the "Chair Share" drawing at 4 p.m. Deed holders do not have to be present in order to win.

Members of the Student Council, student athletes and Friends of Cohasset School Sports are selling "Chair Share" deeds in Cohasset and around the South Shore. Any individual or business wishing to support this effort may call the Cohasset High School at 383-6100.

Students tour recycling plant

On Monday June 4 at 10 a.m. approximately 100 sixth graders from the Deer Hill School in Cohasset arrived at the town's recycling and transfer facility for a guided tour, conducted by the recycling committee of the town board of health.

This is one in a continuing series of tours of the facility offered by the recycling committee in their continuing effort to educate the people of Cohasset in both the need for, and the actual mechanics of, the Town's expanding recycling program. As in the previous tours given to the second and fifth grade classes, the children will get a chance to see first hand where their trash goes. It is a hands on experience that hopefully will result in the students coming away with a much clearer image of what they throw away and what portion of their trash can be, and in fact is, recycled.

During previous tours the students got to grind up plastic milk jugs in preparation for recycling, and to actually get inside the dumpsters of newsprint and corrugated cardboard to be recycled. The students are also given a brief history of the transfer facility (formerly the dump) and are encouraged to take what they learn about trash and recycling home to share with their families.

According to board of health member Sharon Becker "there is no better way to understand the need for, and the mechanics of, recycling than to see it happening, and it's great to offer such a fun and educational field trip to our students so close to home." She went on to say that "the recycling program here is constantly expanding, and we are continuing to look for new markets for what we used to call trash."

DeCruz is class of 1990 valedictorian

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Suzzanne Nicole DeCruz started her school career as a painfully shy child. She threw herself into school work because it was something she was good at.

Although she says being so easily intimidated can hold a child back, she found it fostered an ability to focus in on her studies. That ability has served her in good stead.

On June 3, DeCruz graduated from Cohasset High School at the top of her class.

She gives her parents, Rudolf and Joan DeCruz, a lot of the credit for how she's turned out.

"My parents have given me a lot of freedom and a lot of support," DeCruz said. I appreciate that.

"They show they have a lot of trust in me. In return, they've gotten an open and honest person."

Then DeCruz laughed and said, "It helps me stay out of trouble."

DeCruz also has an older brother, Todd, whom she described as a math and science wizard. She takes great pride in his success at Rensselaer where he is studying architecture.

That shy little grade schooler was also a voracious reader. Her favorite books featured feisty heroines like Anne of Green Gables, Ramona the Pest and Pippi Longstocking. Something of them must have rubbed off on her, because DeCruz is no shrinking violet.

She explained that as she matured she became more comfortable with herself and no longer so concerned with what others thought.

DeCruz confessed she finds it hard to see herself as intelligent, although her classmates have her pegged as the brainy one.

"I don't always get the right answer," she said. "I like to fail sometimes. It shows them I'm human."

DeCruz identified self-motivation as her major strength.

"My parents never sat me down and said 'do your homework now' or 'you will play with these educational toys," she said. "I was never pressured."

DeCruz just plain loves to learn. Her bedroom is chock-a-block with anatomy books, because she would like to learn it before she gets to college. She also has a collection of language tapes because, she said, she'd like to speak a lot of languages.

Her immediate plans include college. After considering many different schools, DeCruz decided to attend Haverford in Pennsylvania.

Although she has a real strength in English and languages, DeCruz has chosen a career in medicine because she enjoys biology and chemistry.

"I find science more challenging, she said. "I like to push myself."

At this time, DeCruz plans to specialize in reconstructive surgery. She wants to help burn victims and people with birth defects.

Reconstructive surgery appeals to her because it blends her artistic talents with a helping profession. Although she said she wished it weren't so, society judges people by their physical appearance. Helping someone feel better about themselves and more acceptable appeals to her.

She leaves the door open to change. She knows she wants to have a family some day and wonders how a career in surgery will affect that goal.

Although she is good in math and science, it hasn't always been that way. In one of her early grades she had a teacher who made her feel incompetent in mathematics. Sheer determination pulled her through her math studies, but she always believed she lacked the aptitude for math.

Then she met Dennis Walsh.

Walsh teaches calculus at the high school. His gift of being able to teach "like he knew some people are afraid of math," helped her rediscover math.

DeCruz also enjoys art. Mostly, she draws. She likes to sketch people and still lifes, but is less interested in nature scenes. This summer she plans to expand her horizons and work in a different medium, probably water color.

Finding time to read just for pleasure is virtually impossible. With all the required reading in Advanced Placement English courses, she said there is no time to read. In the summers, she tries to read the classics.

TAKE OFF THE MASK

Pain does not simply arise out of nowhere for no reason. Most people, however, dismiss pain with medication and make no effort to trace its cause. These same pain-sufferers must be made to realize that pain is a warning signal. The nervous system is working to send the information to various areas of the body for interpretation. The misinterpret or ignore this information is to invite a breakdown of sorts as a result of failure. The point is not to wait for the crisis of health failure to act upon disease. Chiropractic medicine prides itself in its focus of tracking down the source of pain and treating it without medication. Masking pain with a pill will do nothing to alter the source of that pain. It only temporarily relieves a person of the symptom.

King. Her tastes are eclectic. She likes everything from King to Nabokov, with one notable exception. She really can't stand science fiction.

One of her favorite books is "All I Really Need to Know I Learned in Kindergarten" by Robert Fulghum. She first read it last summer, and said it had a big impact on her. So much so that she used it as the basis of her valedictory speech.

DeCruz wasn't worried about delivering her speech. She has done some acting and had two years experience in debating.

"I loved debating," she said. "I've been doing it with my parents since I was little.

"I like reasoning things out rather than blowing up."

Her love of debating led her to consider a career in law, but medicine had a stronger pull.

DeCruz also likes to write. She's been editor of the newspaper for two years, written for the yearbook, and just finished the class history.

"I would like to write when I'm older," she said.

She would also like to travel extensively. Topping the itinerary of her dreams are Ireland and Japan.

DeCruz spent a month in Europe with her family in 1986. The following year, she spent two weeks in Holland with a friend.

Experiencing other people's culture, customs and foods excites her. One of the most interesting experiences she had in Holland was spending about three hours answering questions about the United States.

"Everybody expected me to have a Southern accent," she recalled. The reason – everybody watched "Dallas."

They also wondered if Americans ate lots of hotdogs and hamburgers. The size of the United States boggled their minds.

In her valedictory speech, DeCruz called her education at CHS "the greatest gift that I have received."

The shy kid knows she's ready to spread her wings and fly high.

Boy's tennis team beat out in second round

By David McKee
Mariner staff

The clock struck midnight for the Cinderella Cohasset boys tennis team in the second round of the state tourney.

The Skippers dumped Falmouth in the first round of action 3-2, but had the tables turned on them in the second round as they fell to Silver Lake 3-2 and were eliminated.

"This was a great season for the program," assistant coach Rich Redick said. "We made the tourney, won in the first round and almost had another win. This will only be positive for the future."

The end came as third singles player junior Caleb Slotnick dropped the third and decisive match against Silver Lake.

At that time the Lakers led the match 2-1 with both Slotnick and second singles senior Frank Willshire, still on the court.

Slotnick lost in straight sets 7-6, 7-5 and Silver Lake had the match clinched with their third win.

After match point, Slotnick whacked a tennis ball clear over the fence in frustration.

The Skippers started strong against Silver Lake as first singles junior Pat Milligan won 6-3, 6-1.

"He's an all-court player and was steady and consistent all match," Redick said.

Willshire, in his last high school match managed to pull out a gritty 5-7, 6-3, 6-1 win at second singles.

"That was a great win for Frank," Redick said. "It looked like his opponent just didn't want it as bad. I'm glad Frank went out with a win. It showed a lot of heart to keep playing hard even though he knew the team had lost."

Slotnick lost at third singles in straight sets.

"He fought hard," Redick said. "There were a lot of long points and a break here or there and it could have been a different story."

The first doubles team of sophomore John Brister and eighth grader Tim Brister lost 6-2, 6-3.

"They were a little off their game," Redick said. "They are young and fought hard but it just wasn't enough."

The second doubles team of sophomore Dan DeMicheal and junior Mike Cisneros lost as well 7-6, 6-3.

"They hung tough in the first set but they were a little off the pace in the second set," Redick said.

EARLIER ACTION

The showdown with Silver Lake was set up by a 3-2 win over Falmouth in the first round.

Milligan won at first singles in straight sets 7-6, 6-4.

"This was a very close match," Redick said. "Pat was very aggressive and that was the key for him. This match decided the whole thing and he really came through."

Willshire lost a close match at second singles 4-6, 6-3, 6-4.

"This was the type of match Frank has had all year," Redick said. "He played hard but in the end didn't have enough."

Slotnick won at third singles in three sets, 6-1, 1-6, 6-2.

"Caleb was very consistent and steady in this match," Redick said. "He won by hitting the ball solidly from the baseline."

The first doubles team of John and Tim Brister pulled out a big win in three sets, 4-6, 6-2, 6-1.

"They really made a great comeback," Redick said. "They took the net away from the other team and that was the key."

And the second doubles team of DeMicheal and Cisneros lost 1-6, 6-0, 7-6.

"They were very close at the end," Redick said. "They only lost the match by a point or two and were in it the whole way."

Redick said the first round win was great for the team.

"It was very uplifting to get out of there with a win," he said. "That gave us a lot of confidence going into the second round. It was a great effort by everyone. With a young team like ours, we weren't looking too far ahead."

Redick said the strong tourney will help the team down the road.

"We lose one senior and have the rest coming back and they will be able to use this experience. Hopefully next year there will be a different outcome."

Girls tennis team netted by rival in tourney

By David McKee
Mariner staff

The Cohasset girls tennis team saw its stellar season come to an end as Bridgewater-Raynham dumped the Skippers out of the state tourney with a 3-2 loss in the first round.

"It was a real close match that no one likes to lose," coach Betty Zadel said. "We had some matches that were close but we ended up on the short side."

The Skippers got out on the right foot by grabbing a win at first singles.

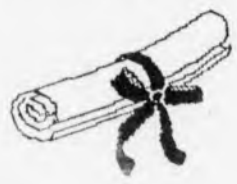
Senior Michelle Massa won the match 6-1, 6-0.

"She was dominant in the match right from the start," Zadel said. "She has just had an unbelievable year. She won eleven matches, never was taken to three sets and was chosen for the all-star team. She is just a steady and solid player and really picked up her play in the second part of the year."

At second singles junior Sophie Redfield lost a tough 7-5, 6-2 match.

"She is a third set player," Zadel said. "I thought if she got to a third set she might have had a shot. But she has also had a great year for us. She was also chosen to the all-star team."

At third singles sophomore Nicole Beryla lost in straight sets 7-5, 6-3.



"Her opponent was real strong," Zadel said. "Nicole had a lot of long points but couldn't prevail in the end. I was disappointed that we couldn't take another singles match."

At first doubles juniors Ellen Schramm and Rebecca Jordan lost a tough three-setter, 7-6 (7-2), 1-6, 5-7.

"This was another tough match and they had their chances, but they were just a little short," Zadel said. "But they have also had a great year. They had an 11-1 record and made the all-star team and played great for a team in their first year together."

Then at second singles the Skippers got their

Pony League teams hit .700 mark

By John Kinchla
Special to the Mariner

Contributing Reporters: Lot Bates, Jeff Bryant, Brian Fahey

Pony League Action Week 4 Report

The Cohasset Pony League Teams returned to their winning ways this week as the two teams have a combined winning percentage of over .700.

The Cohasset Heights Pony Yankees beat Norwell on May 25. John Maynard pitched a solid game striking out nine Norwell batters as all players contributed with hits. Peter Fahey and Brendan Kinchla had three hits, Chris Rolandelli, Chris Mckenna, Pat Reynolds, and Andy Kamatoris had two hits each. Ed Taylor hit a towering double to score two runs.

In the "Pony League baseball battle for Cohasset," the Cohasset Height Yankees beat the Sestito Landscaping Pirates. The Pirates, without their full complement of players and with Jim Magner unable to play, held their own for five innings. Matt Berger pitched superb ball for the Pirates against an equally superb Chris Rolandelli. The Yankees finally broke through in the sixth inning after Berger had been removed. Peter Fahey stroked a single then proceeded to steal both second and third. He scored on a single through the middle by Scott Theriault. Defensively both teams shone. Pirate's Catcher Nate Fiore made two difficult catches against the screen to shut down one Yankee rally and Yankee John Maynard made a spectacular over-the-shoulder catch on a ball by Pirate Dave Leahy to close the game.

On Monday, May 28 the Yankees defeated Scituate 7 to 0. Chris Kondrat pitched a three hitter for Cohasset and contributed to his own cause with three hits. Defense, once again was the difference as many outstanding plays were recorded. Rightfielder Chris Stevens caught a long fly ball in the seventh inning dusk to preserve the shutout.

The final Pony game of the week was a loss to Scituate. Despite a late rally, the Sestito Landscaping Pirates lost 7 to 4. Scituate's Jerry Cooney delivered a game winning single in the fifth to wipe out Cohasset's hopes of a 1000 week. Joe Andrade pitched for Cohasset and looked good. According to reports, Pirate mistakes caused the defeat.

Alco Oil Players of the Week Awards went to Leo's Exxon Red Sox Catcher, Kevin McKenna who stroked the second homer of the season this week.

Wednesday, May 30, In the Game of the Week, The Dean Witter Mets got off to a fast start in this thriller with the Leo's Exxon Red Sox. The Mets premier pitcher Eric Henry struck out 12 Sox players, while the Red Sox's 12-year-old ace, Greg Stevens struck out 13 Mets. Key hits were delivered by Eric Henry, Ken Leahy, and J.L Williams for the Mets, while the Red Sox were led by Greg Stevens and Joe Magner. The Sox lost in a squeaker 8 to 7.

On May 26, the National Abatement Pirates were defeated by the Mets 27 to 9.

On Thursday, May 31, the Spensley Chevrolet Athletics also beat the Pirates 20 to 5. Matt Morris second win of the match as sophomore Kathleen Conroy and freshman Karyn Murray won in straight sets 6-1, 6-3.

"This was a super match," Zadel said. "They played great right from the start and it was a nice surprise to see them win that easily."

The Skippers ended the year with a 10-5 overall record with a 10-2 league mark.

They also placed four players, Massa, Redfield, Schramm and Jordan on the South Shore League all-star team.

"It was disappointing to go out in the first round," Zadel said. "We would have liked to advance farther along. But then number one ranked Sharon would have been next and that would have been a chore. But it would have been nice to give it a try. But this was a great year for our program. We made the tourney and had over half our lineup make the all-star team.

Zadel is looking to have the team come back even stronger next year.

"I hope the kids work on their game over the summer," she said. "It will only help their game. But I think the foundation is there."

Three finalists for principal are interviewed

Morrissey described herself as a people-oriented risk taker with a lot of energy.

Morrissey's background in curriculum development is varied and extensive. She said she has served on curriculum development committees that instituted new reading and writing programs and peer coaching for teachers. Ultimately, Morrissey plans to qualify for a position as an assistant superintendent for curriculum development.

Morrissey told the committee she would not seek an assistant superintendency for at least 10 years.

Morrissey said she tended to make decisions based on feelings and intuition and her preferred management style is participatory. Any change she would make would take place slowly and only after getting thoroughly familiar with the school, staff, students and parents.

Morrissey said she evaluates teachers by observing them in the classroom on a frequent basis, then identifying areas of strengths and weaknesses.

A Braintree resident, Morrissey holds a bachelor's degree in education from Framingham State College and a master's degree in school administration from Bridgewater State College.

She has been assistant principal in East Bridgewater since 1988. Prior to that, she spent a year as assistant principal at Kingston Elementary School and 15 years as a teacher in the Weymouth school system.

The second applicant to be interviewed was Kevin Cushman, principal of the Ella F. Hoxie School in Bourne. Cushman also described himself as energetic and said he was a proactive administrator.

Cushman said he had been able to institute several curriculum changes during the year he has served as principal despite an entrenched philosophy. Cushman attributed his success to "enthusiasm and working with the staff."

His approach to making change is through collegiality and empowerment, rather than through confrontation. A logical, well laid out plan with specific timelines also reduces obstacles to change, he said.

Cushman also evaluates his staff through frequent observation and joint goal-setting sessions. He works with his staff on areas that need improvement.

A Minot resident, Cushman holds degrees from the University of Massachusetts and Lesley College.

Cushman has been principal at Hoxie since September 1989. Prior to that, he was a special needs teacher at the John Glenn Middle School in Bedford and Harrington Elementary School in Lexington. He also taught social studies at the junior high level and served as an elementary school teacher.

The final candidate was Linda Whitney, an instructor in early childhood education at Fisher College and part of the admissions team at South Area Solomon Schecter School in Stoughton.

Whitney said her strengths are her knowledge of child development and her ability to empower teachers and get them involved in goal setting and curriculum development.

Whitney's goal would be to build a child-centered and developmentally-focused curriculum. She would make changes only after a thorough needs assessment.

She also envisions building partnerships between the schools and local businesses and organizations.

Whitney evaluates staff in a variety of ways. All the evaluation techniques she uses include observations and extensive conversations to determine strengths and weaknesses.

Whitney, a Mansfield resident, holds a bachelor's degree in English and elementary education and a master's degree in education from Boston College.

Prior to her present job, Whitney supervised student teachers for Rhode Island College and worked as an elementary education teacher and reading specialist.

All three applicants agreed that a separate principal for the Osgood School was essential. With nearly 400 students at Osgood and geographically separate from Deer Hill, they said both schools would suffer if forced to share a principal.

None of the candidates foresaw any difficulty serving as principal of one school and overseeing curriculum development for both. They anticipate a close working relationship with the staff and administration of both schools.

In response to a question posed by committee member Ralph Kidder about the "graying" of the state's teachers, so-called because the average age of teachers in the commonwealth is 47, all three felt age and experience was generally a positive factor.

"A professional is a professional," Cushman said. "I don't think 47 is old, and I don't think it would impede the ability to change or adopt a new curriculum."

Finally, the three applicants welcome and encourage active involvement by parents and community people.

Parents Meeting, Deer Hill School, met June 5 to discuss preparation for the picnic on June 9. .

PROFILE ON THE COHASSET LITTLE LEAGUE

(R.W.Gledhill Siding) ORIOLES

The Orioles coached by Bob Gledhill and Rick Towle have improved with each game. The team is currently in first place within the four team minor league (age 10 and 11) division.

The Orioles' success has been due to their diligence on the field. The O's are an excellent fielding team. Helping the O's ascension into first place have been Jessica Hurley, Dan Cannarozzi, John Kasameyer and Tucker Gledhill, while infielders Garrick Towle, Patrick Murphy Adam Sasso and Ted Reardon have played excellent as has James Kaplan at third base. Justin McNamara, Jeremy Williams and Erik Allen have been providing the power hitting.

Team attitude and persistence has also been a factor in the improving performance of the O's. All the players have contributed both on the field and in the dugout to a positive team attitude this season. According to Coach Towle, "Everyone has played enthusiastic and intelligent baseball thus far this season."

Joint effort seeks to clean Gulf

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

The cooperative effort of the town's water department, health department and schools – plus the support of the Gulf Association – has pinpointed two places along the river where pollution runs high.

Officials say the initial tests may not show the whole picture. More tests along the small river and its feeder streams will be compiled over the summer by students from Cohasset High School.

In the meantime, Joseph Godzik, the health agent, will begin checking the banks of the river for obvious sources of pollution.

Two high school seniors spent several months gathering samples from nine sites along the Gulf River, which marks the border between Cohasset and Scituate.

Matt Silvia and Adrienne May, recent CHS graduates, worked throughout the spring to test the waters of the Gulf.

One of the nine sites tested produced coliform counts high enough to close a public beach. The location on the water near Black Horse Lane will be checked further. The coliform count is an indication of pollution in water. The high test was 280, with 200 being enough to close a beach.

A location on the Scituate side of the river, off Border Street, also produced results high enough to cause some concern. The reading was 120.

Readings for the other seven test sites were consistently under 80, according to John Pereira, who handles testing for the town water department.

The water department provided the test results. This is the first time the water department has worked on tests in salt water and Godzik suggested that over the summer different methods of testing be used to check the results.

James Franey, who teaches marine biology at the high school, is overseeing the student involvement.

John Hartshorne of the Gulf Association, a group of residents who live along the banks of the river, is providing support for the project.

The project got underway at the urging of residents who live along the river.

"Some of us suspected things were not as they should be," Hartshorne said.

Scituate officials may get involved at some point. The Scituate health agent participated in the initial meetings.

The testing over the summer will cover locations along Bound Brook and Musquashicut Pond in Scituate since those waters end up in the Gulf River.

The students who have volunteered to gather the test samples over the summer are: Kate Barrett, John Kinchla, Bill Jordan, Ben Chittick, Will Adams, Nathan Fiore, Doug Ellinger, John Maynard, Brian Donovan, Patty Tolini, Linc Marsac, Alyson James and Dan Baird.

Franey said more students may get involved.

The project will be an ongoing one with new students recruited in the fall.

Selectmen begin to brake Old Colony train

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

After listening to the objections, concerns and fears residents have about the Old Colony railroad restoration plan, selectmen voted unanimously to join with Hingham in requesting a 45-day extension of the comment period.

Fifteen residents asked for time on the June 11 agenda to voice their concerns about the planned restoration of the Greenbush line, slated for 1994.

If the line is built, it would run through some densely populated sections of Cohasset. The state estimates that 270 Cohasset residents would use the line daily.

Resident Brian McKenney warned that this was a tremendous project with the potential to change Cohasset forever.

"Once done we can never call it back," McKenney said. "Every child in town that walks or rides their bicycles will be affected. Three hundred times a day there will be warning bells and the sound of diesel engines."

The cost was a major detriment. The project is expected to cost $562 million in capital outlays and Cohasset may be hit with annual operating expenses of $400,000 to $550,000 a year.

"They could spend a tenth of that to get us all a private boat to take us into Boston every day," McKenney argued.

He also wondered how a town that said at town meeting that it couldn't afford an ambulance, a police-fire station or school repairs could afford to give that kind of money to the largest, worst-run agency in the state.

Not everyone was opposed to the railroad. Many questioned the wisdom of the Greenbush line, suggesting the region would be better served if the trains were placed parallel to Route 3.

Others questioned the wisdom of using such old technology to meet transportation needs in the 21st century.

Debbie Cook who served on the MBTA Citizens Advisory Committee for the project said she was very troubled by the benefits versus the cost. Cook said in exchange for the very expensive project, very few cars would be taken off the highways.

"The riders will come off the bus and the commuter boats," she said. "I think the thing is a total boondoggle."

Selectman Jane Goedecke warned the residents that the state would not make a final decision based on what Cohasset wanted. The decision

Linda Whitney chosen as new Osgood principal

Mariner staff

At a brief meeting held June 7, the school committee unanimously appointed Linda Whitney as the new principal for the Joseph Osgood School and the curriculum coordinator for Osgood and the Deer Hill School.

The meeting was announced during the regularly scheduled school committee meeting of June 4, but was not posted with the town clerk.

Whitney will replace John Creamer who will retire at the end of September. Creamer has been principal of Osgood for 18 years of the 36 years he has spent in the Cohasset school system.

Whitney currently works as an instructor in early childhood education at Fisher College in Seekonk and does admissions for the South Area Solomon Schecter School in Stoughton.

In her interview on June 4, Whitney stressed her commitment to a child-centered, developmentally-focused curriculum. She said she was drawn to Cohasset because of its sense of community and its reputation for educational excellence.

Whitney said a kindergarten through grade 3 building, such as the Osgood School, is the ideal educational setting for early childhood. She wel-

Shellfishing banned

The presence of red tide along the South Shore, extending to Georges Bank, has forced the state Division of Marine Fisheries to ban shellfishing from the Cohasset-Scituate line to Gurnet Point.

Shellfishing could be banned until September, according to a spokesman in the state Division of Marine Fisheries.

New representative sought

With the resignation of David Chittim, Cohasset is seeking a new representative to the South Shore Regional School District.

Although few Cohasset students are enrolled at the vocational technical high school, selectmen consider Cohasset's participation in the regional school essential. Cohasset High School does not offer a comprehensive vocational technical program.

Any resident interested in representing Cohasset on the regional school committee should call or write Cohasset Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset. The telephone number at town hall is 383-0220.

Music Circus gets licenses

Selectmen unanimously approved the licenses necessary to get South Shore Music Circus off to a flying start.

According to Executive Secretary Greg Doyon, the only remaining tasks are routine inspections by the health department and the building inspector.

Executive Producer Edward Kasses of the Music Circus said it wasn't possible to apply for the licenses before the schedule was set. He also said that the fifty-cent restoration charged on tickets bought at the Music Circus box office was being used to defray the costs of redoing the septic system for the main bathrooms and to support the Cohasset High School athletic programs. Kasses also noted that ticket prices were the same as last year.

One resident raised concerns about the traffic problems, particularly on evenings with double shows.

Kasses said the only performer with a double show was Diana Ross. He described her show as featuring a short opening act, a short intermission and a short performance by Ross. He didn't anticipate gridlock with ticket holders meeting in passage. He also said the last show would end before 11 p.m.

The concerned neighbor told selectmen that Kasses had always tried to cooperate with their concerns, but added that she felt it necessary to be vigilant.

After the selectmen approved Kasses' licenses, she said to him, "We'll leave together. We're still friends."

Insurance options shown

Town employees will be meeting tonight (Thursday) at 7:45 at town hall to hear representatives of the various health insurance companies talk about the options.

Blue Cross plans to discontinue employee health coverage unless more people sign up for the plan. Only 13 percent of the town employees opt for Blue Cross.

The meeting is sponsored by the health insurance advisory committee, according to Lenny Davis, one of the members.

He said there are questions the town needs to answer. One of those questions is whether the town will pay half the cost of medical insurance if retired employees, living out of state, are forced to switch from Blue Cross to an out-of-state plan.

Studds returns after attack

U.S. Rep. Gerry E. Studds is back at work this week after being beaten June 7 by two youths on a street near his Washington, D.C., home.

The two 19-year-olds from Maryland were arraigned last Friday in U.S. District Court. They pleaded innocent to a charge of assaulting a member of Congress and were released on personal recognizance. The case was continued to June 25.

Field plan gets bogged down

The Milliken-Lillard field may have gotten bogged down in conservation commission concerns about animal habitats and wetlands.

According to the chairman of the Milliken-Lillard Field Study Committee, Joe Connolly, and Wayne Sawchuk of the Friends of the Milliken-Lillard Field, the committee has submitted final plans and a drainage report to the conservation commission. Now the conservation commission wants to hire a specialist to review the plans.

"We don't want to turn this into another $30,000 study," Wayne Sawchuk pleaded. According to Sawchuk and Connolly, the committee doesn't have the money to spend on additional studies.

Sawchuk asked if it would be possible to get the conservation committee to sit down with the selectmen and the Milliken-Lillard committee.

"I am in complete agreement with Wayne on this," Selectman Diana Kornet said. "I am extremely alarmed at how the costs are skyrocketing on this."

A TRAIN IN COHASSET IS NEARING REALITY.

HAVE YOU STOPPED TO THINK WHAT IT WILL MEAN TO YOUR TOWN?

Q. Will the proposed Greenbush Line, serving the South Shore Communities from Weymouth to Greenbush (Scituate), truly improve commuter traffic?

FACTS:

- Travel time on the train from Cohasset to Boston is projected to take 42-49 minutes. This is not taking into consideration time spent commuting to the station.
- Today Route 3A carries over 30,000 cars daily through Cohasset.
- Commuters on the entire Greenbush Line will decrease this number by less than 2,000.

Q. Is a potential savings in travel time worth the cost?

FACTS:

- Capital costs of $562 million are required to build the project.
- Annual operating costs of at least $25 million will be covered only by one third from ticket revenues.
- The remainder is likely to be spread as an assessment over communities served.

This could mean as much as $400,000 per year (based solely on the operating costs) in support of Cohasset's 270 projected daily commuters, –an investment of $1,500 per rider per year. This figure could dramatically increase if the capital costs were included in the assessment.

In a town where overrides for school improvements, ambulance, police and fire equipment, were rejected, these additional fees will be a "no-choice" reality, and in a state suffering from a poor economy, this project offers a questionable return on investment.

Q. Will the train improve living conditions in Cohasset?

FACTS:

- 12 round-trip trains from 5:30 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. will cross Cohasset at 12 grade crossings everyday; warning horns, bells, flashing lights and the sound of diesel engines will invade the tranquility of this community 300 times daily.
- The proposed train route will cross Cohasset's busiest pedestrian, bike and auto intersections. The proposed train will add danger to every trip to and from the Osgood School, Deer Hill School, the High School, the Swim Center, Little League Field, Library, Community Center and the Village.
- A 6' chain link fence will run through Cohasset village to protect Cohasset's children.
- The train line, with its sole passing track in Cohasset, is planned to run directly adjacent to the Osgood School.

Unanswered Questions:

The Draft EIS currently available for review at the Cohasset Library does not address the following issues:

- Impact of chemical defoliants for clearing of right of way.
- Potential other uses of the train route such as hauling freight, removing trash.
- Historical data regarding safety.
- Projected land use changes including commercial & industrial development.

But most importantly:

Who will pay for a service that benefits a mere 3% of our population and provides negligible improvement on road congestion?

The MBTA has secured financing approvals and the federal government is expected to confirm their financial support. In other words, time is up and July 2 is the final deadline to voice your concerns.

Resident withdraws request to selectmen for light

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Bert Paley of 399 Atlantic Avenue withdrew his request for a blinking yellow light near his property when he found his neighbors unanimously opposed it.

Paley, a relative newcomer to Cohasset, requested the light to slow down traffic for the safety of people entering and exiting his driveway as well as for pedestrians and joggers in the area. Paley had volunteered to pay all expenses associated with the light.

None of his neighbors disagreed with his contention that the area was a safety hazard. Paley's property is located at what is described as "a serious bend" in the road. What is in dispute is the solution.

Paley believed the blinking light would slow down drivers, particularly summer beach-goers.

His neighbors disagreed, noting that the blinking light at 355 Atlantic Avenue did not prevent four or five drivers from crashing into Mary Hagerty's fence. They recommended Paley could reduce the problem by trimming his hedge.

Several neighbors signed a petition stating, among other things, that the height of Paley's hedge violated zoning regulations. Paley said the hedge was currently about six feet high.

"That hedge was always three feet before," said John Englander of 374 Atlantic Avenue.

Englander was one of a roomful of neighbors opposed to the blinking light. In his particular case, the light would flash into his child's bedroom at night.

Deirdre Eisenstadt who lives directly across the street also spoke against the light.

"It has been our direct experience that the previous residents had no problems getting in and out," she said. "We think the only solution (for speeding traffic) is a "sleeping policeman." That, it was explained, is slang for a speed bump.

Another neighbor said several seaside communities were installing speed bumps to control traffic speed.

When Paley withdrew his request, he indicated he would give consideration to trimming back the hedge. According to a report from Building Inspector Robert Egan, the property is on a severe curve, but not technically a corner. Zoning regulations only govern hedge height on corner lots, according to Egan.

Selectmen weren't convinced that the bumps were permissible or wise in public ways, but indicated they would review possible ways of controlling traffic in the area with the police department and the traffic safety officer.

"In the summer time, there's a lot of very dangerous driving that goes on there," Selectman Ned Tebbetts said.

In other business, the selectmen:

• granted permission to John Kenney to park 12 cars in the upper lot at Government Island on Aug. 11.

• granted a one-day liquor license to the South Shore Art Center for June 23. According to Spokesman George Dalton, the liquor will be consumed within the building.

• granted permission to the Cohasset High Class of 1970 Reunion to park 30 cars at Sandy Beach parking lot for a family picnic on Aug. 5. According to Marilyn Morrisson, the cars will be identified with reunion placards.

• approved a late renewal of the Sunday sales license for Sea 'N Cheese.

Campaign stresses affordable housing

"Buy '90" is the theme of the Homeownership Campaign of seven Massachusetts organizations when the director of the Massachusetts Housing Partnership [the Executive Office of Communities and Development, the Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency, the Massachusetts Association of Realtors, the Massachusetts Mortgage Bankers Association, the Home Builders Association of Massachusetts, and the Massachusetts Affordable Housing Alliance].

The homeownership campaign focuses on opportunities available in today's market for low to moderate income households trying to buy a home for the first time. These opportunities are greater than at any time in recent years. Financing is clearly available and affordable units are as well.

On Sunday, June 24 the Buy '90 Campaign will hold a homeownership fair to serve the Metropolitan Boston area, including South Shore residents. It will be held at the Hynes Convention Hall in Boston from noon until 5 p.m. At this fair, models of affordable units will be on display, workshops will be offered, and representatives of regional buyer clearing house will be present. How to gain access to financing available to make a first home purchase will be one of the workshop offerings.

This was a major agenda item at the June 4 meeting at town hall of the Cohasset Housing Partnership. The residents who serve on the partnership were appointed by the selectmen to promote and facilitate the development of suitable affordable housing units in Cohasset, mindful of legal, environmental, and service considerations as well as neighborhood concerns and town character.

Part of the mission of the CHP is to educate would be first time homeowners about regional buying opportunities. Publicizing the "Buy '90" Home Show on Sunday, June 24 with posters in public places in Cohasset is an example of what the Partnership was established to accomplish, especially in the absence of such affordable units in Cohasset.

The Partnership also aims to facilitate the construction of suitable new housing or the conversion of existing housing to accommodate families who work in Cohasset or were raised here and would like to be Cohasset homeowners or residents.

The Cohasset Housing Partnership considers the availability of at least two affordable housing units for purchase each year in Cohasset a minimum must for the town. Thus on June 4 the Partnership discussed several town-owned properties, which members of the Partnership will explore for their suitability as sites for affordable housing.

The Partnership also approved the final draft of its mission statement and guidelines. With Selectman Martha Gjesteby in attendance, the Partnership requested that these guidelines, as well as queries about the availability of certain parcels of town-owned land and buildings, be placed on the agenda of the Board of Selectmen. Both items will be discussed by the Selectmen on June 25.

Selectman Edwin Tebbetts asked about the federal funds counted on for the financing.

Polechronis said the state legislature would decide if the project is viable if the federal funds fall through.

The project is slated to cost $561 million for restoration of the three lines of Old Colony track. Two of the three lines have remained in use over the years. Track along the Greenbush line has been torn up. The right of way in Cohasset no longer belongs to the state.

The plan calls for a station located at Route 3A and North Main Street on the property formerly used as a skating rink.

There would be 12 places in town where the tracks would cross public roads and four places where the tracks would cross private roads.

About 270 residents are expected to use the train which would get to Boston in 42 minutes.

Rail plan questioned

Will people pay $5 a day for a roundtrip ride from Cohasset to Boston?

And is it a financially feasible proposition when a 70 percent subsidy is needed just to bring the cost down to $5?

What are the safety statistics for commuter trains operating now?

Why won't there be traffic lights by the entrance to the Cohasset train station?

Those were but a few of the questions raised last Wednesday night when the MBTA held a hearing at town hall on the reconstruction of the Greenbush line of the Old Colony Railroad.

About 80 people turned out for the lengthy hearing.

Louis Eaton, the town's representative on the state transportation commission, said he favors train service but believes the construction and operating expenses will push the cost up too high.

Robert Davenport, a local businessman, suggested a traffic light should be installed by the train station.

Stephen Polechronis, MBTA project manager, said the number of cars using the lot wouldn't justify a light.

Creamer prepares to step down after 18 years

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

When Jack Creamer retires as principal of Osgood School in September he will not miss the budget preparations and the paper work, but he misses the children already.

"The happiest period of my life has been dealing smaller children," he said. "They are so innocent, so responsive."

For 18 years, Creamer has been shepherding those smaller children through their crucial first years of formal education. He looks at the role played by Osgood as connecting the world of the family with the world of education.

Creamer knows parents are full of hopes, dreams and fear when they send their children off to kindergarten. He and his wife, Janet, sent five of their own. The trust parents have in the school system has been sacred to him.

"We're very fortunate to have parents send their children to us," he said.

Creamer kept that trust going strong by building a school that was open, welcoming and friendly for children and parents alike. The partnership between Osgood School and parents can best be understood by the extent to which parents volunteer — and how appreciated their efforts are.

Creamer cannot say enough for the parents who give so unstintingly of their time and talents. Their work has been more and more essential as money for education continues to dry up.

"We would be lost without having the parents in here," Creamer said.

In addition to the 18 years he has spent at Osgood are another 18 years spent at Deer Hill School. He came to Deer Hill as a teacher in 1954, became assistant principal in 1955 and principal the following year. He spent one other year teaching in Boston before coming to Cohasset.

Creamer feels very fortunate to have had experience in both elementary schools. He was also on the cutting edge of educational change — when he first came to Cohasset, it was unusual for men to work in elementary education.

Creamer has seen a lot of positive changes in education over the past 37 years. He is proud to have been part of instituting some of those changes in Cohasset.

The most important and beneficial changes were those that recognized that there were differences in children and tailored teaching techniques to those differences so every child could reach his full potential.

At heart, however, education is still the simple equation of student and teacher.

At the earliest grades, the curriculum is relatively unchanged. From time to time, greater emphasis is given to math or science or social studies, as it was when the Russians sent Sputnik into orbit creating fears that America was raising a scientifically inept generation.

The biggest change Creamer has seen is not in teaching techniques or curriculum content, but in the innocence of the children.

"I can recall the real innocence of years ago," he said. "That has changed somewhat."

In his educational career, television has put children in touch with the world. Without even considering "entertainment" shows, television has altered childhood.

"Even the news itself is shocking and frightening for children," Creamer said. During his career, children have had to deal with the Korean war, the Vietnam war, the assassination of President Kennedy, Martin Luther King and Robert Kennedy.

Creamer notes that the children who are entering school now will live most of their life in the 21st century. Although many of the issues and problems that will confront them are a mystery, the education they receive in the last years of the 20th century must serve them in good stead.

But Creamer is retiring.

"I will miss the opportunity to be with the children," he sighed. "They keep you young and optimistic. They come to you with all sorts of confidences and treasures."

If Creamer has one professional regret, it is that he went so quickly from the classroom to the principal's office.

"In a sense, I probably moved into administration too quickly," he said. "True joy is working intimately with children. It is hard to get out of the office and into the classroom."

Retirement may bring him greater opportunities to spend time with children. Although he probably will not volunteer at Osgood right away so the new principal will have time to make the school her own, he loves the notion of coming in to a classroom and reading to the children. He is even toying with the notion of writing for children.

Creamer plans to do some writing during his retirement. He likes to write children's stories and poetry. His daughter, known professional as Susan Dreamer, is a commercial artist who designs children's posters and illustrates children's books. His greatest joy would be to co-author a book with her.

Other retirement plans include catching up on his reading. Creamer is especially found of sea stories and political novels.

"I don't know how to retire," he says in parting. "I'd like to do it with some grace." The staff, parents and children aren't worried. They know he'll do it with the same gentle and considerate style that has characterized life at the top of Osgood School since1972.

Whitney appointed

comes the additional role of curriculum coordinator for kindergarten through grade 6 because it creates a leadership role for the principal.

"I don't want to be just a building manager," she told the committee.

Victories wrap up soccer season

By Carol Riley
Special to the Mariner

As the U.S. soccer team struggled in its World Cup opener against Czechoslovakia Sunday, Cohasset wrapped up its spring soccer season in the Coastal Youth Soccer League with some important victories.

Here are the results of recent contests:

On May 28, the Girls Under 16-1 team squeezed by a powerful Plymouth squad 1-0 with Lisa Schramm scoring the winning goal. The entire team played superbly according to coach, Jack O'Brian. On June 3 this team lost to Plymouth 2-1 in a heartbreaker, with Allison Doyle scoring the goal for Cohasset. Six girls from the Girls Under 16-1 team were selected for the District Under-15 team: Kathleen O'Brien, Kathleen O'Sullivan, Jennifer Knowles, Colleen Fitzsimmons, Colby Lawrence and Jennifer Anstead. The district teams are comprised of players from seven towns and play other districts all over the state.

Girls Under 14-2 team scored a big win over Plymouth 3-2, with two goals by Megan Rhodes and one by Erin Murphy, who deserves congratulations for being selected for an international team which will play at a tournament in Ottawa. Also, congratulations to Melinda Johansen and Corinna McMackin who were chosen to play on the District team. Coach Nino D'Urso lauded his assistant, Fred Johansen for guiding this team to its great success.

The final game of the season for the Girls Under 12-1 team was a 1-0 victory over Norwell, with Danielle Nohe scoring the single goal. Assisting the goal were Megan Fahey and Kelly O'Donnell. It was a great season for the Cohasset team with a total of 16 goals. Danielle Nohe was chosen for the District team; her teammates wish her great success. Coach Sandy Theriault praised her girls for "the best season ever."

The Girls Under 10-1 team, coached by Brian Nohe, ended their season at the Hanover Jamboree with a big win against Carver and a tie with Kingston. The girls started out the day by beating Carver 5-0. The team really came together this last day of the season with good efforts by each member of the team. Two goals each were scored by Megan Conley and Alison Kinchla and one by Kristen Reynolds. A great defensive game was played by Jane Flaherty, Katie Devine, Ali Hawks and Janet Hoyler. Goal tending by Kinchla and Maggie Goedecke kept Carver shut out. Moving directly from the Carver game to the Kingston game with only a 5 minute rest, the girls played the best game of the season: Alyssa McNamara scored the single goal to tie the score at 1-1. Alison Kinchla made several incredible stops in goal. The Girls Under 10-1 front line of McNamara, Megan Conley and Kristen Reynolds will be hot, hot, hot next year. Big plays were made in both games by the mid-field team of Alissa Conley, Courtney Brown, Sally Hamill and Sarah Nohe.

Girls Under 10-2 team also played two games at the Hanover Jamboree: they lost the first one to Duxbury 4-1, with a goal by Alexandra DeRosa. Sara Eaton-Bruce was good in goal. Playing well defensively were Phoebe McPhail and Alexandra D'Urso; strong at midfield were Susana Candia and Victoria DeRosa. In the second game, this team was victorious over Halifax 1-0, with the goal by Megan Connolly. Sarah Senechal and Jill Magner played great defense and Lydia Crafts, Kerry Dwyer and Kyralea Cogill were strong at forward. On Saturday, girls Under 10-2 lost a close one to Halifax at their field, 4-2, with both Cohasset goals by Alexandra DeRosa. Coach Nina D'Urso said that Annie Palone, Karyn Gray and Katie Donovan played superb defense and Sarah Eaton-Bruce and Megan Connolly were terrific at forward.

In Boys soccer action, the fine Boys Under 14-1 team, which only lost one game the entire season, whipped Kingston at home, 7-0, with goals by Eric Henry (3), Charlie Endris, Jeremiah Stevenson, Scott Theriault and a show stopper by Nick Terry. Tim Brister was credited with the shut out in goal. In a thriller last Thursday, this team tied Marshfield 1-1 with Tim Brister scoring the goal for Cohasset. Last Sunday, in strong winds, this team lost 4-2 to Duxbury, after leading 2-0 at the half. Goals were scored by Jeremiah Stevenson and Eric Henry, who headed the ball in after receiving a terrific crosskick from Jeremiah Stevenson.

Boys Under 14-2 lost their last game at home to Marshfield 3-1, with the single goal by Pat Reynolds on an assist from Tom Greco. Despite the score, this was a close and exciting game, with Marshfield shut out in the second half. Coach, Stanko Bubanja lauded the entire team for a fine season of effort: Andy Collins, Andy Fitzsimmons, Kevin Gentile, Thomas Greco, Edward Hamilton, Jon Hislop, Kennie Leahy, Ben Manning, Chris McKenna, Kevin O'Donnell, Robin Ordelheide, Pat Reynolds, Ryan Sawchuk, Greg Schultz, Dean Volungis, Tobey Horn, Geofrey Tossi, Jared Hardwick. Executive coach, Jerry Schultz hosted a post game barbecue for the team and showed a videotape of the final contest.

Boys Under 12-1 lost last week to Hanover 3-1, despite awesome play in goal by Kevin McKenna. Tom Kittle scored a header goal on a beautiful crosskick from Brett MacQuarrie. Jason Murphy played strong at midfield. Last Thursday this team lost a make-up game to Duxbury 4-1, with Dylan Walsh scoring the goal on a breakaway from a pass from Ely Kahn. Conor Mangan was strong at midfield as was Kevin McKenna in goal.

Cohasset fielded 26 teams, ranging in age from 7 to 19—some 450 boys and girls competing against teams from 13 South Shore towns in the Coastal Youth Soccer League.

❑Here is more proof that the Youth Soccer program is a great one in our town. Melinda Johansen and Corrina MacMackin made the District all star 14 and under group, which covers the South Shore and Cape Cod. Melinda and Corrina were; two out of 18 picked for the all star team. Congratulations girls!

❑We want to wish Jacky Pattison a speedy healing process! Jack was hard at work a few weeks ago and the staging broke; he fell and broke both of his ankles!! Jack is recuperating at home.

❑Karen Golden is continuing to spread her talents! As you probably know, Karen is the owner/designer for E-I-E-I-O, a fashionable kids' line that everyone loves. Now she has combined talents with Pam Schaefers to produce Move Over Rover, a casual sportswear that makes its debut for back-to-school '90. "Move Over Rover is a very relaxed line of what we call 'sandbox clothes' for kids", said Karen. Karen and her partner handle the design and sales of Mover Over Rover which is available in girls' and boys' sizes 12 months to 6x/7. They expect the moderate priced line to complement their own respective children's wear lines, which are at specialty and better department stores. The clothes are produced and shipped out of Massachusetts! Lots of us remember Karen when she was designing her own beautiful clothes in high school. It's so grand to see that she has used her talents so well...Karen is the daughter of Jack and Doris Golden of Bound Book Lane.

❑Now that June is here, Cohasset race walkers are busting out all over. On Friday, June 1st, at the request of resident and race-walk champion Gerard Keating, teammate Ellery Clark presented a repeat of his "80 Years of Cohasset Memories" at the Old Goats Luncheon at Kimballs. The next day, Channel 7 presented Clark, direct from the Boston Public Library, doing a liver commentary on the famous McGreevey photographic collection of early Boston Red Sox history, from 1901 through the Ted Williams era. It will be on the Channel 7 "Our Times" hour.

❑The Womens Auxiliary of the George H. Mealey Post is sponsoring Lynnette Condito, a junior at Hingham High School, as this year's Girls State Candidate. She is the daughter of David Condito and granddaughter of Mr and Mrs.John White of Cohasset. Lynnette will be spending the week of June 10 through June 15 at Mt. Holyoke College in South Hadley with other juniors from other auxiliary posts from across Massachusetts studying how city and state government works. The auxiliary is also cosponsoring 13 juniors from Scituate High School.

❑Congratulations go to John and Shelanne (Sladen) Durkin of 69 Old Pasture Road on the birth of their daughter, born on May 23 at South Shore Hospital.

❑We certainly want to congratulate Peter Trask this week!! Peter, a former firefighter for Cohasset, recently graduated from UMass/ Boston with a degree in economics, magna cum laude! Peter also received a distinction in economics, which means he had to have a 3.5 average overall, and a 3.8 in economics. Peter is working for Social Security now, as a claims administrator.

❑Matthew Gromada, son of Ed and Madeleine Gromada, is one proud student these days. Matthew, a freshman at Buckingham Brown and Nichols School in Cambridge, won the Meriweather Otis Kimball Award, which is presented to the ninth grade male student for outstanding achievement academically, as a sportsman and for extra-curricular activities. Buckingham, Brown and Nichols annually recognizes one freshman, and this year it was Matthew!! Congratulations go to you , you should be very proud of yourself for this hard earned and well deserved award.

Peg is first vice president of the organization which has over 4500 members from all over the world and from all areas of tourism. Peg sure gained a lot of knowledge while attending the convention, something she was long on anyway! Peg tells us tourism is the world's largest employer and represents 12 percent of the world's economy, so there sure is more to a travel agency than just selling tickets! The next time you have the yearn to travel, go see Peg at Colpitts and she will be happy to help you...she's good!

Chairman Al Odermatt and Coordinator Corrinne Cahill wish to thank not only the donors but also the volunteers who worked on the day of the Bloodmobile, the promoters who signed up the donors, the Red Cross staff and the First Parish House for the use of its premises. It was very pleasant to have 50 of the donors direct their donations to Noel Carpenter who is in Children's Hospital. Cohasset residents who wish to donate blood for Joel can do so without an appointment at Children's Hospital. If donations are made at Sidney Farber Institute an appointment is required, the next Bloodmobile will be held on Tuesday, Sept. 25.

Principal change

John Creamer, principal of Osgood School, is retiring after 36 years of work in Cohasset education.

This town is fortunate to have benefited from Creamer's efforts and dedication.

He's quite obviously a man who loves his work. We hope he finds joy in his retirement.

He spent the past 18 years as principal of Osgood School.

While Creamer is not actually retiring until the end of September, the children, teachers and parents from Osgood pulled together a celebration of sorts last Friday to let the retiring principal know they will all miss him.

Last Thursday the school committee voted to hire someone new to try to fill Creamer's very large shoes.

Linda Whitney was selected, on the recommendation of School Superintendent Stephen Hart, by the school committee as the new principal for the Osgood School.

Whitney is an early childhood development teacher at Fisher College in Seekonk who also handles admissions for the South Area Solomon Schecter School in Stoughton.

While we have no quarrel with the committee's choice, we do take issue with the way the appointment was made.

There was no posting of the Thursday afternoon meeting in the town clerk's office as required by open meeting law.

While we are not questioning the motives of the school officials who sought to postpone the vote after completion of interviews with the three finalists for the job on June 4, we do think it is important that laws be followed.

Indeed we suggest the school committee may want to revote the appointment at another legally scheduled meeting.

The open meeting law is not something written by journalists with the hope of binding the hands of public officials.

It is a law spelling out the way government should be conducted within the commonwealth.

It is one piece of protection designed to keep the process of government wholesome.

We happen to think adherence to the open meeting law is critically important.

We hope the members of the school committee share that view.

We think the new principal deserves to be appointed in full compliance with the law.

We wish her luck.

Her commitment to early childhood education seems impressive. We like what she has to say about child-centered education.

We are sure she is talented — she never would have made it to the top of the field of candidates without considerable ability.

Wompatuck opens

Despite a reduced budget for the Department of Environmental Management, Wompatuck State Park opened last weekend.

The park land includes pieces of Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate and Norwell but the only public access is through Hingham.

Teacher addresses our libraries

Letters

To the Editor:

As an educator and librarian, as well as a near-casualty of last year's Proposition 2 1/2 cutbacks, I would like to address the state of the libraries (public and school) in this town. Then I will focus in on the impact on the Junior/Senior High School and Osgood School when the position of library secretary is eliminated. I realize the school administration has spent many months wrestling with the decisions they faced this year given the current fiscal budget crisis. But this is one decision I still have difficulty comprehending.

We have a most unusual tradition here in Cohasset and that is a fine spirit of cooperation and good-will between the public library and the three school libraries. However, we are all facing the same kinds of fiscal constraints which result in less purchasing power for materials and also reductions in staff. Obviously, the same tasks need to be done, but now by fewer people. In this service-oriented profession we will find it hard to say "no;" but it will be a reality as we face more cutbacks.

I know there are some who wonder why we need a school library when we have a good public library in town. To this I can only say that the two serve quite different functions and different groups of people. The school library is here to support the curriculum and to serve the student and faculty population, whereas the public library is not there to support the needs of the school (although in this town it has often done so). Its patrons range in age from preschoolers to octogenarians. Clearly, The Paul Pratt Library should be able to continue buildings its collection to reflect the varied needs of all the townspeople in Cohasset. I would imagine with the shrinking budget dollar, Library Director, Richard Hayes is having to make as many careful choices in selecting books and periodicals as I find myself doing here in the Junior/Senior High School Library.

Of course, thoughtful choices in selection as well as book talks, bibliographic instruction, supervision of the Osgood School Library, compiling bibliographies for different courses and grade levels, among other tasks take time; and although I take pleasure in doing this, many of these professional activities may have to take a back seat as I wrestle with clerical tasks next year when the cut of the position of library secretary becomes a reality. In my opinion this is a penny-wise pound foolish decision. Library secretary, Janice Batts is worth far more than the salary she is paid.

To provide you with a job description is not going to be easy. She provides all the clerical support for the Junior/Senior High School Library and Osgood School Library — for example, typing up all orders for both school libraries, processing the books, and on a daily basis checking in the magazines and newspapers the library subscribes to. She also files all the catalog cards, and types all correspondence.

Janice has quickly mastered the IBM PC donated to the library this year (Greatly appreciated in the wake of our TRS 80's demise), so that some of the more tedious tasks can be done more quickly. She knows the collection and reads widely so she is a valuable partner in assisting students with finding books. Occasionally, she has acted on my behalf and kept the library open when I've been out. I don't know of too many secretaries who would "sub" for a teacher.

When the library curriculum was developed for the school system I wold never have completed the task without Janice's expertise in the typing/word processing/editing department.

It is Janice who compiles the daily statistics of books, periodicals and AV material that go in and out. . .she is also the person who writes up — by hand this year — the overdues.

In other years, we have worked together to enable the second graders to "author" their own books. This year in the early fall, Janice and I helped new Osgood library aide, Charlene Williams, move all the books and supplies from the former room the library was housed in to its new location in the basement of the school — no easy job, believe me.

Janice Batts does all the clerical tasks one would expect a library secretary to do (and far more. . .) cheerfully and seemingly effortlessly. She frees me up to do the tasks that as librarian I was hired to do. . . for example, collection development, book selection, book talks, budget planning, curriculum development, reader's advisor to students and faculty, bibliographic instruction during research projects, reference work, developing hypermedia and library automation, and supporting/assisting curriculum needs.

If Janice Batts is let go, however, then I will be spending at least half my time (probably more, in that I don't type well) doing clerical work which she now performs with dispatch. Consequently there will be that much less time I can provide the school as librarian. There certainly will be no time to offer support or supervision to Deerhill or Osgood Libraries — something I do now. And undoubtedly there will be no time to order, catalog, and process all the books for Osgood that are now done out of the high school library. So in a way two school libraries will be brought to their knees.

How unfortunate, because in the end it is the students' loss, and as we look toward the 21st century, it will be the individual who is able to access/process information most easily who will succeed. I should like to ensure that the students of Cohasset have the information skills they need to meet the challenges of tomorrow.

It is my hope that we would be able to continue to offer (and even expand) this kind of library service to students and faculty, but if conditions become hard-pressed, then this will not be possible. And at the risk of sounding dramatic, I don't think I'm overstating the loss to the library and certainly to the school system if Janice Batts is let go as library secretary.

Sincerely,
Susan McFadd,

Reader supports Old Colony

To the Editor:

Today my husband and I took a ride through the "grand old historic square" in Hingham.

This note is in response to the article in the Patriot Ledger by Ms. Liz Bedell on Thursday's meeting of the proposed train service to Greenbush.

One ride through Hingham would convince anyone, the railroad if nothing more would clean up an ugly eye sore.

At least a half-dozen dumpsters, trash barrels and cars parked every which way plus wind blown trash all over the former railroad bed.

I find it hard to believe the people of Hingham would turn down the M.B.T.A. offer to build a 360 car parking garage to quote Ms. Bedell "because residents are accustomed to parking outside."

I feel there are a few vocal people in Hingham who have the N.I.M.B.Y. syndrome, they don't want trains in their back yard.

Poolside tips, garden hints

By Alix White
Special to the Mariner

Tip of the Week: Vinegar as a weed killer.

My lawn care specialist was poolside this week eliminating grass between the bricks of the walkway. She was concerned about using chemical herbicides where children would be walking in their bare feet.

Her solution: white vinegar in a squirt bottle sprayed directly onto the weeds and grass. It takes several days to work — just as the chemical herbicides do. It is just as effective, smells like tossed salad rather than chlorine, and is completely non-toxic.

Compost: Perhaps one of life's greater miracles in the garden is watching compost take shape. Think about it: we take an end of a carrot, some coffee grounds, leaves and grass clippings. We throw them in a pile; turn the pile several times during the year, and it always seems that by the time spring planting comes, the compost is ready.

I read about composting in "Organic Gardening," and thought it was a good idea. I remember a retired doctor who moved to Florida and couldn't grow anything in the sandy soil of his backyard — until he had compost. Then presto — there was his picture in front of his beautiful, lush garden.

That story really got me. I was moving all over the country then, but if I chopped a vegetable, its remnants went into someone's compost pile. I never really got to see the results of composting. I had resigned myself to thinking it was just a great way to get rid of fruits and vegetables which really stink when they start to rot in with the rest of the garbage.

It wasn't until we moved here that I had a garden in the same place for many years. It was hard pack clay and stones — just as all my other gardens were. Of course I had my modest compost pile, and I would gather up the stones and put them on the gravel driveway. I added manure to the compost to raise the temperature and speed things along, but my composting was never very scientific. Tomatoes and pumpkins always seemed to grow out of the pile (now I plant them there on purpose because the compost never seems to breed bugs or disease, but is hot enough to germinate seeds). By springtime, I've always had beautiful black soil where carrot tops used to be, and I spread the compost around the garden as needed.

Cohasset Agrees CARE to Recycle Everything

One early spring day, I had gone down to the garden reluctantly to fight my battle against the clay and stones. Was I surprised when I realized I wasn't fighting anymore. The rocks I used to pull out, had given way to pebbles, and the earth was getting softer — just like those testimonials in "Organic Gardening"!

Our family produces about two cubic yards of finished compost a year. That's including the addition of manure. It's really not a significant amount. Now that I'm hooked, I'm looking for a greater source. The Recycling Transfer Facility is a good place to start.

With the closing of the landfill, Cohasset has needed to do something with our grass clippings and leaves. Composting was the logical choice, especially when leaves, for example, can be 40 to 50 percent of municipal solid waste at the peak of the season.

We have been contributing our grass clippings (WITHOUT CHEMICALS) and leaves for over a year. Jack Hubbard, our representative from the recycling committee in charge of compost, says that the compost is ready! He has been taking its temperature and coordinating with John Barnes on turning the pile. This compost has been maintained in a scientific manner in accordance with the guidelines set out by the Department of Environmental Protection. It was also tested in July for any contamination. It was found to be safe. Hubbard recommends bringing a screen with us to the RTF and screening the compost of stones and branches before taking it home.

I'll be using the compost on my flower beds. I have an organic market garden so I am particular about what goes into my edible gardens. My guiding phrase in gardening is "toxics in — toxics out". While the compost was tested and found safe, simple observation tells me that so many of you use chemical lawn treatment that I have to assume that chemically treated grass clippings are getting into the compost pile. Hubbard, on the other hand, said that he would use this compose on his edible garden. The choice is the user's.

Compost adds fertility and good texture to your soil. Compost is a great teaching tool. I could go on forever, but then, I'd be keeping you from the RTF and your share of the compost.

Hochkeppel addresses CHS grads

By Zachary Hochkeppel

Zachary Hochkeppel
CHS '90

Welcome and good afternoon ladies and gentlemen, alumni and administration and, of course, the members of the Class of 1990. My name is Zach Hochkeppel and I am this this year's graduating class' salutatorian. Hmm...you know, I'm not sure that I really like the term salutatorian anymore. I mean there are thousands of salutatorians each year. In fact, two of my brothers were salutatorian for their respective graduating classes. That's three salutatorians in one family and you know I just think that's too many. I think I want something a little different, something more show business, more glitzy, more Vegas. In Las Vegas a comedian isn't just a comedian, he's a comedic stylist, a singer is a song stylist. I like that. I want to be a stylist. So ladies and gentlemen you are not going to hear simply a salutorian speech. No, you are going to witness the salutatory stylings of Zach Hochkeppel.

Anyway, in preparation for my speech, I read over speeches given by salutatorians of years past. All of them contained many similar elements . For the most part, they looked towards the future of the graduating class. Some of them noted how graduation from high school marked the entrance into the quote-unquote Real World, which begins with one's entrance to college. Now, I've visited colleges and I'm not so sure that that is the Real World. I wish it was, but unfortunately, I don't believe that it is.

Now, a wise man once said that "life is a series of collisions with the future," and you know I believe that this idea is more or less true. Along these same lines, I would compare the class of 1990 as passengers in one big car, let's say, oh I don't know, a beautiful 1979 Lincoln Versailles. This stately vehicle has been traveling along very smoothly so far throughout our young lives, yet to truly meet up with the future at all. But today, June 3rd, 1990, would probably be the first true accident into which we've gotten, our first collision with the future. One could say that we've hit a tree, Future's tree. There's some bumper damage, maybe a broken headlight, but besides that the car is fine. Later on, the entry into college, this supposed Real World, is another minor accident, perhaps a fender bender with Future's truck. The damage to the car is little more extensive, a little more serious. The insurance rates go up a little, but theres not enough damage to abandon the Versailles and get a new vehicle.

Now, upon the Cohasset class of 1990's graduation from college though, I foresee an awful accident. We just hit Future head on. Luckily, no one got hurt due to the wondrous safety options on the Versailles, but the car is absolutely wrecked. After the accident, the first major collision with the future, each member of the class decides to get their own cars and each goes their separate ways. And it is at this point that I see incredible damage occurring. I look upon the class of 1990 and I see a collection of awful drivers, just yearning to collide with future. Salivating for the chance to do something with their lives and the lives of others. Once these cats get into the true Real World, onto the super highway of life, there are going to be some huge pileups.

If I was going to give any advice to the class of 1990, it would be not to be too quick to get out of the Versailles. Don't be in a rush to get into the Real World. Just wait for your exit and at that time, you'll be ready to get on and get into some serious collisions with your future. I have been Zach Hochkeppel, Salutatorial Stylist. Thank you and good night.

CRC thanks Rotary Club

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Cohasset Recreation Commission and the 280 plus youngsters that we anticipate to take part in our summer day camp program, we wish to thank the Cohasset Rotary Club for its extremely kind donation.

Via a new account, Friends of Cohasset Recreation, we plan to expand programming, especially in the area of special activities and events. While the additional programming will be done on a self-supporting basis predominantly, this very thoughtful donation will allow us flexibility and latitude of fee charges on a per capita basis, afford us the ability to make commitments and when needed, afford us the capability to allow for any resident who might find fees a financial burden for one reason or another.

Rotary International is, of course, an organization well known for active community involvement on the local levels. Cohasset is indeed very fortunate to have a membership consisting of individuals who truly care about the quality of life and access to opportunity for their fellow residents.

Again, our most sincere gratitude to each of the members of Rotary for unwavering support and continued interest in our ability to serve residents.

Reader supports Town Clerk

To the Editor:

Right on Town Clerk Frances L. Marks.

The plus side of this fine situation is that the Town Meeting concept of "all the citizens" and the ease of fairness is diverted.

The cartoon accompanying the Town Clerk's letter was laugh-provoking. Perhaps another more appropriate version might be one showing "old Towser" holding five well-meaning Selectmen at bay (of the Animal Control Commission).

One of the goals was to raise money to solve the very minimum hours problem facing the professional Dog Control Officer. The other was to protect animals and to make owners more responsive to their needs.

We on the volunteer commission for this study were aware always of its low priority on the totem pole of town government. We did, however, approach the study — as animal lovers — with dedication. Liz Warren kept fairness always before us. She was the knowledgeable keyworker.

All of us — at times — may need understanding and special attention — but I doubt this action was justified.

It has been my understanding that, historically a Town Meeting law is the voice of the citizenry. The Town Clerk has to be supported — and her commitment to her position is a plus for all of us.

Osgood school bids farewell

To the Editor:

The children and staff of the Joseph Osgood School would like to express their appreciation to Mr. Jack Creamer, our beloved principal, for many years of dedication and service. All of us at the Osgood send our best wishes for a long and happy retirement. We wish that every child's name could appear individually because Mr. Creamer has been the kind of principal who took time to know each of the children personally.

Sincerely,
Osgood Teachers, Staff and

School news

Students hold picnic

This past week, the third graders from Osgood has a "Plant-A-Tree" picnic at the High School. They had been working toward a cleaner environment by picking up discarded cans for recycling. The proceeds from this effort yielded $170 which they used to purchase a beautiful Thundercloud Plum Tree which was planted in the High School Courtyard. Mrs. Atkinson, Alcott, Montuori and Schedeuser coordinated this effort with a Senior Class project to beautify the C.H.S. environment. This third grade tree is their gift as the future Class of 1999 — one they will enjoy watching grow, as they grow!

Farewell bid to Creamer

On Friday afternoon, June 8, the Osgood School students, teachers and staff bid farewell to Jack Creamer in a ceremony and party held on the side lawn of the school. According to Mr. Creamer, this was exactly what he wanted for his retirement party. A number of people spoke, including PSO representatives and teachers, expressing their appreciation and best wishes for the future. On behalf of the School, Grade 3 teacher, Mrs. Atkinson, presented a very special gift which represented "A piece of the School." It was a small table constructed by Mr. John Jacobucci out of old slate roof pieces from the school. Mrs. Lindsay Guilds and Ms. Linda Keller painted a picture of the school on the table top.

Creamer was the former principal of Deer Hill School and an educator in the Cohasset schools for a total of 36 years.

Third grader Jim O'Sullivan acted as emcee. The children gathered on the lawn to hear many people praise the retiring principal.

Rhonda Myers, Osgood representative for the PSO, thanked Creamer for being a supporter, mentor and friend of the PSO and their goals. The PSO donated a check to the John L. Creamer Scholarship Fund created by the Teachers Faculty Senate. This scholarship will be awarded to a Cohasset High School graduate each year. Members of the community are invited to contribute in celebration of Creamer's years of dedicated service c/o Cohasset Savings Bank.

Marion Atkinson, grade 3 teacher, presented the faculty gift of a table made from the original Osgood slate roof. Linda Keller and Lindsay Guild, Osgood parents and artists, painted a replica of Osgood on the table.

Dorothy Montouri presented Creamer with a certificate from the Board of Education for his 36 years of outstanding service.

The children all made cards, pictures and poems for Creamer. As the song "To Sir With Love" played, the children filled a basket in front of Creamer with their cards. Then they all yelled in unison, "We love you, Mr. Creamer!"

Although he was not prepared to speak, Creamer took a moment to thank the children, his voice crackling with emotion told them, "I guess you can see that you are never too old to cry." He expressed his gratitude for their moving ceremony and gifts.

All the children and faculty enjoyed refreshments and many children could not resist hugging the principal they will miss so much.

'Konohassett Day' planned

The Cohasset Historical Society's summer museum season at Cohasset center will begin on Saturday, June 16, featuring "Konohassett Day."

That afternoon from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. at the society's Capt. John Wilson House and Maritime Museum on Elm Street at the village center the society's newly restored 19th century hand-tub pumper "Konohasset" will make its first public appearance on Cohasset streets.

"Konohassett," an authentic 1850's horse or hand-drawn fire-fighting apparatus once was owned and operated by the town's Volunteer Veteran Firemen's Association and often was used in competition at "Fireman's Musters" in the South Shore area. The historic hand tub, missing from Cohasset for several decades, was returned to the town some years ago through the generosity of a private collector. Restoration of the antique machine has just been completed through the equal generosity of contributing donors. From 1911 through the 1920's "Konohasset" was a familiar sight on Cohasset's streets. In addition to its role as a competition machine the big mahogany and bright red hand-operated pumper served as a "backup" for the town's more modern fire-fighting equipment and is known to have been in action at one major fire in Nantasket. From the mid-1940's until 1977 "Konohasset" disappeared from Cohasset, to return in that year as a gift to the Historical Society.

For the past several months local craftsmen and artisans have been working to restore the appearance of the antique fire engine authentically recreating the many details of its design and replacing missing parts. "Konohasset" will be on view at the Historical Society's museums during their open house June 16. At the Maritime Museum there will be an exhibit of some photographs and memorabilia relating to the hand-tub pumper and early fire-fighting days in Cohasset.

This summer the Historical Society's two museums on Elm Street at the village center will remain open for their summer season each afternoon from mid-June through the end of September. Regular admission to the Capt. John Wilson House and the Maritime Museum is $1.50 per building for adults. For Historical Society members and their guests admission is free. Special rates apply for pre-arranged group tours of the museums.

"Konohassett Day," June 16, will be the traditional opening day open house at the Capt. Wilson House and Maritime Museum, and the general public is invited to view the two society museums without admission charge.

In the world of fire-fighting, hand-tub pumpers such as "Konohasset" once were first-line equipment. Today they represent a fascinating glimpse of an age now past, when men and their horse-drawn machines contested against the flames with feats of physical strength. June 16 marks the return to Cohasset of one such machine after an absence of nearly three quarters of a century.

Additional details about Cohasset Historical Society museums and activities may be obtained by contacting the society at 383-6930.

Kerry's t.v. show airs June 14

Summer reading club

This summer all Cohasset school children are invited to join us here at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library in the summer reading club. "Undercover Investigator". Famous reptilian detective Investi Gator will lead readers through mystery games, puzzles and activities while he clues them into good books.

Reading cards for recording the titles read on each person's own reading level may be picked up at the library. These cards must be endorsed by a parent. Those participants in grades 1 through 3 who read 20 books will be awarded a paperback book of their choice. Participants in grades 4 through 6 need to read 15 books for their paperback gift, and those in grade 7 and up need to read 10 books.

Once again this year there will also be a program for "Almost-Readers", those younger children who enjoy being read to or are just beginning to read themselves with help. These children will receive a booklet in which they can stamp in the spaces to chart their progress with the library's special Investi Gator stamp.

Dates of the summer reading program are June 18 through August 24. There is no registration required — just stop by the library and pick up your reading cards. All participants will celebrate with a party at the library at the end of the summer.

Garden Club grows hard work & talent

By Rosie Dole
Special to the Mariner

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset can sum up the secret to its success with three words: talent, dedication and hard work.

Ten happy delegates returned recently from the annual meeting of the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts with several Outstanding Achievement Awards. Attending the meeting were Helen Brady, Vivien Bobo, Barbara Christensen, Rosie Dole, Sandra Ford, Mary Ellen Harrington, Mary Hickey, Noel Manion, Jeanne Schneider and Annette Sechen.

We are proud to announce that our club was recognized with a State Public Relations Award for the Christmas House Tour with much of the credit going to co-chairmen Noel Manion and Arlene Ferreira; a State Publication Award for the second volume of our cookbook "Cohasset Entertains—Encore" (years ago volume one "Cohasset Entertains" was an award winner also), winning chairman was Jeanne Schneider; and participation in the Evelyn R. Cole Award which was presented to the South Shore District for outstanding leadership and performance by member clubs, as well as in a National Flower Show Award. This top award, the Green Rosette, was awarded to the South Shore District for "Earth, Wind and Fire" staged at the National Fire Prevention Headquarters in Quincy. Rosie Dole and Vi Farrell were members of the committee, Lee Androski was chairman of our blue ribbon entry, a seaside garden.

Junior gardener Whitney Cook received a citation for her entry in the Environmental Poster Contest.

And last but not least, the National Council of State Garden Clubs honored us with the presentation of the National Lucile Droege Mauntel Conservation Award for the Nature Trail project between the Osgood and Deer Hill schools. Applause goes to chairmen Margaret Cotter and Debbie Cook.

On April 22 people in Cohasset took time to celebrate the Earth's natural resources and show support for environmental concerns and solutions.

Tree plantings were encouraged by Earth Day organizers.

We are grateful to every individual or group for helping to establish this wonderful project. For more information, please call Regina Schultz at 383-0598.

Chiropractic for Health

SCIATICA

A case of sciatica is a painful experience in which pain radiates from the back into the buttocks and leg. This pain traces the route of the body's largest nerve, the sciatic nerve. It originates from nerve branches in the lower (lumbar) back, runs through the buttocks, follows the back of the thigh, and stops at the foot. The sharp pain in any of these areas is due to an irritation of the sciatic nerve at the point where it passes through the vertebrae or the pelvis. A disc between the appropriate vertebrae may also be the culprit. When the patient brings in the complaint of sciatica, the chiropactor concentrates his efforts in relieving pressure to the sciatic nerve in these areas.

Wherever your discomfort may present itself, chiropractic will strive to address the source of the problem and alleviate the discomfort. Chiropractic applications are helpful to every organ and extremity. If you have been experiencing discomfort, tension, etc., call DR. DEBRA M. TRANBERG, SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, 80 Front St., Scituate, 545-7388 and DR. SUSAN EMMER, CHIROPRACTIC & FAMILY WELLNESS CARE, 87 Sohier St., Cohasset, 383-1330. By appointment. Workers Comp. cases and most insurance plans accepted.

P.S. The sciatic nerve is as big around as the thumb.

Chatterton looks to the future of Cohasset sports

By David McKee
Mariner staff

With the formation of the new Pilgrim Conference and recent developments like increased user fees and the suspension of varsity football at Cohasset High School, athletic director Clark Chatterton is a busy man with many ideas on what the future of sports at Cohasset High School will hold.

BRINGING BACK FOOTBALL

One of the most important concerns for Chatterton, who has been athletic director since '76, is getting the football program back into swing.

"I've been involved with Cohasset High School sports since being a student in '51 and I'm very disappointed that we had to suspend the varsity football program," he said. "And the decision had nothing to do with winning or losing, it had to do with participation. We just didn't have the numbers. But I'm hopeful that we can hold things together and get varsity football back a couple years down the road."

He said that a full schedule of sub-varsity football will be played this year and that a homecoming game will be played with the sub-varsity.

"We have a lot of support for the football program especially from parents and the Grid-Iron club," he said. "So I know there is great interest. Football is just one of 17 sports, but the aspect of the homecoming and getting students together is vital for the school."

Despite the suspension of varsity football, Chatterton is proud of the success the Cohasset teams had this year.

"We always do well in the individual sports like gymnastics, tennis and golf," he said. "There are many talented players coming up through the town. Also our soccer program has had great success. What we are looking to do is improve in team sports. We have trouble getting the numbers in sports like hockey and football. Hopefully we can turn things around down the road. The hockey program was very close last year to being in the same boat as the football program. But we managed to get enough support."

DOUBTS ABOUT CONFERENCE

As for the new Pilgrim Conference, Chatterton has some doubts about what it means for Cohasset.

"We really fought it two years ago because it would put us against schools like Rockland and Scituate and they are powers in the South Shore Large League now. And we are the smallest school in the conference by far," Chatterton said. "I told the AD's that two years down the road they would look at the league and say 'what have we done'."

He also does not like the scheduling problems the conference brings in.

"We normally have a 14 game league schedule in sports like basketball and had room for six non-league games," he said. "Now we are locked into 16 league games against schools like Rockland, and that will be tough. Then in individual sports like wrestling and Hockey, schools like Abington, East Bridgewater and Hull don't offer the sports we do. We have an eight game schedule in gymnastics. And there are only six teams in our league for hockey."

He said that the teams will end up playing schools from the larger leagues in the Pilgrim Conference in non-league games to fill out their schedules.

BUDGET WOES AND USER FEES

Another problem for Chatterton and many other AD's is the constant cutting of the sports budgets and the advent of user fees.

Right now Cohasset has a user fee of $50 per student, per sport.

Chatterton looks to future...

"By the fall I estimate 95 percent of the high schools will have user fees," he said. "They are here to stay."

As for sports budgets being cut, Chatterton said, "I think sports is as important as any other aspect of education if you put it in its proper perspective. But it bothers me when sports and other extra-curricular activities are cut. People think that if the sports budget gets cut, you can go out and raise money outside through the boosters or whatever. But that's wrong. I've never heard of anyone going out to raise money for an English teacher that was cut."

Chatterton said that the sports program had to raise $40,000 this year to off-set budget cuts.

More than half came through the user fees. The other money must come through events such as the raffle being held June 23 at the Music Circus.

At that raffle, a first prize of $3,000, a second prize of $1,000, a third prize of a round-trip to Orlando, Florida and more than 20 other prizes will be given away.

"We have a fine tradition of sports here and have gotten great support throughout the town," Chatterton said. "I hope we can continue to keep that up. But it won't be easy."

Swogjan swimmers win

On Saturday, May 19 and Sunday, May 20, the Swogjan Synchronized Swim Club competed at the Jr. Olympic Championships held in Springfield.

The girls who competed brought home the following ribbons and results:

Dawn Meehan came in first in her Figure Competition. She also came in first in her Solo Competition.

Sarah Chase, Jennifer Butler, and Amy Christmas, who all moved up a level from their last meet where they competed as novices, came in the following places:

Jennifer Butler came in 17th in her Figure Competition. Sarah Chase came in 19th in her Figure Competition. Amy Christmas came in 21st in her Figure Competition. Jennifer Butler and Sarah Chase swam a duet which came in fourth in their competition and Amy Christmas and Dawn Meehan also swam a duet which came in sixth in their competition. We are all very proud of these girls who have come a long way since they began last September.

The Masters' Group also competed in this competition bringing home the following ribbons and results:

In their age group Figure Competition, Kathy Turner came in first, Sue Cullison came in second, and Michelle Bouche came in third. Ariel Stiles came in first in her age group Figure Competition. Ted Bennett came in first in his Figure Competition and in their age group Figure Competition Elizabeth McMullan came in first and Amy Hicks came in second.

Masters' solo results were as follows: Ariel Stiles, Ted Bennett, and Amy Hicks each came in first in their respective age groups. The two Masters' trios which swam each came in first in their respective age groups. The Masters' team routine came in first.

On Wednesday, June 13 at 7 p.m. the Swogjan Synchronized Swim Club is presenting their annual show. This year it is entitled: "Places in the Heart." All members of the Synchronized Team will be participating along with the members of the Synchronized Swim Classes held on Monday afternoons. All are welcome to attend this event. There is no admission.

The Synchronized Swim Team will then be competing in Sandwich on Sunday, June 17. This will be the final competition for the girls for this season.

The Masters' group will be practicing hard all summer to get ready for the Masters' National Meet which is being held in Portland, Oregon, this October.

Failed override spells trouble for conference

By David McKee
Mariner staff

A monkey wrench called Prop. 2 1/2 has been thrown into the alignment of the newly-formed Pilgrim Conference. And already before any games have been played, there's a change in the lineup.

The two high schools in Weymouth, Weymouth North and Weymouth South, have merged because of a budget cuts and Scituate High School, originally in the South Shore League, has been moved to the Atlantic Coast League to balance out the conference. (See accompanying chart)

MONEY CHANGES EVERYTHING

In May, the Pilgrim Conference got the final go-ahead from the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association after approval from all the conferences in Eastern Massachusetts.

Everything looked set for this fall's inaugural season.

But then last week, voters in Weymouth turned down a Prop. 2 1/2 override forcing the merger of Weymouth North and Weymouth South High Schools into one school, Weymouth High School. The thumbs-down on the override threw the Pilgrim Conference out of balance, and due to a league guideline, some reorganization was needed.

The league guideline in question states that there can be no more than a one-team differential in the set-up of each of the three leagues.

Because of the Weymouth merger, there were nine teams in the Old Colony League, eight in the Atlantic Coast League and ten in the South Shore League.

The athletic directors from the 27 high schools met last week and reached a compromise agreement.

It was agreed that Scituate High School would compete in the Atlantic Coast League in boys and girls soccer, football, boys and girls basketball, baseball and softball to balance out the Atlantic Coast League schedule.

In all other sports such as field hockey, cross country, golf, wrestling, track, gymnastics, tennis and hockey, Scituate will compete against teams in the South Shore League.

"I really don't know if it will be better in the long run," acting Scituate athletic director Bill Smith said.

"No one likes being the smallest school in the league, but we had no choice. The members of the conference voted to uphold what the by-laws say. And we had to go along. We would have been a little more competitive and happier in the South Shore League. But I think we will be right up there with the teams in the Atlantic Coast Conference."

PILGRIM CONFERENCE
SOUTH SHORE LEAGUE

School	Enrollment
Rockland	683
Norton	592
Hanover	580
East Bridgewater	573
Norwell	518
Abington	482
Carver	413
Hull	375
Cohasset	312

WEYMOUTH UNDER THE GUN

Weymouth athletic director Robert Donovan, said the failure of the override will put the newly created Weymouth High under the gun.

"We had a contingency plan with the override," he said. "But it is still too late. We have a tremendous amount of planning to do in combining the schools. We have three months to accomplish this transition. The town of Framingham, which is in the same boat as we are with an override failure, has a year and a half to merge their schools. We have three months. There is going to be a lot of work for us."

One of the tasks facing Weymouth High School is deciding on who will be the varsity coaches..

"It will be an open process conducted every year like it has in the past," Donovan said.

One positive aspect for the merger will be that Weymouth High will be one of the largest schools in the Old Colony League, whereas Weymouth North was one of the smallest.

"With Plymouth, we will be one of the largest schools in the league," Donovan said. "By next year, however, our enrollment will be around 1500 because we will be having a 10-12 grade figure. But we do go from being the second smallest in the league to the second largest."

THE GOALS OF THE PRESIDENT

Pilgrim Conference President and Silver Lake High School Principal Charles Thibodeau said that as of now there doesn't appear to be any more changes on the scale of the Weymouth merger for the new conference.

In fact he is looking forward to seeing the league get underway this fall.

"I think the conference provides each school with a great deal of security and they didn't have that before," he said.

Thibodeau said that the Scituate move was something that had to be done.

"We have guidelines to follow and we had to accommodate the teams from the Atlantic Coast League and keep everything balanced," he said. "It is unfortunate but if the override had passed things wouldn't have been changed."

Arts recognition night held

Colorful banners and a wall of signatures created by student artists decorated St. Stephen's Church hall May 23 for the Cohasset High School fifth annual Arts Recognition Night.

Over 200 students, parents and friends gathered to hear the high school teachers and young artists honored for their contributions to the community in drama, music, art, literature, dance and audio-visual arts.

Arts Boosters Co-Chairman Martha Equi praised high school teachers Ron Emmons, Colleen Foley, Colleen Lucas, Bryan Marks, John Packard, and Jo-Ellen Wood for their creative inspiration, dedication, and innovative collaboration. The Drama Workshop produced an original play by Ron Emmons and its State Drama Festival entry won awards for its young actresses and actors. Over 250 students were honored for their performances in the all-school musical "Bye Bye Birdie," at the Valentine Cabaret and Art Auction, at the Dance Repertory's Evening of Living Arts, at the Pops, in their original TV show, in SEMSBA and District music competitions and art exhibits throughout New England.

Art teacher Colleen Lucas presented The Boston Globe Scholastic Golden Key Art Award to celebrated cartoonist Dudley Bryant and Dr. John Packard recognized the high school production crew of "Video Time" for their honors received at Continental Cable's Golden Tape Awards.

Students applauded their peers for their achievements as individual and group performers, with special honors awarded Matt Silvia for Outstanding Senior in the arts and Kasey Smith for the Larry Fone award for graphic arts. The Arts Boosters presented the Undergraduate Study Award to Jen Plante for drama study at Choate this summer.

Students distributed their literary arts magazine Whispers and Shadows, filled with poetry, short stories and drawings. Additional copies are available at the high school.

Meg Gallagher, Cohasset High School principal, presented Outstanding Senior in the Arts Award to Matt Silvia.

OC Railroad finds support & opposition

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Residents are organizing to stop the railroad from coming to town. Last Friday a group of men, women and children took their protest into the streets with sound effects and banners.

The early morning protest attracted some attention as the group of 50 or so protestors concentrated on cost, noise, safety and pollution issues that they say are at the heart of their concern.

Meanwhile the state agreed to extend the public comment period another 30 days, which moves the new deadline to Aug. 2.

Just last week selectmen joined selectmen in neighboring Hingham in requesting an extension of the comment period. The local officials were looking for a 45 day extension.

While the protestors were visible Friday morning, the first sign of strong public support for the plan came Sunday as Dr. Edward Woods took a petition in favor of the Old Colony line to the town's recycling/transfer center.

Selectmen plan some action against tenants

By Alison Cohen

As the board of selectmen grapple with the issue of whether to evict tenants who have fallen behind in rent in a town-owned apartment, they are learning that eviction is a legal proceeding with very precise steps that must be followed "to the letter of the law."

The requirements vary depending on the type of eviction and the kind of tenancy. Simply put, a landlord can evict either "for possession" or "for non-payment of rent." There are slight variations depending on whether the tenant has a lease — a tenant for years — or is a tenant at will..

A landlord can evict a tenant at will for any reason or for no reason, except in retaliation for a tenant pursuing his legal rights.

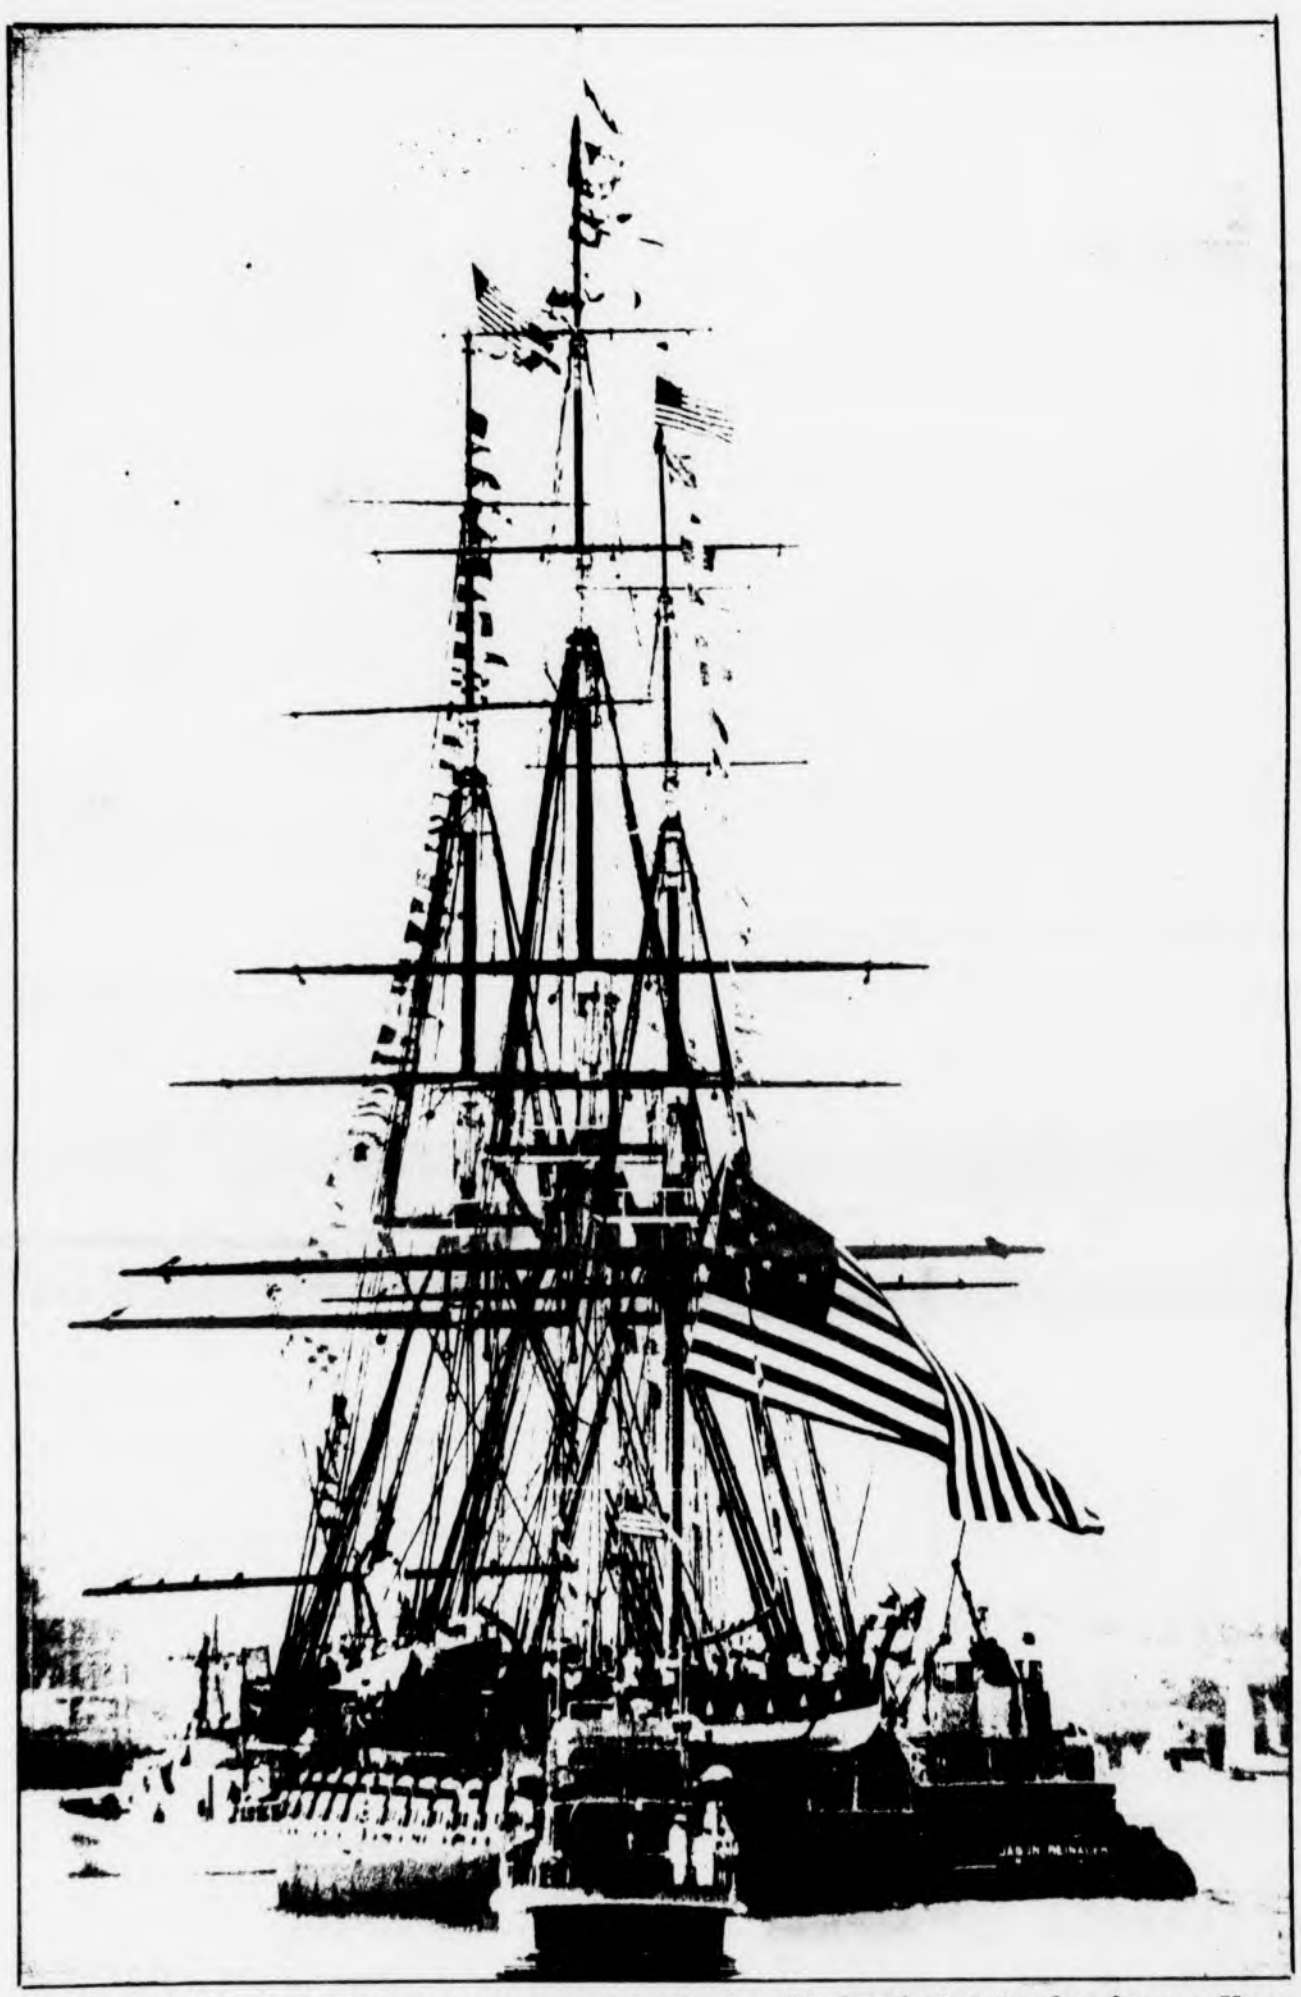
If the tenant has a lease, the eviction must be for some cause specified in the lease. The landlord must prove in court that the tenant "broke" his lease before the judge will grant the eviction.

An eviction is for any reason except non-payment of rent, the landlord must give the tenant a notice to quit for possession.

NOTICE TO QUIT FOR POSSESSION

The notice must give the tenant the same length of time as the rental period or 30 days, whichever is longer. The notice must be in writing and end at the same time as the rental period.

When the case goes to court, the judge may allow the tenant additional time to find another apartment. This is known as a stay of execution and judgment. It is available only to tenants fully paid up in rent. The judge may grant a stay of six months, or as long as 12 months for an elderly or handicapped tenant.



If there is a lease, it should also specify the kind of notice required, but the law stipulates that, at a minimum, a tenant is entitled to one rental period or 30 days, whichever is greater.

NOTICE FOR NON-PAYMENT OF RENT

The second type of eviction is for non-payment of rent. This is the most common reason for eviction.

Both tenants at will and tenants with leases are only entitled to a 14-day notice to quit. The notice

Minehunter sweeps Boston Harbor

The conflict in the Persian Gulf and the Straits of Hormuz demonstrated how easy it is for terrorists to lay mines. It is a lesson the Navy took to heart.

According to the Navy, although mines are easy to manufacture and deploy, they are extremely difficult to detect and dispose of. They have been used in every major conflict since the Russo-Japanese War of 1904.

If knowledge is power, the Navy intends to be all-powerful when it comes to mines.

On June 10, the Navy minehunter, CT-1, was "homeported" in Boston. The commander of the CT-1 is Lieutenant Commander William F. Malloy Jr., a Naval reserve officer from Cohasset.

Malloy graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy in 1980. He served aboard the USS McCandless and the USS Valdez and completed deployments to the Mediterranean, the North Atlantic, the Caribbean and Central America.

During his service, Malloy received several decorations, including the Navy Commendation Medal, Sea Service Ribbon with Bronze Star, Naval Reserve Sea Service Ribbon and Navy Expert Rifle and Pistol Ribbons. He is also a qualified Naval parachutist.

Malloy left active duty and transferred into the Reserves in 1988 to attend Harvard University where he received a Master's degree from the Kennedy School. He took over as Officer in Charge of Craft of Opportunity Mine Unit 2201 in June 1989.

The CT-1 is part of the Craft of Opportunity Program designed to provide protection to military and commercial shipping. The vessel is a reactivated Navy patrol boat converted into a minehunter.

In order to fulfill its purpose, the CT-1 will be outfitted with high tech side scan sonar equipment. Malloy's crew will map the ocean floor along the sea
